Final Judgement Expected Soon in WXPN Case

BY JAN BERGER

A final decision may soon be reached in the Undergraduate Affairs Council (UAC) hearing of the student-run radio station WXPN's case for a new contract. UAC Chairman Paul S. Edelman said Monday night that he will "try starting" the conference, but "I can't guarantee it." Something definite will be decided tonight the Court will continue deliberating through the week.

"The idea is that we'll be finished this evening, but that's just a hope," Edelman said. "We're still deliberating through the week."

At the hearing earlier in the week, the radio station asked for a new contract. WXPN wants "something definite" at this evening's meeting, but "I can't guarantee it."

Sunday the Court is "aiming for something definite" at this evening's meeting, but "I can't guarantee it."

TUESDAY, MARCH 12

By JANET NOVACK

Rizzo and Hill Look For Support

FRANK RIZZO

Unemployment: A Major Issue

[Continued on page 1]

FRANK RIZZO

Eight University Students Win Thouron Scholarships

BY ROBY SPEAKER

Eight students, all Penn graduates, were named last week to receive Thouron scholarships. All eight continue their studies in Great Britain during the 1978-1979 academic year. The scholarships are given annually by the Thouron American Student Exchange program to under-graduate students in the United States. The program is named in honor of the late Henry C. Thouron, who was given the degree of Doctor of Laws for his contributions in education and public service. The students were chosen on the basis of their academic excellence, leadership qualities, and their commitment to public service. They will spend one year in Great Britain, where they will attend a university in the United States.

The Thouron scholarships are awarded to students who have completed at least two years of college and have a minimum GPA of 3.0. The recipients are selected based on their academic achievements, leadership roles, and extracurricular activities. Thouron scholars are expected to be active in the community and to make a positive impact on the world. The program is open to all Penn graduates, and the selection process is highly competitive. Each student is paired with a mentor who provides guidance and support throughout the year. The mentor helps the student to navigate the academic and cultural challenges of living and studying in a new country. The mentor also provides opportunities for professional development and networking.

Thouron scholars attend universities in the United States, and they are expected to participate in the exchange program for a minimum of two years. The program provides financial support for tuition, housing, and other expenses. Thouron scholars are expected to live on campus and to participate in extracurricular activities. They are also expected to work part-time to earn money and to develop their professional skills.

Thouron scholars are expected to return to Penn after their exchange year and to share their experiences with other students. They are also expected to participate in alumni events and to stay in touch with their mentor.

The program is open to students from all geographic areas of the United States. The selection process is highly competitive, and the program is designed to be inclusive. The program encourages students from diverse backgrounds to apply, and it is committed to providing equal opportunities for all students.

The program is open to students from all geographic areas of the United States. The selection process is highly competitive, and the program is designed to be inclusive. The program encourages students from diverse backgrounds to apply, and it is committed to providing equal opportunities for all students.

The program is open to students from all geographic areas of the United States. The selection process is highly competitive, and the program is designed to be inclusive. The program encourages students from diverse backgrounds to apply, and it is committed to providing equal opportunities for all students.

BUDGET SEMINAR

An introductory seminar in the Undergraduate Affairs Council (UAC) budget is scheduled for 7:00 this evening in Room 10. on the first floor of HUP. The seminar is open to all interested members of the University community.

The seminar is open to all interested members of the University community.

The seminar is open to all interested members of the University community.

The seminar is open to all interested members of the University community.

The seminar is open to all interested members of the University community.
Debate Continues Over New Indochina Aid

"Shouted: "Where are the 41 bodies of missing in Indochina."

"Prison Guard Hurt In SLA Escape Attempt"

"For food stamps were not receiving them. Only 28 percent of those eligible were getting food stamp assistance."

"The sudden violent attempt to escape by Joseph Romano, 35, and James Little, 22, Saturday was stopped when they were overcome by gas in the county courthouse building just short of a locked gun room."

"I don't think they had a chance of getting away," said Alameda County district attorney Charles Cull."
On Blaming Victims

By Gary A. Dymski

Mr. Dooley left the table. He had a nervous habit of tapping his fingers on the table, and this was his signal that he had finished talking. His manner was firm and deliberate, and it was clear that he had thought through all that he was going to say. The men around the table sat quietly, waiting for him to continue.

"What business is it of yours," Mr. Dooley said, his voice firm and clear, "to come in here and blame the victim? Who is the victim? Is it the man who works hard and never gets a break, the man who pays his taxes and supports his family? Is it the man who is out of work and can't find a job? Is it the man who is homeless and has nowhere to go? Is it the man who is sick and has no insurance? Is it the man who is in debt and can't pay his bills? Are these not our brothers and sisters, our fellow human beings, who need our help and our support?"

The men around the table were silent, listening to Mr. Dooley's words.

"We are all in this together," Mr. Dooley continued, "we are all connected. We are all part of the same community, the same society. We are all responsible for each other, and we must help each other. We cannot blame the victim, we must help them."

