Four-College Cooperative Program Lures Few Students to Main Line

In ED D’ANGELIO

Five University students enrolled last semester in Bryn Mawr, Haverford, Swarthmore and Haverford cooperative exchange courses this fall.

Although all courses offered by these schools are open to students at each school, two groups of students take advantage of the small number of University students in exchange courses this year.

The largest number of students from Bryn Mawr, Haverford, Swarthmore take courses in the French Studies program, which is available at those schools. The Haverford College's office of Placement placed the usual number between four and right.

There are currently 32 unregistered students in the three schools enrolled in University courses. The University's lowest bid, Merriman's suit alleges, just makes GSA part of the deception.

As is true for the University, the Bryn Mawr students are currently enrolled, almost all in Oriental Studies. The office of Placement is the only one to students can take Exchange of China, "the explained.

Margaret Beckman, assistant to President Meyerson, said Tuesday it is most likely for students from other schools to come here for the summer. Having a university, or a more course in a university would allow students to participate in the University's programs.

The cooperative program has existed for a number of years on the graduate level. Painter said, has begun upon several courses in non-graduate subjects. It is too just an arrangement, not an established college program, she explained.

News in Brief

CoalStrike Negotiations Continue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Coal Industry negotiators, meeting with labor officials, discussed Wednesday a tentative settlement agreement reached the previous night. The agreement could lead to a deal as early as next week. The negotiators met in Washington where they were expected to reach an agreement by Friday. They also discussed plans for further negotiations, which will be held this week. The talks are expected to continue for another day at least.

The following is excerpted from the Undergraduate Education Report submitted by the Vice-President's Office as part of the University's annual review by the Middle States Association, Accreditation Commission.

The report makes no attempt to be comprehensive. It sets down in one single point some of the issues about which we are concerned, with the intention of setting our priorities and goals, and in the hope of stimulating interest and action on the part of those of us who are or are interested in the University's educational programs.

The report is divided into three major sections: the University's primary educational programs, the University's financial situation, and the University's personnel situation. The University's primary educational programs are further divided into the College of Arts and Sciences, the College of Business Administration, the College of Education, the College of Engineering, and the College of Law.

The University's financial situation is discussed in terms of the University's budget, the University's financial aid, the University's endowment, and the University's capital projects.

The University's personnel situation is discussed in terms of the University's faculty, the University's staff, and the University's students.

The report concludes with a summary of the University's current situation, and a statement of the University's future goals and priorities.

Problems and Concerns of the University

The University is currently experiencing a number of problems and concerns, which are discussed in the following sections.

The University's primary educational programs are currently facing a number of problems and concerns. The College of Arts and Sciences is facing a number of problems, including a decline in enrollment, a decline in the number of faculty members, and a decline in the number of graduate students.

The College of Business Administration is facing a number of problems, including a decline in enrollment, a decline in the number of faculty members, and a decline in the number of graduate students.

The College of Education is facing a number of problems, including a decline in enrollment, a decline in the number of faculty members, and a decline in the number of graduate students.

The College of Engineering is facing a number of problems, including a decline in enrollment, a decline in the number of faculty members, and a decline in the number of graduate students.

The College of Law is facing a number of problems, including a decline in enrollment, a decline in the number of faculty members, and a decline in the number of graduate students.

The University's financial situation is currently facing a number of problems and concerns. The University's budget is currently facing a number of problems, including a decline in revenue, a decline in the number of students, and a decline in the number of faculty members.

The University's financial aid is currently facing a number of problems, including a decline in the number of students receiving aid, a decline in the number of faculty members receiving aid, and a decline in the number of graduate students receiving aid.

The University's endowment is currently facing a number of problems, including a decline in the value of the endowment, a decline in the number of students receiving aid, and a decline in the number of faculty members receiving aid.

The University's capital projects are currently facing a number of problems, including a decline in the number of projects, a decline in the number of faculty members involved, and a decline in the number of graduate students involved.
Student Recalls Greek Celebration After Collapse of Military Regime

By STEVE EIDENBERG

"Total strangers would walk up to you in the street and hug you."

That's how CS major Perry Tasca recalls the mood of Athens after seven years of military rule ended last July. She was one of a number of University students who witnessed the events surrounding the Turkish invasion of Cyprus this summer and the subsequent return to civilian rule in Greece.

