It is about how the Rockefeller family has benefited from the image of Senator Goldwater."

The book, titled "The Rockefeller Legacy," is scheduled for release next month. The group has also been involved in several legal battles with the senator, including a successful challenge to his campaign financing laws.

State Legislature to Pass On Lowering Drinking Age

WASHINGTON—The state legislature is expected to pass a bill in the near future that would lower the legal drinking age from 21 to 18. The bill, sponsored by Representative John Doe, a Democrat from County, would make the state the first in the country to lower the drinking age. The current law, which was enacted in 1972, is seen as discriminatory and has been challenged in court. The proposed legislation would eliminate the age difference between males and females, who have been granted the right to vote and hold public office since 1920.

John Doe, the sponsor of the bill, said, "This is a common-sense measure that will help to prevent underage drinking and promote responsible consumption. It is also a reflection of the values of our state, which has always been at the forefront of social progress."

The bill is expected to pass with strong support from both Republicans and Democrats. However, it may face challenges from voters who are concerned about the impact on public safety and the potential for increased crime. The bill will be considered by the House and Senate, and is likely to be signed into law by the governor.

Final Appeals Against Jails, Prisons Remain

WASHINGTON—The federal court system is expected to hear final appeals against a series of prison and jail sentences. The appeals, filed by several defendants who were convicted in recent federal court trials, challenge the legality of the sentences and the conditions of confinement.

The appeals are expected to be heard by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. The court is known for its strict interpretation of the law and has frequently overturned convictions and sentences in recent years. The court has a record of fairness and impartiality, and is widely respected for its expertise in constitutional and criminal law.

The defendants in the cases are seeking to overturn their convictions and sentences, which range from several months to several years. The cases involve a variety of criminal offenses, including fraud, theft, and drug trafficking. The defendants argue that they were not adequately represented by their attorneys and that the sentences were excessive.

The court is expected to hear arguments from both sides and to issue its decision in the coming weeks. The outcome of the appeals could have significant implications for the criminal justice system, and could set new precedents in the treatment of federal cases.

Like law schools, most medical schools subscribe to a unified application service, the American Medical College Application Service (AMCAS). For a $30 fee, AMCAS will admit resumes to five medical schools. For an additional $30 for each additional school, students must pay $31. These fees do not include the MCAT fees, which are also charged by the schools themselves.

For students applying to several schools, waivers can be arranged for AMCAS, ACAS, and some schools. However, says Rasmussen, “students pay $31. These fees do not include the MCAT fees, which are also charged by the schools themselves.

Zemsky Resumes Post As Meyerson's Aide

By MARK COYLE

Associate Professor Robert Zemsky has resumed his dual role as special assistant to President Meyerson and faculty member in the American Council on Education department.

Zemsky, who as a special assistant two years ago helped organize the University Development Committee spent last year pursuing post-doctoral studies in linguistics. He had received a grant from the Social Science Research Council.

As special assistant for planning studies, Zemsky will prepare a series of reports concerning budget priorities, student enrollment, faculty development, and the integration of student data. The reports, Zemsky explained Monday, will attempt to set guidelines for future University planning by assessing the probable effects of different policies.

Zemsky said his current position is not the same as the one he held previously. He now has his own staff, he said, whereas in the past he had to do a great deal of work for the President himself.

His work on the planning studies, Zemsky said, does not interfere with his teaching or research. He noted that his current position is a "gift" by President Meyerson, whereas in the past he had to do a great deal of work for the President himself.

"We have a lot of options and we can play an aggressive game," Hubley added.

"I think we can play an aggressive game because we have a lot of depth in our lineup," he said.

"But we can't be too overconfident. We have to remember that we have to play our best game every time," Hubley said.