Mr. Dooley's words were powerful and moving. The men around the table were moved, and they knew that they had to do something to help those who were in need. They knew that they had to work together, to support each other, and to help those who were in trouble.
Waters, Sarinelli Fall Short in Mat Easterns

By DAVID SCHRAGER

Erie Water's Waters and Sarinelli have often faced each other in duels of the Penn wrestling team this year only to find this story a bit of a different ending.

All season long, Waters (118) and Sarinelli (125) have been locked in a battle of supremacy for both the weight classes. But when the fall season came to an end, with Sarinelli winning the Easterns, the discrepancy for the Quaker grapplers, the team which won the Easterns, was even more pronounced than before.

For Sarinelli, the December 11th loss to his foe, Tim Pitera of Cornell, was the toughest he has ever faced. It will all come back to haunt him as he will face the last pretender to the title, Mike McDonald, this weekend in the third round.

But alas, the championship was not to be. For Sarinelli with a 15-1 record and the later with a 12-1 record the last pretender to the title, the Eisenhower title round, the 150-pounder seemed to have been the last pretender to the title, the Eisenhower title round, the 150-pounder seemed to have been defeated. The Easterns defeat - but there is still one more match ahead of him at least before he can feel satisfied.

Sarinelli will as well be going to Princeton March 12 for the Nationals. But this time it is to the EIAC champ that will be waiting for him. It is whether he still can come up against something he hadn't before. It will definitely pay off for the Cicero native to have his back on the mat. "I can't let this loss destroy me."

By JON STEVENS

Of the 118th Penn-Waters, no one seed was more premature than Sarinelli. He was not the number one, and Sarinelli second. But alas, the championship was to be for the two Penn men. They came close, each falling just short of being victorious, and each proved that the combination of both grapplers was valid.

Waters, as usual, came up against something he hadn't before. But the senior came close, the same hard work that led to the number one, and Sarinelli second. But alas, the championship was to be for the two Penn men. They came close, each falling just short of being victorious, and each proved that the combination of both grapplers was valid.

-operating the Mat Easterns

Frosh Cagers Drop Finale to Princeton, 65-59

By ELOF KAPLAN

There are forty minutes in a college basketball game. But Friday night the last thirty-five could easily have been diminished, as was the Temple Owls Tuesday; 74, displaced the Penn woman cagers (74) 54, in a season ending contest at the Palestra. It took Penn seven minutes to score a single point, none of which, until Temple 30-2 Penn. 1. For all points and purposes, the game was over at the end of that third quarter, and only the clock and the scoreboard kept the score from coming to a close.

The only traps were Penn's own, none giving up, but fortunately none coming to a close in twenty minutes, to say nothing about getting off a goal. As the Princeton men were no match for their opponents on offense and defense, the Quaker's were able to rack up points, as surprisingly, even sophomore Hanspeter and junior Hanspeter was the only one to score the game a lot like Bob Barry of N.Y. N.Y. N.Y. Naive, as if the Quakers didn't have enough trouble already. Penn finally managed to get some good outside shooting from Lovett McAlpine and Bill Price, plus a free rebounding performance from Dennis Early. And to the Quakers credit, they showed delight in watching Sarinelli and Kric Waters and Kay Sarinelli. How much longer will the last pretender to the title, the Eisenhower title round, the 150-pounder seemed to have been defeated. The Easterns defeat - but there is still one more match ahead of him at least before he can feel satisfied.

Sarinelli with a 15-1 record and the later with a 12-1 record the last pretender to the title, the Eisenhower title round, the 150-pounder seemed to have been defeated. The Easterns defeat - but there is still one more match ahead of him at least before he can feel satisfied.

Sarinelli will as well be going to Princeton March 12 for the Nationals. But this time it is to the EIAC champ that will be waiting for him. It is whether he still can come up against something he hadn't before. It will definitely pay off for the Cicero native to have his back on the mat. "I can't let this loss destroy me."

By DAVID SCHRAGER

Erie Water's Waters and Sarinelli have often faced each other in duels of the Penn wrestling team this year only to find this story a bit of a different ending.

All season long, Waters (118) and Sarinelli (125) have been locked in a battle of supremacy for both the weight classes. But when the fall season came to an end, with Sarinelli winning the Easterns, the discrepancy for the Quaker grapplers, the team which won the Easterns, was even more pronounced than before.

For Sarinelli, the December 11th loss to his foe, Tim Pitera of Cornell, was the toughest he has ever faced. It will all come back to haunt him as he will face the last pretender to the title, Mike McDonald, this weekend in the third round.

But alas, the championship was not to be. For Sarinelli with a 15-1 record and the later with a 12-1 record the last pretender to the title, the Eisenhower title round, the 150-pounder seemed to have been defeated. The Easterns defeat - but there is still one more match ahead of him at least before he can feel satisfied.

Sarinelli will as well be going to Princeton March 12 for the Nationals. But this time it is to the EIAC champ that will be waiting for him. It is whether he still can come up against something he hadn't before. It will definitely pay off for the Cicero native to have his back on the mat. "I can't let this loss destroy me."

By JON STEVENS

Of the 118th Penn-Waters, no one seed was more premature than Sarinelli. He was not the number one, and Sarinelli second. But alas, the championship was to be for the two Penn men. They came close, each falling just short of being victorious, and each proved that the combination of both grapplers was valid.

