U. Increases Financial Aid Budget; 4021 Undergraduates Offered Aid

By MARTIN ZENGEL

Members of the WPNX Committee have considered proposals to hire a full-time advisor to supervise programming and operations at the campus radio station. Committee members have estimated that such a position would increase the station's financial aid and operations.

Committee Considers Hiring WPNX Advisor

By JOHN SHOVER

At least two members of the committee said they would advance such a proposal to the University.

Curtis Reitz Report Date in Several Weeks

By AMY WEINSTEIN

The Jewish New Year 5736 has arrived, and it seems as if the new year will bring many changes to the Jewish community as well. This year, the High Holy Days will be celebrated back in their traditional way, with services held in person and not over Zoom. Many rabbis and cantors have expressed anxiety over the rising cases of COVID-19 and the need to continue to practice social distancing. Some communities have decided to celebrate the High Holy Days in a traditional way, while others have decided to continue to celebrate virtually. The weather is also expected to be a factor in the decision, with some communities anticipating rain and others expecting sunny skies. The Jewish community wishes everyone a happy and healthy year.

The Covenant

While our support for "Covenant" isn't overwhelming, the University's most recent art acquisition does have some favorable aspects.

It is a novel piece of sculpture, and a student walking through the Superblock plaza can't help but notice it. At very least, it'll be able to provide the area with some character.

And in comparison to "We Last", the huge mass of black steel that takes up precious grass in the College Hall Green, "Covenant" is a masterpiece.

In no way, however, do we wish to pose as aesthetic critics, and we can understand that the purchase of a work of art can come with a massive waste of artistic effort.

But it should be understood that the University must spend money for aesthetic improvement—it has no choice. A Philadelphia ordinance requires the University to spend one percent of all expenditures for city-constructed construction on the purchase of art.

As someone who's been both a student and a faculty member, I know that there are certain limits to what the University can do—such as not being able to buy art for the sake of it, no matter how much it costs. Many landlords in West Philadelphia hold two months' rent as a security deposit. Many landlords in West Philadelphia hold two months' security deposit the first year of the lease. Therefore, it is within a tenant's rights to propose to his landlord that one month of the security deposit be applied to the first month's rent for the second year of the lease, or even to have the entire year of security deposit reduced if the landlord is willing to accept that.

But the case with which this and other proposals take place depends critically on the relationship that the landlord has with his tenant. If he does not like you he'll fulfill very few of them. But if he likes you he might be able to fulfill very few of them. If he gets to know you and likes you he'll fulfill most of them. It is important to put away any animosity and attempt to establish a good relationship with your landlord. It is also important to establish what you can and cannot do. Don't wait for problems to arrive before trying to find out who is ultimately responsible for them. Know what is expected of you and what is expected from your landlord.

Bonnie Blustein, other column editors, and those who have been less than pleased with their landlords have been known to leave notes in rooms and planting sites in dorms for lengthy periods of time.

To avoid lengthy fights, understand the reality of the lease agreement at the beginning. Don't be hesitant to make complaints, but don't be afraid to take advantage of it. If you feel you have a valid complaint, ask what can be done, and then do it.

Warren Feldman, a junior in Wharton, is the director of the Penn Consummer Board.

By Warren Feldman

Proper housing is an initial concern of every Penn student. It is the biggest and most fundamental aspect of the academic experience. The student will make decisions about his life during the school year. Often, people enter the lease agreement without considering all of its responsibilities which go with it. Moreover, those Penn students who choose to live off-campus can assume additional responsibilities which an on-campus resident might not.

When living off-campus a person has to rent a furnished apartment or bring his own furniture if he wants to. He must feel confident. He has to shop and cook on his own and must try to maintain all the personal necessities that make for a proper living situation. He must be prepared to spend more money on utilities and travel than before. In addition, the leasing company will ask him to sign a lease agreement.

As someone who's been both a student and a faculty member, I know that there are certain limits to what the University can do—such as not being able to buy art for the sake of it, no matter how much it costs. Children's Hospital Doctors Perform Novel Operation

BY DRUSIE MENAKER

Christopher, age 26 days, has already made history. He has so far survived 35 heart defects that ordinarily kill within 60 hours. Christopher was born with his heart outside his body. Before the operation, the heart had been held to the body by only blood vessels.

"What this campus needed was a good sporting goods, army-navy, jeans kind of a store."
This course is divided into two parts. The first deals with the origin, development, and the role of cities in an historical context. The second part of the course examines the contribution of various disciplines to our understanding of the contemporary American city and a few practical problems of city planning are discussed.

Friday, September 5, 1975

49431 U.S. 2 - Urban Socialization: Ethnicity and Conflict (Golab)
M W 10-11:30 SH C-18
A lecture course designed to probe the problems of a pluralistic society. It hopes to include the influence of ethnicity in contemporary American life, especially as it relates to the better informed man, and more often than not, has had ethnic and/or racial overtones.

