U. Pre-Professionals
Face Good Prospects

By F. H. WEST

On per cent of all current University students are currently receiving some form of aid. It is expected that by 1970, the number of students who will be receiving financial aid will reach 80 per cent. This rise in the number of students receiving aid is due to the increasing number of students who are enrolled in graduate and professional schools.

The increase in the number of students receiving financial aid has placed a strain on the University's budget. The University is currently in the process of implementing a new financial aid program that will provide more aid to students.

The new financial aid program is designed to meet the needs of students who are enrolled in graduate and professional schools. The program will provide more aid to students who are enrolled in schools that are located in the United States.

The new financial aid program will be implemented next semester. Students who are interested in applying for financial aid should contact their schools' financial aid offices.

Inner City Lot Becomes Grounds for 'Liberty Fair'

By JANETOVIC

Today at noon, three Franziska and three other of the city's largest buildings will be torn down to make way for the inner city. The event will be the opening of "Liberty Fair," a simulated cultural marketplace.

For the next 30 days, in the Liberty Fairground at 80 and 81 North Street, a marketplace will be established with a display of folk crafts, a farm exhibit and international customs serving ethnic foods.

"Liberty Fair will be the central attraction of the Philadelphia Festival, a city-wide cultural extravaganza featuring over 200 ethnic exhibits and events designed to be held in the city," the Philadelphia Committee on Cultural Affairs said.

The Civil Rights Movement has been an integral part of this history, with the Philadelphia Festival hosting everything from street parades to cultural events. In addition, the Bulletin on Music and Dance has sponsored a series of concerts.

The Philadelphia Festival for the city has been traceable from government and private sources, including the National Alliance for Progress.

The Philadelphia Festival is an international cultural event, with exhibits from all over the world. The festival will be held in cooperation with the Philadelphia Museum of Art and the Philadelphia Museum of Science and Industry.

Building Seized In Black Protest

By ELEANOR O'BRIEN

About 30 Brown University students supporting the Third World Coalition occupied Brown's Hall, the administration building, shortly after 6:10 Thursday morning.

The students, representing the Progressives of the Student Coalition (PSC), the Latin American Students Organization (ALAS), the Afro-American Society (AAS), the Latin American Student Organization, took action to protest the re-election of President Daniel Hering. Hering's term as President is in violation of affirmative action, minority students' voice, and minority faculty and administration, the coalition said.

Speaker Paul Jones reported Thursday evening students were making repairs to the building and the protesters' demands to reduce the number of student rooms, Jones said the meeting had lasted several hours. The meeting ended when the students developed a plan to renovate the original building.

Speaker Paul Jones, a member of the PSC, said Thursday, "The Third World Coalition won't stop till the coalition's demands are met."

rise demands. Marshall said that unless the administration presents a college house plan to alumni, it will not attract donations for Quad renovations. If funds must be raised through a bond issue, rents would be comparable to those in the high rises, Marshall said.

In other business, the Assembly voted to join the Coalition of Private University Students (COPUS) and pay its $350 membership fee. COPUS is a student lobby composed of Ivy League and other East Coast schools seeking federal money for private universities.

accepted by professional schools due to the nationwide rise in grade point averages and standardized exam scores.

"Nationally, only 30 to 40 per cent of the applicants to medical schools are eventually accepted," McOurn explained. "For the past three years, 70 per cent of Penn's applicants have been accepted. Our courses are comparable to those in the high rises. If our kids are smart," she concluded.

"One goal here at Penn is not to have students coming out looking like test tubes or microscopes. We produce all-around kids," Berko added. "In 1961, have improved the quality of teaching, but not to the detriment of the Ph.D. program in English."

He noted Alan Kors' role in the reshaping of Van Pelt House and the importance of teaching, but not to the detriment of the administration as well.

Allen said a major criteria was the willingness of a teacher to instruct both inside and outside the classroom. He noted that Kors' role in the creation of Van Pelt House and Robert Bavosi's role in the redosing of the Ph.D. program in English were examples.

At an Activation Committee representative and the conundrum of the Young Socialist Alliance, I would like to express the position that the representation of the Young Socialist Alliance at the University is a very serious matter. It is a question of whether or not the University is committed to the principles of the Young Socialist Alliance.

In my view, the Young Socialist Alliance is a political organization whose aim is to work for a social democratic society. The Alliance is committed to the fight against imperialism and for a world of peace. It is committed to the struggle for the rights of the working class and the oppressed.

The Alliance is not a revolutionary organization, but it is a mass organization of the working class. It is a democratic organization, where every member has a voice. It is a militant organization, where every member is committed to the struggle for social democracy.

I believe that the University should be committed to the principles of the Young Socialist Alliance. The University should support the Alliance, and should not try to silence it.

Embassy Blast Kills 2

STOCKHOLM (UPI) - Guerrillas holding hostages in the Swedish capital flew up in a series of violent explosions Thursday night hours after police said the hostages might have been in free flight of their joint containers.

Police said they feared considerable loss of life. At least two persons were killed in the bombing, a military attack in the initial assault on the embassy, and another Leben may have been killed before the building was carted.

Police said they had arrested five suspected guerrillas, but shooting continued on scene and 11 minutes after the initial explosions at 11:45 P.M. (6:45 P.M. EDT). Police said they believed it possible to conceal contentment. The reason for this unjade secretion department.

Police suspected that more than 500,000 Americans and Vietnamese during the Communist advance toward Saigon.

HIGH SCHOOL RELAYS TO FEATURE 'PHILLY REVOLT' - In addition to the many Division I college teams that are entered in this weekend's NCAA Relays at the University of Tennessee, there are also several high school teams that will be competing. The high school teams are hoping to make a statement and show that they can compete with the college teams. The high school teams will be looking to knock off some of the college teams and prove that they are just as talented. Some of the high school teams that are entered in the NCAA Relays are the Central High School Blue Devils, the Central High School Jaguars, the Central High School Eagles, and the Central High School Tigers. These high school teams are hoping to make a name for themselves and prove that they are just as good as the college teams.
