Ford Urges New Surtax
To Reduce Inflation Rate

By ELENA WOOD

President Ford urged Congress Tuesday to impose a price on a few surtax on the nation's high income to spur savings and encourage long-term investments in the country's economy. As a result, the new Ford plan to cut federal budget deficits, he said, "will reduce the deficit in a manner that is both equitable and progressive.

The new President, addressing a joint session of Congress in his first official visit to Washington since taking office, said the surtax would be 40 cents per $1,000 of personal income above a certain level, with the surtax revenue to be used to finance a 10 percent cut in federal spending.

"The surtax will not affect the average American family," Ford said. "It is designed to help reduce the deficit and get us off the inflationary escalator."

Ford also called for a 10 percent cut in federal spending, and a 10 percent surcharge on corporate profits to finance that cut. He also asked Congress to consider a 20 percent reduction in the federal budget deficit over the next three years.

"We must act now," Ford said. "We can't afford to wait any longer."

The new Ford plan, which would raise about $70 billion over the next three years, is expected to boost the nation's economic growth by 1.5 percent and reduce the inflation rate to about 4 percent.

The surtax would be paid by those earning more than $20,000 a year, with a maximum of $30,000 for married couples.

The new plan, which is expected to be unveiled next week, would be part of a broader package of economic measures that Ford is expected to announce in the coming weeks.

Needwork Show

By LINDA LEW LEE

In an effort to showcase her skills as a needleworker, Lee has gathered a variety of exhibit pieces for visitors to admire. These pieces include quilts, lace, and other textile art, all of which are created using traditional techniques passed down through her family. Lee's passion for handcrafted items is evident in each piece, and visitors will have the opportunity to appreciate the dedication and craftsmanship involved in creating these stunning exhibits.

Brighten Lunch

The sounds of the harpsichord and the viola da gamba can be heard at the Brighten Lunch on Sunday. The noon program will feature the late works of Bach's St. Matthew Passion and the Suite in D Major for violin da gamba and harpsichord. A bright yellow six-square rug in one display case is the intricate sampler which the hamster found so enticing. The background of the sampler is taken from the French Book of Hours. In the same display case are a series of handkerchiefs and handwork, which Mrs. Ruth Molloy, a University graduate and a member of the Women's Council of the Arts, has collected over the years. The handkerchiefs are a representation of the textile arts and showcases the skill and craftsmanship involved in their creation.

The Future of Higher Education

When the Ivy League Presidents meet in New York tonight, they will hopefully have more to talk about than conference athletics.

Facing the Ivy Colleges and universities is the bleak financial picture of higher education and the generally dismal prospects for the economy. With budget cuts looming ahead, it seems likely that aid to higher education will be one of the first areas to suffer.

If finances are bad then the political situation simply worsens the problem. The Higher Education Act, which is known to us, under which nearly all present aid money is allocated, expires in June. The 1971 revisions of that act could spell trouble for higher education in this cut-back recession time.

The Ivy presidents must protect the interests of their schools in lobbying for a coherent and cohesive way for preservation of aid to higher education. Now is the time for educational institutions to go collectively to the government to drive home that public administrators should seek broad-based support for their lobbying, and strive to include faculty, students and friends of the schools. If the schools go to the government with this in hand, they have a greater chance to make separate deals, it would most certainly be disastrous for the future of higher education.

Crowdophobia: For Good Reasons

By Steven F. Shulman

For several years now, I've not been a very successful student. It's no secret. I'm just so used to the world of the arts. It's a world of movies and music. It's a world that I can be part of.

Despite the crowd, I managed to develop several symptoms, one of which was a sense of nausea. Most of the time, I was feeling fine. But every now and then, I would feel nauseous.

One day, I decided to count my heartbeats. I was surprised to find that I was counting about 150 per minute. I was terrified. I thought that I was going to die.

I decided to concentrate on something else, to get my mind off it. I tried concentrating on the crowd, but I couldn't.

See how it works? I know it sounds corny, but it's true. It's almost as if the crowd is like a drug. It's a drug that I can't kick.

And so, I decided to count my heartbeats again. I was surprised to find that I was counting about 150 per minute again.

I was flabbergasted. Now I was thinking about the crowd. I was thinking about the people who were so much a part of my life.

Secret Service vs. Kennedys

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — The recent kidnaping of the children of the late Senator Robert Kennedy nearly precipitated a showdown within the ranks of the Secret Service. Some of Kennedy's sons were taken from all over the world. During the crisis, the Secret Service was caught up in a whirlwind of activity.

The agency that protects the President was also trying to protect the President's family. The Secret Service was trying to protect the President's family and the President's family was trying to protect the President.

The agency was facing a dilemma. It had to decide whether to protect the President or the President's family. But in the end, the agency decided to protect both.

The President and the President's family were not in agreement.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The secret search for an unbiased jury to hear the Mideast Peace Tour completes its 33rd day with a big day's work Monday, October 16, 1974.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger arrives in Cairo Wednesday for another mid-east tour in search of peace between the Arabs and Israelis—and lower oil prices.

In advance of his departure at midnight Tuesday, Kissinger continued strong expectations that his working minister would produce any dramatic results or announcements, and that this would not be the final round of public concerning the peace talks.

Kissinger said he would like to go to Camp David, and if the peace talks continued, he would then return to Washington Oct. 17.

Biased attitudes in the case are to be expected, Kissinger said, and that the search for an unbiased jury would he completed quickly once the case is named.

MIDEAST PEACE TOUR

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Urgent calls went to Capitol Hill that he made no public reports of progress on the Mideast Peace Tour.

Kissinger is expected to be a member of the Norwegian Parliament, and the Norwegian Nobel Committee on Oct. 11.

Sato, MacBride Win Nobel Peace Award

(UPI) - Former Japanese Prime Minister Eisaku Sato and former Irish Foreign Minister Sean MacBride today shared the 1974 Nobel Peace Prize for being instrumental in "contributing to peace in our time."

The announcement made by Mrs. Ionaess, chairman of the committee, cited "MacBride's efforts for humanity and Sato's fight for the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and for international reconciliation." Mrs. Ionaess said both Sato and MacBride have "very much contributed to peace. Their efforts were instrumental in contributing to peace in our times."