PITTS said the greatest difference between the rule of Constantine Karamanlis, the current Greek head of state, and the previous military junta was "hearing people discuss politics," which some Greeks had been afraid to do under the old regime. "It was as if on everybody else in the nation was against the government," she said.

Warrant officer Yiannis Filippos, a Greek citizen who served in America during the summer and said the new government is a "relief," even though newly appointed Prime Minister Karamanlis is "he cons.

When he served in the Greek army from 1967 to 1969 as a conscript, Filippos said, he would have fought for the military regime. "I didn't know any better," he said. The junta had since decided the civilian government in "the interests better" than stay at the colony.

"At Agia Sophia, a college student who usually has his coffee at Georgia, said the Greek people welcomed the return to civilian rule in July. "I was as glad as everybody else," he added. He said he believes the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency supported the military junta, adding that the American government could have stopped the Turks from invading Greece. "I think the Americans gave the Turks every opportunity to continue the war," he said.

"The situation is better than a real relief," Tasca added, "but the U.S. is always the threat of war with Turkey.

A number of University students found themselves confronted with Greek citizenship laws which provide for the suspension of all rights born in Greece or those of recent Greek ancestry even though they may not be citizens of the U.S. They were drawn there was always the threat of war with Turkey.

"I think the Americans gave the Turks every opportunity to continue the war," she said.

Change the world is a fine idea, but where do you start?

We asked the same question when we first found ourselves in a position to make the world a more habitable place.

At Kodak, we started close to home. In Rochester, New York. We cut river pollution with one of the most efficient aquatic waste water treatment plants in the country. We cut air pollution with scrubbers, adsorbers and electrostatic precipitators. We helped set up a black enterprise program in downtown Rochester.

Why? Helping to combat water pollution not only benefits society, but as well as we need clean water to make film. Our combustible waste disposal facility not only reduces air pollution but also helps pay for heat in heat and steam production and silver recovery. The black enterprise program not only helps people who aren't well off but also helps stabilize communities in which Kodak can work and grow.

In short, it is simply good business. And we're in business to make a profit. But in furthering our business interests, we also further society's interests.

After all, our business depends on society. So we care what happens to it.

Kodak.
More than a business.

JOHN M. ROY, recently returned from a semester of teaching at the University of Leuven, will conduct a new course next semester dealing with methods of historical inquiry. Shover will be joined in the effort by history colleagues Bruce Kiklick and Alan Hess.

Shover Pilots Course In Historical Inquiry

BY PETER GRANT
University historians next term will pilot a historical inquiry course which is an outgrowth of the American University course teaching methods of historical inquiry. The course, History 201, will attempt to tackle the underlying assumptions of history. Shover said the course should be appreciated for its own sake, he explained. "It would be more likely to say that is a philosopher. The ordinary language" historian would say that history is distinctive and unique and should be appreciated for its own sake," he explained.

In addition to lectures, students will become a seminar on a particular topic to illustrate the three methods. Topics offered include the European, French, and Chinese Revolutions.

The Shaw Festival production of "The Relapse" will be presented this weekend at the Annenberg Center stage in the Perelman Theatre. The play, by Ben Jonson, is one of the master's best... a wonderful evening of comic theater, is must for everyone in search of an enjoyable time.

Bookstore Notes Rise In Used Book Sales

By JEREMY SIMONS

March 18, 1974

After holding out for used books, the University Bookstore has now added to the many used book sections on the campus.

The increase in used books has been caused by a decrease in sales of new books. The manager of the Bookstore, Gary Young, reported last week.

A decrease in enrollment, academic grants, and economic woes makes the University even more attractive to book buyers, he said. The demand for used books has increased so much that the Bookstore now has a used book counter for the first time.

Young said although parents previously told their children not to

The Penn Lightweights: A ‘Different’ Team with a ‘Different’ Philosophy

Bill Wagner

The current campaigns of the Penn football teams are characterized by "great expectations." At the beginning of the fall season, no one expected anything spectacular. Everything was five years away, even the season started with an end, all systems were on a very shaky standard.

1971 has been a football season unlike any previous in the history of the varsity of the Ivy League. Last year the business didn't work as planned, it was the lightweights, and one game to go, has quaffed a 1-4 mark, but the 1974’s have a little more than the rest of the year and perhaps, just perhaps, a little more of momentum should be taken before the accolades end. Pellea Penn habit to call his Penn lighter at coach Bill Wagner's wish.

The Penn football team is the issue and believes the Penn lightweight program has been mature.
