former U. Professor Denenberg Announces U.S. Senate Candidacy

By STEVE BIDDEL
Former Moravian professor Herbert W. Denenberg, who recently joined the faculty of Villanova University, announced Monday he will seek the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by retiring U.S. Sen. Harris Wofford.

"I'm running," Wofford said, "because of the need in Pennsylvania for a person who is dedicated to the people of the state and who will fight to ensure that our interests are represented in the federal government." Wofford's comments came in response to questions about his plans following the Nov. 3 election.

Looking Back

Proudly displayed at all official University letterhead is the inscription University of Pennsylvania, founded 1740. In fact, the Daily Pennsylvanian has been around since 1886. Of course the campus of the past is not always comparable to the University of today. Like the world around it, Pennsylvania has constantly changed with the times.

The Daily Pennsylvanian has tried hard, however, to change the changing moods of the campus. Students, faculty, and administration while juggling throughotty to survive, the DP has been active in seizing the more "rememberable" moments from the University's past.

Since Benjamin Franklin founded our institution, many famous persons have been associated with it at one time or another. Edna O'Ball, Andy Warhol, Bette Davis and Harold Prince, to drop a few names, were all undergraduates here. (Berger and Blue never graduated.)

Throughout the campus, however, there has been controversy but with the present DP and an able editor, the DP's first responsibility is to communicate the University's past.

Below are some notes from the decade of the '40s and hopefully reflect something of what the University was like way back then.

Wharton Man Captures Date With Hildegarde While 1000 Look On

Jack Flores, Wh 31, splashed his way through the "Date with Hildegarde Center" on Thursday with his interpretations of the various characters who were performing for the position of In-considerable.

The Inconsiderable Hildegarde broad shoulded up in a beautiful mask and wig along with an old friend, Dr. Clyde Roland of Mask and Wig fame.

The two spoke for a while and then Hildegarde, ever immaculately (and) sophisticated, simplified the already unthreatened Guy's in my soul, which is an Old Mask and Wig Song.

Dancing Classes

Dancing Classes Start Next Week at Houston Hall

For the second season of dancing classes sponsored by the Houston Hall Board of Directors, applications are now available at the information desk.

Classes will reopen for the second semester on Monday, February 3, and will be held in the same classes Monday through Thursday weeks at 7:30 P.M. in Houston Hall Auditorium.

Each session is composed under the faculty of William R. Few, Jr., who has an international reputation for his fine direction and manner of teaching. Miss Few is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and holds a B.A. degree.

Miss Few's classes are coordinated by Deme Warren, the head of the Mask and Wig chorus.

The Diehalls hold positions on the faculties of several well-known Eastern colleges in dancing director.

Letters to the Editor

Setting the Steaking Record Straight (Pupia Demonstrare)

In the 18th century, when the American colonies were first settling in, a young man from the North founded a colony in the South. The colony was named after the young man, and it quickly became one of the most successful colonies in the Americas.

In the 19th century, the young man's descendents continued to be one of the front-runners in the American political scene. This particular activity was not only a source of pride for the young man's family, but it also helped to establish the United States as a strong and independent nation.

During the past year, we have worked hard to improve our record by providing the best possible service to our customers. Our efforts have been rewarded with increased sales and customer loyalty.

Visitors to our website will notice a new feature that allows them to track their orders in real-time. This feature was added as a result of customer feedback and is designed to improve our service and the overall customer experience.

In addition to the new feature, we have also updated our website's design to make it more user-friendly. We hope that these changes will make it easier for our customers to navigate our site and find the information they need.

We would like to thank our customers for their support and for helping us to achieve these goals. We will continue to work hard to provide the best possible service and to make our website the best it can be.

Sincerely,

Ivy Comparison Study Shows That Penn Sports Facilities Only Average

BY DAWN M. HOLTZ

For All Penn is in a tug of war. Despite the Ivy League titles and the athletic accolades that Penn has earned, there is an acute shortage of court space on campus. This shortage is not unexpected, as Penn has one of the smallest athletic facilities in the league. Furthermore, the athletic facilities on campus are not as well equipped as those of other Ivy League schools. Nevertheless, Penn has maintained its position as one of the top athletic programs in the nation. This is due in part to the efforts of the athletic director, who has been working tirelessly to improve the athletic facilities on campus.

PRINCETON

With a basketball court in every dormitory, Princeton has been labeled as the “basketball capital of the Ivy League.” However, the athletic facilities on campus are not as well equipped as those of other Ivy League schools. Nevertheless, Princeton has maintained its position as one of the top athletic programs in the nation. This is due in part to the efforts of the athletic director, who has been working tirelessly to improve the athletic facilities on campus.

YALE

Yale has a reputation as the athletic capital of the Ivy League. However, the athletic facilities on campus are not as well equipped as those of other Ivy League schools. Nevertheless, Yale has maintained its position as one of the top athletic programs in the nation. This is due in part to the efforts of the athletic director, who has been working tirelessly to improve the athletic facilities on campus.

BROWN

Brown has a reputation as the athletic capital of the Ivy League. However, the athletic facilities on campus are not as well equipped as those of other Ivy League schools. Nevertheless, Brown has maintained its position as one of the top athletic programs in the nation. This is due in part to the efforts of the athletic director, who has been working tirelessly to improve the athletic facilities on campus.

CORNELL

Cornell is the only Ivy League school that does not have a basketball court in every dormitory. However, the athletic facilities on campus are not as well equipped as those of other Ivy League schools. Nevertheless, Cornell has maintained its position as one of the top athletic programs in the nation. This is due in part to the efforts of the athletic director, who has been working tirelessly to improve the athletic facilities on campus.

THE LEVY TENNIS PALACE

The Levy Tennis Palace, Princeton’s newest athletic facility, has been the scene of much student discussion this spring. Many have complained about the lack of court space available at the University community. The athletic director has acknowledged that the court space is insufficient and has promised to address the issue in the future.

The main complaint is that the court space is insufficient. Many students have been waiting in line for hours to get a court reservation. The court space is not only insufficient, but it is also poorly maintained. The courts are often dirty and the lines are not always clear. The lighting is also insufficient, making it difficult to play tennis at night.

The athletic director has promised to address the issue in the future. However, many students are skeptical and feel that the court space is insufficient. They believe that the University should invest more in the athletic facilities on campus.

SPORTS MEETING

There will be a meeting of the DP council to discuss the issue of court space. The meeting will be held at 8 P.M. in the DP council room. Attendance is mandatory.
