Cost Of Dining Contracts To Rise 15 Per Cent

BY JEFF BRINBAUM

The Senate of the University of Pennsylvania has voted to approve a 15 per cent increase in the cost of dining contracts at the University.

The cost of a 15 meal contract will rise from $820 to $950 effective May 1st. The contract includes the traditional spring week and fall week which are only approved by the Senate of the University.

Though the contract cost increased, the Senate said that the increase was necessary to balance the University's budget.

Speaker of the Senate, John B. Keating, said that the increase was a reflection of the University's financial situation.

"This is a difficult decision," Keating said. "But we believe it is necessary to ensure the financial stability of the University."
Student Proposal Asks End to Course Clusters

By MARTIN SEIFEL

A proposal calling for the rejection of course cluster requirements to the Faculty of Arts and Sciences was submitted to the FAS Senate Thursday.

The proposal, authored by College seniors Martin Steinhart and Martin Wilkins, calls for the cancellation of all departmental, external, and specialeducation requirements. It lists the FAS Senate as its intended audience.

The proposal cites the following arguments against course clusters: that they do not reflect the diversity of student interest within the same major, that they do not contribute to student autonomy, that they are restrictive and can eliminate alternative paths for completion of degrees, and that they are an inefficient method of realizing the educational goals.

Steinhart and Wilkins argue that the cluster system should be replaced with a supplemental, self-designed curriculum in place of existing course-cluster requirements. The current cluster system on campus is rigid and inflexible, they say, and it keeps students from taking classes of interest other than the ones that are required for their major.

The proposal explains that students should be able to design their own courses of study to reflect their individual needs, and they should not be required to follow the cluster system to obtain their degrees. They say that the current cluster system on campus is ineffective and should be replaced with an alternative system.

They argue that the cluster system is an infringement on student autonomy and a barrier to the development of a truly liberal education. They say that the current cluster system on campus is ineffective and should be replaced with an alternative system.

The proposal states that students should be able to take any course they wish, and that they should not be required to follow the cluster system to obtain their degrees. They say that the current cluster system on campus is ineffective and should be replaced with an alternative system.

Troops Will Not Enter Cambodia

WASHINGTN (UPI) - President Ford yesterday informed the U.S. forces they will not be sent back into Cambodia, but he said the nation will feel "a deep sense of cause" if the situation worsens.

Ford decided most of his 11th hour move to avoid friction and formally to the American people to come to terms with the possibility of a human rights situation. He said there was at least a chance the U.S. could become involved in a situation in which the Angkor area would turn into a "bloodbath, a massacre" if the communists were given a chance to hold out until June or July, when the rainy season sets in and combat normally dwindles off.

Oil Producers Offer A Freeze on Prices

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Oil producers said yesterday they would offer a freeze on oil prices, linking the cost of industrial imports to the national economy.

Ford's assessment, however, that the U.S. could not go on fighting in Cambodia, he said the commissar just returned from a trip to the area.

The National Clean Air Coalition said the EPA's finding that Congress freeze exhaust control rules now will hurt public health rather than put pressure on oil and automobile industries.

Kissinger Condemns Arab Guerrilla Action

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The State Department Thursday urged Congress to give emergency aid to Cambodia even though the Phnom Penh government "is not one of the most effective in the world" and its fall would probably not hurt neighboring South Vietnam.

Assistant Secretary of State Philip C. Habib told a House subcommittee that Cambodia will soon suffer "an unbelievable transformation of its society" unless Congress approves the $22 million in emergency aid requested by President Ford.

The Death of the Dining Service

By Buffy Bissinger

A trip to one of the University’s dining services is an almost invariable adventure in bad manners, rude service and the occasional occurrence of dangerously sweet deserts.

But the time-honored system of dining services offers a wide display of opportunity for confusion and unwillingness. If you ever feel like getting into a fight, try getting yourself a seat at the Hill Dining Service or the Cause of Feast Dining Service.

In the midst of all this “quicksilver” service the student government has somehow gotten the nerve to announce an average price hike of 13 percent for all of its dining services to the student body.

At the University the average cost per meal of the dining service is $1.80. Next year the figure is set to soar to $2.00.

The $0.20 per dollar per meal it really isn’t unfair to expect some kind of quality in the food you’re getting, especially at that high ceiling of inflated prices.

One dollar per meal is not an unfair return for any kind of service.

In fact, most of the people have simply continued to buy meals instead of it, because they have no other choice.

The explanation of the reasons for it, however, is by no means as simple as it may seem.

The increased costs are due to a variety of factors, including black students and athletes. Doesn’t he realize that most people on campus are in those eggheads, if we have any of them around?

At the moment the average cost per meal for the 800 meal plans is $150.

That is a 20 percent increase, which is nothing to sneer at.

The whole perspective of Michael Brown’s column “Expanding the Golden” (DPM, Mar. 30) is so eerily that it is difficult to know where to begin rebutting. However, the most obvious statement—those on “race-relations”—are totally unfounded. In fact, they are plain racist.

He says, “blacks and athletes have been admitted in relatively large numbers.” The number of black students here this year is 11, and the number of black athletes is 24. It is this very number for black students and athletes.

Brown states, “The student services...are unfair to ask for seconds if you finish your meals.”

And what kind of “deal” is that?

A horrendous one.

You're always hearing Chris Schenkel on TV, always saying the same thing: "Get ready for an NCAA championship event when it comes to your area." You don't see him in your future, oh DP Sports.

Penn Big Eight 8-foe Eastern teams—we'd know more about them.

They become more informative about the teams. Day is thinking to build today to send Saturday's Mich Moore-colorado clash. The Tigers' leading point producer in junior guard Willie is junior guard Missoula, Colorado clash. But anyone in the New York-Pennsylvania clash. Isn't that good news?

Penn faces 'Big Three' in IC4As

By LUTHER JACKSON

There's no doubt that the Ivy League team competition this season is the most fierce ever. The past few years, the Ivy League has been competitive, but this year it's the toughest ever. The Ivy League teams are all very strong, and the competition is fierce.

The Penn Quakers are among those among the top three teams in the Ivy League. They have been dominating the conference, and their performance has been impressive. The team has been consistent all season long, and they have set a new bar for the Ivy League. The Quakers are currently at the top of the Ivy League, and they are poised to win the conference title.

The Ivy League conference is very competitive, and the Quakers have been able to stay on top thanks to their strong performances. They have been able to consistently win games and have shown their competitiveness throughout the season.