49439 U.S. 9 - Urbanization and Environmental Planning (Grant)
T 3-5 Hill House
An analysis of the process of urbanization and its social consequences. This course examines the phenomena and problems surrounding the city as a community in the modern American city. Students will engage some communities in action. Working primarily in teams, students will select and conduct research into the background, problems and activities of Philadelphia's communities, wrestling with problems and improving conditions.

49455 U.S. 21b - Economic Analysis of Metropolitan Areas: The Public Economy (Wingo)
T Th 9-11 Chem Bldg. B-13
An examination of the behavior of public organizations and their relationship to collective wants in metropolitan areas.

49463 U.S. 22 - Topics in Urban Political Economy (Glickman)
T 4-6 Th 5-6 Wms 202
As part of a set of courses offered in Urban Studies in the area of analysis of policy (U.S. 23, 24, 30, 49, etc. among them) this course is open to those who have completed U.S.15a (or Econ. 220) or who have the instructor's permission. The course begins with an examination of the neoclassical paradigm of economics and the implications of this paradigm for the formulation and analysis of social policy. The course would then focus on critical views of this world of the e.g., the "grants economy." Finally, a selected number of policy issues would be discussed from both mainstream and alternative perspectives, among them, income distribution, education, and land use conflict. The class will be organized into teams each of which would analyze a different social policy issue.

49477 U.S. 27 - Introduction to City Planning (Grant)
M 1-4 Wms 5
The purpose of this course is to provide an introduction to city and environmental planning for urban studies and design students. Emphasis will be placed on the application of the social and physical sciences to normative decision-making and intervention for the urban system. The course will consist of two parts: I. lecture and II. Planning Exercise. The lecture part of the course will cover such areas as planning theory, history of the planning profession in the United States, Canada and Great Britain, planning studies and methodology, site planning and environmental impact analysis, and the social and political aspects of city planning. The Planning exercise will consist of one of the following:
   a. a site planning exercise
   b. an advocacy planning exercise in co-operation with a local community group
   c. a critical analysis, evaluation and monitoring of a current planning issue and its accompanying planning process. I.e. Black History Museum proposed for Society Hill
   d. a critical analysis of an environmental impact statement, i.e. Kennedy Airport extension into Jamaica Bay.

49487 U.S. 40a - Seminar in Public Policy: Law (Rosenberg)
W 7-9 Wms 111
This course is designed to introduce the student to various civil liberties and civil rights issues. Questions emanating from the First and Fifth Amendments, including freedom of religion, press, association, and rights of the accused, etc, will be discussed. Particular emphasis will be placed on those rights which have the greatest impact on urban society. Illustrative of this would be the impact of court decisions on public financing of parochial education.

In addition to the impact of these amendments, the course will cover the effects of civil rights legislation based on the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments and Congressional legislation. This will include discussion and readings of cases affecting housing, education, employment, voting rights, etc.

Finally, the course will continually endeavor to expose the students the way in which the legal system operates, the attorney's role in that system and whether or not lawyers and courts are in fact successful vehicles to effectuate social change in the United States.

49485 U.S. 49c - Seminar in Public Policy: Health (Crown-Cotton)
M 2-5 Wms 10
This course will cover special topics related to health and social services identified as the most important issues of students in Urban Studies. Group projects enable students to explore certain health problems and to assess specific services will be undertaken. At least one health course and permission of the instructor are required.

49503 U.S. 9d - Action Programs - Potentials for Black Community Empowerment (Meek)
W 3-5 Wms 304
This course is designed to explore the empowerment potential of several kinds of community development and action programs that involve black communities: past, present, and future. The principal programs for examination will be those both government sponsored and privately supported ones, e.g. Model Cities, Revenue Sharing, Community Development Corporations. Specific examples will be analyzed regarding their potential for furthering economic and/or political empowerment in urban Black communities. These communities include Boston, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Ithaca, N.Y., New York City, and Wilmington, Delaware.

The principal format for the course will be discussions, with an expectation that assigned readings be completed. A final paper will be required.

49507 U.S. 49e - Seminar in Urban Public Policy: Race, Poverty, and Urban Social Change
F 10-1 Wms 1
The course will focus on the following areas: class inequality and the structure of racial domination, efforts at amelioration on the national, city, and neighborhood levels, and alternative possibilities for the situation of urban lower classes and big cities in a liberal-capitalist society.

49511 U.S. 60 - Introduction to Environmental Design (Lang)
T Th 9:30-11 Wms 5
During the past decade there has been a rejection of the belief held by many designers that the designed environment is a major determinant of social behavior. At the same time, it is clear the undue frustrations will be imposed on people if building and urban layouts do not meet their needs. A new field of study is emerging. It goes under various names, "environmental psychology," etc. and promises to present a theoretical foundation making many decisions regarding the man-made environment at both an urban and architectural level. The objective of the course is two-fold. First, the student must develop an understanding of the factors underlying the relationship between the behavior and decision-making process and the design and urban environment. Second, to introduce the student to the development of urban environmental design research.

