More Financing Sources Sought For HUP Extension Construction

By EILEEN O'BRIEN

Additional sources of financing are being sought for construction of the University Pavilion, the cost of which is now expected to run between $115 and $120 million. Executive Director of Hospitals Mark Levitan said Wednesday that the cost overruns are "not due to inefficiency of HUP's research and emergency facilities, but are due to a financial squeeze." Levitan forecasted a focused on the late 1970's, when the cost estimate was $60 million. The "maximum estimate" of the value of the property is $67 million, the report said.

In a report to the Hospitals Administrator of Baltimore University, the states projected that the campus would be able to pay back the cost of the hospital facilities in about 10 to 20 years. Levitan said there have been no decision on whether to make formal application to the Authority for a loan. The "process will have to be initiated if the University is to carry this much debt." Financing costs are expected to rise with the addition of construction and equipment expenses.

Application has already been filed with the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania for almost 10 years, but there had been no decision on what the interest rate would be. The report submitted in response to requests from the Authority, stated $67 million of the total has not been received.

According to Levitan, the Authority's deputy executive director for administration, said Thursday that his agency is committed to making contributions to the hospital facilities for the Pavilion. "We must have a commitment to the hospital facilities for the Pavilion," he said.

The University Pavilion should become the "heart" of the campus and attending classes might be "a very good idea for students," he added.

"Building a new hospital for the Pavilion will "consolidate" the room change between the schools and the students," he said.

"We must have a commitment to the hospital facilities for the Pavilion," he said.

WOMEN STUDIES OFFICE REVAMP

Vetered by Dean

By LU ANN RAINBOW

College for Women Dean, Joan Ledwell, who had revolutionized the office of College for Women, has been named dean of Women's Studies. Under the proposed, all staff members of the Office of Women's Studies would have shared duties and responsibilities, and would have the overall management of the office.

Program coordinator and board member Elise Conger said that those interested in Women's Studies would become the advisor for a potential women's studies class.

According to Residence Office administrator Mary Lieermann, only four freshmen undergraduate housing, said that they would be "a very good idea for students," he added.

"Building a new hospital for the Pavilion will "consolidate" the room change between the schools and the students," he said.

"We must have a commitment to the hospital facilities for the Pavilion," he said.

Penn's 27-20 victory over Lehigh (2-0) Saturday Sept. 28
Penn coach Gamble said, "they've got a lot of questions to be answered quickly by us. To be sure, we're not going to have a problem in that department."

Rowan also was encouraged by the way the Quakersfigure to touch the ball at least a couple of times, and when they do, they’re going to be ready for a smashing debut of the Marty Vaughn show, with his unique combination of physical demands on Franklin Field rug. The Quakers are going to keep the ball a few more times.

The team’s veterans are on the offense. The Blue starters would certainly help ease the pressure on the freshmen. Abortion: Right or Wrong?

By Grant Hansesian

A year ago today—The Daily Pennsylvania Report.

The Pennsylvania Report was published today. It was the "law school's" responsibility to provide a forum for a free exchange of ideas. The school was committed to the principle of free speech and the right to express one's views, even if those views conflicted with the majority opinion. The report was circulated among the law school students, faculty, and staff.

Law School Announcement

The Law School announces that a series of law school-related events will be held over the next few weeks. These events include a panel discussion on the legal implications of the Roe v. Wade decision, a lecture on the history of abortion law, and a workshop on writing effective memoranda and legal briefs.

Law School Policy

The Law School has adopted a new policy to ensure the confidentiality of student records. This policy is designed to protect the privacy of student information, including academic and personal data, and to ensure that such information is not disclosed without the student's consent.

Law School News

The Law School has announced that it will be hosting a series of guest lectures throughout the semester. These lectures will cover a range of topics, including legal ethics, intellectual property, and international law.

Law School Activities

The Law School has organized a variety of activities for students, faculty, and staff. These activities include a welcome reception, a legal writing workshop, and a retreat for faculty members.

Tech Hifi lowers
getting high.

While the cost of almost everything else keeps getting higher and higher, Tech Hifi has managed to actually lower the price of getting high fidelity.

It doesn't involve magic, or even wishful thinking. Just a lot of hard work on the part of our buyers. They've been able to arrange a number of special deals on some great high fidelity equipment.

So if you've never owned a good system, we can introduce you to the exciting world of high fidelity for remarkably little money. How does $159 for a good, brand-name, four-channel-ready stereo system sound? Or only $239 for a great little receiver system with KLH loudspeakers. And the systems sound even better than the prices do! But these are just the beginning. During Tech Hifi's back-to-school sale we're lowering the price of high fidelity all across the line!

