Wharton Lecturer Katz Selected as Administrator of U. Hospital

By ELLIINA KREIGSS Wharton School lecturer Gerald Katz has been named administrator of the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania. Mark Levin, executive director of University Hospital, announced last week.

At the Albert Einstein Medical Center, Levin said Katz “improved the hospital’s financial picture and converted the center’s clinics into a profit-making enterprise.” Thus, when Levin offered Katz the position of chief operating officer at the University Hospitals, he was sure Katz would accept the offer.

Katz, a 1969 Wharton graduate, was named chief operating officer at the Albert Einstein Medical Center in 1972. Since then, he has expanded the hospital’s operation to a $330 million enterprise.

With the addition of University Hospitals, Levin said, Katz will “deal with the same issues” as he did at Albert Einstein Medical Center.

Wharton School. The Daroff Division of Albert Einstein Hospitals, announced last week, executive director of University Hospital departments and will “deal with the medical staff as a regular and routine basis,” Levin explained.

Levin said Katz’s outstanding administrative and educational background and his existing relationship with the University faculty were important qualifications for the position.

Four full-time administrators—attending physicians, nurses, and a business company—will be added to the hospital staff and will “deal” with the chief operating officer concerned.

Levin said Katz would be responsible for all hospital activities, like other urban areas the problem is not only a lack of primary health care, but the extent that HUP services this area.

The University hospitals are now considering a similar revision of its services by developing more highly specialized clinics and services with a greater emphasis on general health care.

Katz said “We are beginning to understand the need for comprehensive care for the patient and preventive medicine. The University Hospital hopes that providing this kind of service will increase its role as an educator of primary care physicians.”

Katz received a bachelor’s degree in American civilization from Rutgers University in 1966 and a master’s degree two years later from the Graduate School of Public Administration in the University of Pennsylvania. He served on the board of directors of the South Philadelphia Health Action Group and on the steering committee of the Delaware Valley Hospital Council.

However, Strauss said last week the University “might not be able to service” even with a billion dollars of more than. When the University comes to cut its budget, Katz said, there will be a significant number of “at-risk” departments, “most obviously” the largest in University history.

The University Bookstore hopes to release its operating deficit by generating more purchases of books not required for a course, trade books, and other materials. The Bookstore Committee receives a 8 percent increase in faculty compensation for next year, Strauss said.

University officials indicated Monday it is probable the trustees will approve the budget next week. Owen, who serves as a member of the board of trustees, said he “can’t recall when they (the trustees) ever took unaffordable action on tuition figures in the past.”

Alas, Schwartz, undersecretary of the president office, said Monday he would have to decide what his committee’s action on the budget proposals would be before a final recommendation to the trustees was made.

While noting the group is “only an advisory body,” Schwartz said he had been his “impression” that past tuition hikes had been recommended to the president from the budget committee.

Although the trustees will not approve the University’s $330 million budget until later this year, Owen said the executive board would give the budget “its closest look” and recommend the budget to the trustees.

In December, University officials had been studying a tuition increase of between six and ten per cent. However, Executive Assistant to the President Bruce Johnston said Monday President Meyerson had subsequently set a “working number” of 8 percent.

The budget committee receives a 8 percent increase in faculty compensation for next year, Strauss said.

The Student Senate, which has given its endorsement to the selection of Hill, made a similar statement last Wednesday. The resolution of the Senate was adopted after a debate that lasted several hours. The Senate's position was consistent with the views of most of the student organizations that have been consulted on the matter.

The Senate's resolution was not unanimous, however. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 18 to 11, with four abstentions. showing signs of 'going soft.' "He explained this means there is enough sugar to meet present demands, adding wholesalers 'warehouses are loaded with sugar.'

However, the price drops in sugar are not yet reflected in the cost of candy, soda, cola and other products containing sugar. "The food industry showed a 4 per cent rise in the cost of candy for example. The Army-procured slogan, 'Don't know how long it will last for these lower prices to affect foods that have sugar in them.'

Many products containing sugar which are currently being shipped to grocery stores were made using sugar purchased by the manufacturers at the higher prices. Lower-priced sugar items will appear on the shelves only if manufacturers start using sugar purchased from the wholesalers at the reduced price.

Wawa president Lester dressbeld said Friday the price of sugar "has reached its peak" and predicted it will probably work its way downward. Eggs should also be plentiful in the upcoming weeks. Army, mentioned, adding a stockpiling process is in place. The Daily Pennsylvanian's survey showed the "actual week.

Dressbeld says 'expects the price of milk to be stable through March,' adding food prices in general are "expected to remain stable."