49519 U.S. 80 - Fieldwork Seminar (Caswell)
Monday 7-9 p.m.
C-21 Sittell Hall
Intended for students who anticipate spring field placements, the course is designed to introduce students to the city of Philadelphia, providing the necessary background and perspective for undertaking field projects. The first half of the course will focus on the political, social, and economic history of the city and organizational structure. The second half of the course, conducted in small group format, will deal with specific research interests of students.

49528 U.S. 99 - Independent Study (Staff)
Independent research projects undertaken under the direction of a faculty member.

49542 U.S. 300 Senior Seminar (Glickman-Banfield)
Th 10-12, Wms 103
This course is designed to demonstrate and analyze the various forms of Public and Private institutional impediments to coherent urban governance and rational planning. It will not be an introductory course in urban planning. Topics include the determinants of regional growth, interpersonal variations in per capita income, the regional nature of regional growth, and changes in the regional distribution of industrial activity, etc.

49471 U.S. 24 - Urban Systems (Stewart)
M 4-6 Wms 5
This course is designed to analyze and synthesize various forms of Public and Private institutional impediments to coherent urban governance and rational planning. It will not be an introductory course in urban planning. Topics include the determinants of regional growth, interpersonal variations in per capita income, the regional nature of regional growth, and changes in the regional distribution of industrial activity, etc.

49472 U.S. 46 - Political Economy (Caswell)
T 3-6 McNeil 169
This course is concerned with the theoretical and empirical examination of the spatial aspects of regional and urban development. Topics include the determinants of regional growth, interregional variations in per capita income, the regional nature of regional growth, and changes in the regional distribution of industrial activity, etc.

Financial Aid Budget

$4,016 in July.

The vote to change the Financial Aid regulations will have a "timid" effect on University students because not many students were eligible for the changes.

The 1975-76 University financial aid, approximately 28% of which is derived from University funds, will be distributed to more students.

"We are taking the state to a new form, more formal responsibility for the school's welfare," Marshall stated.

He found that the vet school would become a state-affiliated school, while admitting he is aware as though we were a state-related school now.

Of the 288 students entering the coming term, almost all the 21 students from New England and New York, who are members of the University of New Hampshire, resident.

According to Marshall, many state-affiliated veterinary schools do accept students from their own states.

"A student of veterinary medicine can apply to at least two schools," he said, adding "there are enough schools to meet everyone's needs."

Merrick Mending Harriers' Hopes

By LUTHER JACKSON

The collegiate cross-country name of Penn Harrier Dave Merrick had no enemies and few friends on the Quaker's Hill Fairmount Park course. After emerging from high school as a two-time Illinois state champion, Merrick came to Penn, where as a freshman he was the Heptagonal Games ( Ivy League, Army and Navy) title, and garnered All-American honors at the NCAA.

Then he was bitten by a string of assorted physical and personal troubles which has kept him off cross-country courses and the track for three years; winning the Ivy title in the invitational. But, after a summer of "nice and easy" training, Merrick is finally ready to pick up where he last left off at the 1974 season with crippling injuries. "He's the nucleus needed to lead the "walking wounded" squad could form the nucleus needed to lead the Quaker team this coming season," said Starr "I might have to settle for second.

Shabbies is still a big question mark around Tuppeny. He is leaving the team for the spring track season, but the team will be strong enough to win with many minor injuries early in the season.

The addition of Merrick's speed and to an already solid core of veterans, led by senior captain Dave McManus, mass Kent Slaver and Mike Litbowli, Merrick coach Tuppeny with the "biggest problem of deciding on the fifteen runners to start the team for the opener against Radcliffe and Lehigh on September 26 Fairmount Park.

Indeed, it seems Tuppeny's only worry is a possible morals problem following a new NCAA Investigation on the university's role in the 1974 season, with the travel team. "I have a lot of stuff all along," he observed, "such great runners as (Senior great) Karl Thompson and (Junior hopeful) Dick Burke might have given me early in their careers because of lack of runs in the varsity lineup.

For all his physical trials, through, Merrick Harrier may have finally found his niche. "As a freshman I opened against I.aSalle and I'm this year, with many minor injuries early in the season."

"Trying to pick the right one to start him 6-2, 3-0." Meyer claimed. "I had it was a tough draw, and another opponent-and there were plenty of those for the Long Island junior was ready to Replace himself headed down the same road, was like Russian Roulette."

That was the best I played all summer, except Pittsburgh." noted Meyer in his most recent appearance.

"We may end up alternating all four players in the second and first games," continued Tuppeny. "One Out of Six Will Fire..."
