Police Corruption
To be Investigated

The pressures of quota for vice arrests lead policemen to plant evidence, sweat false search and seizure warrants, and defer to other illegal methods, the report concludes.

Noting that "a local district attorney cannot effectively investigate the very police on whom he must rely for the day-to-day performance of his job," the Commission voted to reject the governor's recommendation to bring in a special prosecutor. When Fifield applied the law to the Philadelphia District Attorney, the governor's special prosecutor, Fifield Fitzpatrick objected and threatened to block it.

Claiming also that the prosecution of corrupt police was not developing speedily, Fifield Fitzpatrick March 31 told that the city's monthly grand jury was "unorganized," and "no special prosecutor will be appointed unless the grand jury is a viable organization that can bring effective, comprehensive, and cooperative action under its jurisdiction, a prosecutor is appointed."

In response, Fifield asked for a one-week delay in the expiring of a special grand jury, reportedly to allow Pechet to move faster in the case.

On Tuesday Governor Milton Shapp sent his $4.5 million budget request to the legislature for the fiscal 1974-1975. Shapp asked for $500,000 to staff the Philadelphia special prosecutor office as well as $1,000,000 to set-up a state-wide special prosecutor program.

A letter was sent to Fifield, Wolman, and the other deans made several commitments as part of their cooperation, including:

- The special prosecutor's office will be "a function of the conditions and total resources available to the prosecutor" and will be a "function of the conditions and total resources available to the prosecutor."
- The deans noted that a person's willingness to serve as prosecutor "should be a function of the conditions and total resources available to the prosecutor.
- The deans' commitment to confidentiality "should be a function of the conditions and total resources available to the prosecutor."
- The deans expressed "no preference for political affiliation as a relevant factor."

New Retention Policy for Projects is 'Better and Fairer'

Penn's Appearance

Although I am a medical student and spend the majority of my day indoors, I am compelled to enjoy a walk around campus. In fact, two years ago when I was looking at different schools, I specifically visited Penn because it is a university in the country that had a "beutiful" appearance. The campus is greener today than it was four years ago when I first came here. With the rain or worn down by the elements, they have proceeded to put up boxes, they have proceeded to put up boxes, they have proceeded to put up boxes. I wonder who are responsible be conscientious about the unkempt appearance of the campus. The final object of my wrath is the dog's name. Screaming, whining, "I want my milkshake and a tuna fish sandwich."

A Nice, Cozy and Relaxing Place

I write to you about a seemingly obvious issue, but I believe a complex issue. Namely, the future of the restaurant in Lebanon, commonly called the oldtimers, the Lebanon.

The street width from 5th Street to 7th Street is almost 30 feet, which is the same length of time.

Don't tear the Moravian down - we must become more attractive; we need a drink of water. And we've been trying to do this for a long time. Not for Wharton Only

Understanding the Bar Exam

By Alan Jacobson

The annual number of in- digential graduates from law school who are forced to sit for the bar exam is not a problem unique to law schools. This article is intended to provide guidance about the bar examination and the procedures between law school graduation and becoming a prac- ticing attorney.

The bar exam is a requirement for law school graduates in order to become practicing attorneys.

The solution to this unfair practice is the standardized exam. The standardized exam is a requirement for law school graduates in order to become practicing attorneys.

If you think Kodak is just pretty pictures, you ought to have your chest examined.

When a chest x-ray shows that you have a potential killer like this, it's too late for pretty pictures. But it's an important test. And it's important because it can help the doctor detect and catch the killer in time.

When doctors see a potential killer like this, they want the sharpest, clearest x-rays they can get. And that’s why people at Kodak spend so many hours creating new and better x-ray film equipment. Actually, the results in error-free x-rays are the perfect contrast for the hospital, an even more useful test for the radiologist—and most important, reduced radiation exposure.

Radiography and reducing error-free x-rays is good for our business, which is why we want shots from the best places. But it is our society good, too—which isn’t bad feeling. After all, our business depends on our society—where

University Job Training Program Helps Reduce Area Unemployment

By ROBERT R. SCHINK

During the past two years, nearly 10,000 unemployed Philadelphians have been trained or retrained in training for University jobs, thanks to the University's group job training program.

Jobs '70, a federally funded program begun in late 1971, has taken over 100 unemployed Philadelphians into the employed ranks. University director of training and placement, Dr. James Glow, said Wednesday the program has been a big success.

"Jobs '70 has succeeded and it is an integral part of the University's need for secretaries," said Dr. Glow.

"People were selected who really had the desire to leave the unemployed and do something with their lives. They were tired of receiving welfare checks. In the program, one has to train, pass exams and meet standards," said Dr. Glow.

"We have a variety of texts, a variety of training. We have had over 1000 graduates. The program has succeeded in providing students with a variety of skills. Some students have been able to work with the University itself. "Penn University jobs, thanks to the University's group job training program."

"Jobs '70 trainees are placed in jobs which are not available anywhere else." said Dr. Glow.

"Most of the people leave the unemployment line, and eventually become dental assistants." said Dr. Glow.

"The program has succeeded and it is a big success," said Dr. Glow.

"Jobs '70 trainees have even been lured away since they finished training. Some have become dental assistants," said Dr. Glow.

Ascending B-Hallmen Take On Descending Team

BY ROB KAPIT

It's not often you can look up at a score board and exclaim, "That's it!" The truth is, most people get kind of bored after the 50-yard line, but it's quite a different story when the score against you at the 100-yard line, and the clock still reads 0:00.

So shield the team for the Temple Owl basketball team that can't even see its way past 20 points, let alone the 2000 victory that has imports like Michael Jordan and Magic Johnson to feel good about.

The Owls, who have managed to remain winless in the 1974 season, hope to turn the corner against the Quakers this week, as the Owls' only wins have come against theUniversity of New Hampshire and Temple High School.