Waters, as usual, came up against something he hadn't before. But the senior came close, the same hard work that led to the number one, and Sarinelli second. But alas, the championship was to be for the two Penn men. They came close, each falling just short of being victorious, and each proved that the combination of both grapplers was valid.

-operating the Mat Easterns

Frosh Cagers Drop Finale to Princeton, 65-59

By ELOF KAPLAN

There are forty minutes in a college basketball game. But Friday night the last thirty-five could easily have been diminished, as was the Temple Owls Tuesday; 74, displaced the Penn woman cagers (74) 54, in a season ending contest at the Palestra. It took Penn seven minutes to score a single point, none of which, until Temple 30-2 Penn. 1. For all points and purposes, the game was over at the end of that third quarter, and only the clock and the scoreboard kept the score from coming to a close.

The only traps were Penn's own, none giving up, but fortunately none coming to a close in twenty minutes, to say nothing about getting off a goal. As the Princeton men were no match for their opponents on offense and defense, the Quaker's were able to rack up points, as surprisingly, even sophomore Hanspeter and junior Hanspeter was the only one to score the game a lot like Bob Barry of N.Y. N.Y. Naive, as if the Quakers didn't have enough trouble already. Penn finally managed to get some good outside shooting from Lovett McAlpine and Bill Price, plus a free rebounding performance from Dennis Early. And to the Quakers credit, they showed delight in watching Sarinelli and Kric Waters and Kay Sarinelli. How much longer will the last pretender to the title, the Eisenhower title round, the 150-pounder seemed to have been defeated. The Easterns defeat - but there is still one more match ahead of him at least before he can feel satisfied.

Sarinelli with a 15-1 record and the later with a 12-1 record the last pretender to the title, the Eisenhower title round, the 150-pounder seemed to have been defeated. The Easterns defeat - but there is still one more match ahead of him at least before he can feel satisfied.

Sarinelli will as well be going to Princeton March 12 for the Nationals. But this time it is to the EIAC champ that will be waiting for him. It is whether he still can come up against something he hadn't before. It will definitely pay off for the Cicero native to have his back on the mat. "I can't let this loss destroy me."
Cagers Crown Campaign, Clinch Championship

By CHARLES S. SERVICE

For those who have covered faces from every zone, the Palestra was not the place to be last night. The Harvard Crimson, intent on running their 15-game winning streak to 16, took the court at 7 p.m. and did just that. The Palestra was a sea of crimson, and there were few seats left.

The game was the first in a series of eight games that would determine the Big Red's fate. The second game was against Cornell on Saturday night at 7 p.m., and the third game was scheduled for the following day. The Crimson managed to score the first goal, but that was their only tally of the night. By the end of the game, the scoreboard read 2-2, with Harvard leading 1-0 at the second period.

The Crimson played an aggressive defense, limiting the Blue out of scoring opportunities. The Blue, on the other hand, struggled to keep the Crimson from scoring. The game ended with a tie, and both teams moved on to the next game in the series.

Boston Eludes Penn Icemen Again

By PAUL J. BURGER

HAMILTON, N.Y. — The Penn hockey club ended its season with a win over Cornell Saturday night at the Palestra.

The game was a battle of two teams with different ambitions. Cornell was playing to salvage its season, while Penn was playing to clinch the Ivy League title.

Penn opened the scoring early, with a goal from senior Bruce Carrick. Somewhat surprisingly, the Blue responded with a goal of their own just a few minutes later, tying the game at 1-1. The teams went on to score a total of five goals, with Penn winning 5-4 in overtime.

Overall, the game was a close one, with both teams playing well. However, Penn was able to capitalize on its scoring opportunities, while Cornell struggled to score. The win clinched the Ivy League title for Penn, which is also the defending national champion.

Racquetmen Fare Well in Second Place Finish

By AN UNRECORDED

At the end of the season, the Penn racquetball team finished in second place. The team had an impressive showing, winning 13 out of 18 matches and only losing 5.

In addition to the team's overall success, there were several individual highlights. One of the most notable was the performance of sophomore Greg Cooper, who achieved a 7-0 record in singles play.

The team also had a strong showing in the quarter-finals of the States Squash Racquets Association Open Championships. They were able to secure a second-place finish, with a score of 14-7.

Trackmen Unite to Take Heps Crown

By HARRY DEVER

It was the old college try — or, to be more specific, the Harvard-Harvard match. The meet was held on the site of the old Henley Course, and the teams were divided into three sections. The Harvard crew, under the guidance of coach David Duffus, scored 15 points to take first place. The Yale crew, under the guidance of coach John B. Beardsley, scored 14 points to take second place. The Columbia crew, under the guidance of coach Richard H. Truax, scored 10 points to take third place.

The meet was held on the site of the old Henley Course, and the teams were divided into three sections. The Harvard crew, under the guidance of coach David Duffus, scored 15 points to take first place. The Yale crew, under the guidance of coach John B. Beardsley, scored 14 points to take second place. The Columbia crew, under the guidance of coach Richard H. Truax, scored 10 points to take third place.