Even though this is a special sale, we're still providing Tech Hifi's seventeen customer satisfaction guarantees with each system. These include a seven-day money-back guarantee, ninety-day 100% trade-in, and sixty-day exchange for defective units.

Come in for the full story. Even if you don't buy anything, we'll give you a 'Get High' button, or a Tech Hifi flyer (it's like a frisbee, except it's a freebee), or maybe even a packet of deluxe rolling papers!

Just come in and say "high."
Lend us your ears.

In preparation for the Economic Coalition vote on the new program this year, it's called "Budget and Marketing." The student association approved the new program last spring. This fall, the marketing and budget sections have been revised. The budget section deals with finances, while the marketing section deals with advertising and public relations.

The new program includes a new budget section that focuses on financial planning and management. The marketing section has been expanded to include new courses in advertising and public relations.

The new program also includes a new course in statistics and econometrics. The course will be offered in the fall and spring semesters and will be open to all students.

In addition, the new program includes a new course in decision-making and entrepreneurship. The course will be offered in the fall and spring semesters and will be open to all students.

Overall, the new program is designed to provide students with a strong foundation in economics and to prepare them for a variety of careers in the field.

Army May Appeal Calif. Ruling

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Solicitor General Benjamin R. Civiletti has announced the Army's official request that the U.S. Supreme Court review the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals' decision upholding a lesser sentence for William L. Cullen, a former captain of the U.S. Army's 1st Infantry Division.

The Army has indicated it will appeal the court's decision, which reversed the conviction of Captain Cullen, who was found guilty of desertion in 1965. The court said Cullen's sentence should have been no more than the maximum sentence allowed by law.

The Army has argued that Cullen's sentence should have been longer because he had/courseed his desertion.

The case is significant because it involves an issue of national security policy. The Army has consistently maintained that desertion during a time of war is a crime punishable by a lengthy sentence.

The Army has also argued that Cullen's sentence should have been based on the severity of his desertion, which the court found to be minimal.

The Army has further argued that the court's decision would undermine the military's ability to deter desertion during times of national crisis.

The case will be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court, which will hear the case in the fall.

Campus ROTC Enrollment Shows First Recent Rise

By BILL ROGASNER

After two years of declining enrollment, the University ROTC program has seen a marked increase in new enrollees. In fact, the program has seen its highest enrollment in five years.

Enrollment in Army ROTC at the University is up 60 per cent over last year, with 690 students currently enrolled. This is the largest number of students to enroll in the program in five years.

The increase in enrollment is due to a variety of factors, including a change in the attitudes of this year's freshmen, a "view the military" program initiated by the community, and increased support from the university administration.

"Students are more interested in military careers than ever before," said Colonel John Collins, a transfer student from Rice University, explained to the University students who were "very pleased with the value of ROTC programs in their lives.

Tax Reductions Challenged

Nelson A. Rockefeller, governor of New York, has announced that he will appeal the court's decision upholding a lesser sentence for William L. Cullen, a former captain of the U.S. Army's 1st Infantry Division.

The court's decision reversed the conviction of Captain Cullen, who was found guilty of desertion in 1965. The court said Cullen's sentence should have been no more than the maximum sentence allowed by law.

The court found Cullen's sentence to be excessive, but the Army has decided to appeal the decision.

The case is significant because it involves an issue of national security policy. The Army has consistently maintained that desertion during a time of war is a crime punishable by a lengthy sentence.

The Army has also argued that Cullen's sentence should have been based on the severity of his desertion, which the court found to be minimal.

Booters Welcome Weaker Colgate

By ROB PAGE

Last Tiwday Penn's nationally fifth ranked team discovered that it is not easy to win a game without goalkeeping, and six starting forwards to boot. In the first half, the Quakers were unable to score, and the Engineers, who had only six attempts on goal, pulled away to a 2-0 lead. But in the second half, the Quakers were able to score three goals, and the game ended in a 3-2 victory for Penn, continuing their unbeaten streak of 14 games.

Harriers Face Lehigh, La Salle Tomorrow

By JOE BARKS

For those looking for a way to beat the fall blues, La Salle tomorrow will provide a bit of relief. The meet will be the first official run for the Penn harriers, and the runners will be looking to prove their abilities. Penn's cross country team, and the harriers in particular, should be strong this season. Freshman Mike Covert's squad would still have to be a troup of Kenyan track stars.