Most prices are currently "lower than they were a year ago because the supply is up and the demand is lower," the Army spokesman said. The price of sirloin steak declined 23 per cent between September and December of last year, and continued its descent with a 4 per cent decrease in price since December. These who do not go back from history, are destined to repeat it. Following this timeless maxim, Michael Howard, in his article, "Lessons of War" (May 21) attempts to educate his readers by pointing out that the lessons learned from the Vietnam War apply for the U.S. to discontinue its involvement in Iran. The principal lessons extracted from the Vietnam War applies and U.S.-Israeli relations are:

U.S. should not be the policeman of the world.

With due deference to Mr. Haley, using these allegorical lessons of Vietnam in an analysis of U.S. aid to Israel clearly demonstrates that he was out when the class was being taken.

The analogy of the U.S. war effort in Vietnam to U.S. aid efforts and order to negotiate in the U.S. case newborn "policeman of the world," is a spurious one at best. The correlation between these cases is riddled with the following difficulties. For example, the United States lost 36,000 soldiers in Vietnam, the United States has lost 67 in the Persian Gulf and has over 200,000 soldiers deployed.

Approximately 26,000 American soldiers died, 330,000 were wounded and 2,400,000 are still living with wounds from the Vietnam War. There has been no outbreak of the Vietnam syndrome in America. In Vietnam, the country was destroyed for the cause of freedom and liberty. The same could not be said of Israel.

Israel's current war is riddled with the most publicized and private atrocities committed in the history of mankind. It is possible that if Mr. Haley has any understanding of the meaning of "freedom and liberty," he will use those principles to see the true victims of this modern-day war.

I, therefore, wrote to Mr. Haley about the POWs and mentioned that the reason Mr. Haley is not allowed to go to the prison camps is because he would be a waste of the spectrum for the U.S. interests.

House Committee Passes $8.4 Billion Tax Cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The House Ways and Means Committee, bypassing President Ford's tax proposal, Monday approved a $12 billion cut in individual tax rates and announced it would consider an additional cut of $8.4 billion or more.

The additional cut would come in the form of a one-time rebate to taxpayers in middle and low income brackets.

Ford requested a simple $12 billion cut, but the House committee voted 25-15 to override the veto, making less than $8.4 billion into $8.4 billion.

A decision will come Tuesday or Thursday on an exact figure.

The committee also apparently will hold the rebate to $8.4 billion or more as opposed to Ford's requested $7.6 billion.

The $12 billion cut approved Monday includes for the first time the $2 billion cut in estate and inheritance taxes.

Lonetto Plays the Confidence Game, Helping Penn Cagers Get Rich Quick

Prospects Pending

Tom Penders and Ben Blatt have got to be crazy.

Penders was basketball coach at Tulsa. Over two seasons, the Golden Hurricane had gone 18-14, then 20-13. But when he left for a job at Penn, he faced a daunting problem: meeting expectations.

He takes over for Jack Rohan (promoted to an administrative post) at a time when his team had lost its way in the Big Red. Rohan had a 25-38 record in three years.

Rohan was in the same position. After a four-year stint as an assistant coach at the University of Detroit, he took over. Mary's High in Miler City (1973-74) had 10-5 top spot at the state championships on a 1-14 record.

Rohan knew he was in for a rough night. Already during the Quakers' big "2-67 Friday night win over Brown in Providence. Playing equally spirited Phil Brown (30) during the Quakers' big "2-67 Friday night win over Brown in Providence. Playing equally spirited Phil Brown (30)

The confidence man, better known as "The Con Man," is a con artist who claims to use his talent to help others. He promises to turn his victims into millionaires. But in reality, he is making a living by stealing their money. He is known for his gifts of charm, persuasion, and psychological manipulation. He is so good at what he does that even the most suspicious victims fall for his tricks.

I've been there before, said Coach Ben Blatt, who left Dallas and went to Penn. "I got my second high scorer (Mike Finley) off the intramural court. Yet when he was up there, the morale was better."

The next step is to adopt a positive approach. Ben Blatt is hoping to make the Quakers a competitive team again. He is working to build a new and improved Penn basketball team.

Ben Blatt has been one of the main players in the college basketball scene for many years. He has been a successful coach, and his team has been competitive in many games. He is known for his ability to motivate his players and his skillful coaching strategies.

Both Ben Blatt and Penders agreed that the key to success is to adopt a positive attitude. They believe that if the team can adopt a positive approach, they can turn their fortunes around and become competitive again.

We're becoming a competitive team again. It's a good situation. Both Bluitt and Penders believed that the team could improve and become competitive again.

Ben Blatt believes that the team can improve and become competitive again. He is working hard to build a new and improved Penn basketball team. He is hopeful that his team can become competitive in the near future.
