New York (UPI) - White House sources indicated Saturday that the office of President Nixon was considering acting on the FBI's request to authorize an interview with the "Plumbers." The steps toward releasing the interviews were expected to be completed Sunday.

The White House had sought to delay any action because of the need to lessen the effect of the release of the interviews on the Senate Watergate investigation. However, the source said that if the FBI request was not acted upon, the House investigating committee might demand the interviews as part of the Watergate investigation.

The FBI had requested the interviews with John Dean, President Nixon's former special counsel and the former White House aide to the President now under indictment in the Watergate case.

The FBI said the interviews, which were arranged by the 'Plumbers' (Brady, Lovitz, Kalb, and O'Brien), could provide "information that will be of value to the committee's investigation." The FBI said this information could also be relevant to the FBI's investigation of the Watergate case.

The interviews were not to be held in any police station, and the FBI said it would not conduct any of the interviews in any police station.

The FBI also said it would not conduct any of the interviews in any police station.

Quakers Take Brown, Yale; Clinch Ivy Tie

Harry Greenwald

Going into Saturday's squash match with Harvard, the Quakers were not lose less than one match in season thus far. After the Harvard 9-0 loss last weekend, the Quakers were at risk of being upset. As Harvard's Harry Greenwald states, "We thought they were going to win. We were at risk of being upset."

By BOB MCDONALD

Drew Greenwald

It was pleasant to see the Quakers take both Brown and Yale, but the real clinching of the Ivy League championship is the Easterns tournament which begins this week in Annapolis. Unlike the better days for the Quakers, and finally robbed Penn Swimmers, Fencers Swamped in Cambridge

Drew Greenwald

When a team has no easy set on its schedule, it is very difficult. But after the Harvard loss, the Quakers were on to Pennsylvania as they knew they would be there. "We went wrong somewhere along the line. I don't know how it happened, but they lost," said a member of the team. "We were at fault for our own loss," he continued. "The team is not as good as they were last year."

When asked about the season so far, a team member said, "We've had a few bad losses, but we're trying to get better." The team is currently at 5-1 in the Ivy League and looking forward to the upcoming Easterns tournament. "The Easterns are going to be a big test for us," said a team member. "We need to step up our game if we want to win."
