Future of Black Advising Sparks Admissions Fears

By ANNETTE LEVISON

Eight recipients of the Lindback Awards for Distinguished Teaching were announced yesterday by President Meyerson at a reception at his home. The Lindback Awards are made in recognition of outstanding teaching. The Lindback Foundation provides an annual grant of $1,000 to each recipient who has demonstrated "highest standards of scholarship and teaching" in any of the University's departments.

Candidates are selected by members of the faculty. The Lindback Awards are given separately in the medical, dental, and veterinary faculties, as well as in the arts and sciences.

The University is one of the ten institutions of higher education that receive the Lindback Grants each year. The Lindback Foundation was established in 1942 by the late Charles Lindback, an American businessman and philanthropist.

The Politics of Health

By Andy Rowland

Kern, a 17-year-old, went into the student health center yesterday for his yearly physical examination. wonders if he'll be fitter from this experience. The visit was recommended by his pediatrician as a precautionary measure for his overall well-being. However, Kern was not entirely satisfied with the outcome of the visit, as he felt that the doctor did not take his concerns seriously. The visit included standard physical examinations, blood tests, and a review of Kern's medical history. Kern felt that the doctor did not take his concerns seriously, and this experience left him feeling dissatisfied with the service provided.

The student health center is a critical resource for students, offering a range of services including vaccinations, STD screenings, and mental health support. Despite these benefits, there are concerns about the quality of care and accessibility of services.

Furthermore, the increasing costs and limited availability of health insurance for students can pose significant challenges. Many students lack adequate coverage, leaving them vulnerable to the impacts of unaffordable healthcare.

By exploring the role of institutions in the provision of health services, we can better understand the systemic issues and work towards creating inclusive and equitable solutions. The need for better policies and a more empathetic approach from healthcare providers is evident. This is a call to action for students, parents, and policymakers alike to advocate for improved access to quality health care and support systemic changes that prioritize students' well-being.

Frosh-Fetti

The Frosh-Fetti hit was an attack to win ballgames. In the first game, however, the frosh could only come up with four hits, while the Lion hitters were able to collect eight. Besides against the Quakers also committed three costly errors which gave Columbia five of its runs. Penn's right-hander Tony Elefante, who gave up four runs before being relieved, was bailed with the loss.
In the second game, the frosh hats came alive as they reached the Columbia pitching staff for thirteen runs on eight hits. The big inning for Penn proved to be the third, as they delivered a bases-loaded double which scored three runs and broke the game open. First baseman Kd Mactas continued his hot hitting, as he accounted for two hits and two RBIs.

The big story of the game was the pitching of Jim Walther. In his first outing against Camden County Community College, Walther walked six straight batters and had to be relieved in the first inning. Saturday things were a little different. Walther walked only one batter while striking out seven en route to picking up the complete game win. Quaker Coach Bill Wagner cited Walther's "night and day improvement" as the most satisfying aspect of the game.

Penn Paces Past Columbia, Princeton, for Child's Cup

By R. A. SMUCKER

Everything went as previously planned. The finale of the Penn baseball team’s 1974 season could not have been scripted any better as the Quakers split the last two games of the Ivy League series, which culminated with a 3-2 win over the Big Red in the last game. Penn won the opener, 3-2, in 8-1/2 innings as Melvin G. Bates pitched a one-hit shutout. The Quakers won both games with the aid of a pitcher’s duel, scored in the first game by the Big Red, and were held to one run by the Big Red in the second game. The Quakers’ 15-2 overall record is the best in school history. The Quakers finished the season with a 12-0 record in Ivy League play, and were crowned champions of the Ivy League.

Penn baseballers Split; Return to Beat Army

BY DAVID McCLELLAN

Penn went 4-1 in the second half of the season and 3-0 last week. The Penn baseball team lost to Michigan in the first quarter as the frosh mid-fielders were prevalent throughout the game. We were a little rough, everything went the wrong way. The Quakers had to make mistakes which led to costly errors in the first game. The Penn baseball team was described by skipper Bob Seddon, “so we have to say we played pretty lousy.”

Frosh-Fetti

Friday night’s Penn-Frosh vs. Naval Academy game was a little rough. The Frosh (2-3) were at a disadvantage against the Navy Prep (4-0), but they showed a lot of spirit and determination.

Quakers Sweep at Queen’s Relays; Raab Breaks Meet Mark

By ED WEST

JAMAKA, N.Y. — Only the presence of blue skies and calm conditions differentiated this year’s Queens-Slims Relays from those of the past three years as the Quakers scored six out of 10 events in the Queens-Slims Relays. The Quakers won the weekend’s final event, the 4x400-meter relay, for the fourth time in the past five years. The Quakers also won the first event, the 4x100-meter relay, for the first time in the past five years. The Quakers won four events in the past five years.

Travelling Netmen Down Mediocre Big Red, Cadets in League Action

By A. J. FREDERICK

Last Saturday’s meeting of the Penn and freshman baseball teams was a series of blowouts with the Big Red. The Quakers came on strong in the first game of the series, but were held to one run in the second game. The Quakers have a record of 15-2 overall, and are the champions of the Ivy League.
