The Board of Directors of Graduate Hospital has created a foundation to raise funds for improving the hospital's services and facilities and for the acquisition of complete control of the hospital in fiscal year 1983.

The foundation, a 501(c)(3) organization, is named the Graduate Hospital Foundation. The foundation's board of directors is composed of six members, all of whom are officers of the hospital.

The foundation will maintain a fund-making committee separate from the university's development drive, the board of directors is in a position to place the hospital when its ownership changes hands.

Cramer said that Graduate Hospital is one of the few hospitals in the country that owns its facilities.

After considering the cost of major rehabilitation of the existing hospital, the university's development officers determined that the hospital must be acquired for the university to own its facilities, Cramer added.

The membership of the board of directors includes several former mayors and state legislators, as well as a number of financial professionals.

The British government convicted him of treason for the publication of pamphlets that advocated a violent overthrow of the monarchy.

In 1973, the University held a mayoral race, and Paul Scholfield, a newspaper publisher, was elected. The University has long been a net importer of oil. The imbalance in the balance of payments has become a major concern for Canadian businesses and proposed expansion of existing foreign controlled investment in Canada, over $26 billion comes from the U.S.

In October, the University marked a $34 million bond issue for the rehabilitation of the existing hospital, with an interest rate of 6.5 percent.

However, discovery of the French Revolution and condemnation of the British government's conduct led to a growing interest in the French Revolution and the American Revolution. The人流 of the crowd in the Quad is estimated at $300 million.
Dem Unit Fails To Make Choice
The Penn Young Democrats showed endorsing a Presidential candidate at their meeting Thursday night, although they voted overwhelmingly to support Congressman Bill Green for U.S. Senate.

The group heard representatives from three Democratic Presidential candidates—Senator Fred Harris, Congressman Morris Udall and Senator Gary Hart—as well as a series of local speakers who would not endorse any candidate for the Pennsylvania primary in April.

However, a depleted audience voted up to 50% off

One of the secrets to being happy with a component music system is to select a receiver with the right combination of power, FM separation and control facilities for your needs. With 15 watts minimum RMS per channel as shown in the chart, the Nikko 5055 AM/FM/WD receiver fits light into this system featuring Advent loudspeakers (the largest and best) and Jensen loudspeakers that happiness can cost you less than you ever imagined possible. Just listen to the way these Jensen 16 loudspeakers (two of them) with a Shure cartridge make your favorite music. Use one of the knobs in the face. It's one of the secrets to being happy with a component music system.

Dear Reader,

As you may have heard, I have been feeling quite pronounced relief from my work, and for that reason, I have decided to take a break from my usual column and write a personal reflection on the current state of the world.

First and foremost, I want to express my heartfelt gratitude to all of the brave individuals who have fought and continue to fight for freedom and justice. Whether it be through peaceful protests, acts of courage, or even personal sacrifice, these individuals have inspired me and continue to do so. Their stories are a testament to the power of the human spirit and the importance of standing up for what is right.

In my column, I often write about the importance of critical thinking and the dangers of complacency. I believe that it is essential to question the world around us and to be vigilant against any attempts to suppress or control our thoughts and actions. In this way, we can ensure that our democracy remains strong and that our freedoms are preserved.

I also want to take a moment to reflect on the current state of the world and the challenges that we face. While there are certainly reasons for concern, there are also reasons for hope. We have seen incredible progress in many areas, from science and technology to medicine and education. These developments have the potential to benefit all of us in ways that we cannot yet imagine.

Finally, I want to express my sincere hope that we can continue to work together towards a more just and equitable society. We must remain committed to the ideals of freedom, justice, and equality, and we must be willing to face the challenges that lie ahead. Only then can we truly harness the power of the human spirit and build a better future for all.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

The C.A. film brochure is available out at the C.A.

When the show ends, the audience erupts in an unparalleled burst of praise. The American Revolution has finally been made real before us, and we are overwhelmed by its impact.

The C.A. production, directed by Anthony Quinn, is a triumph of staging and acting. The cast, under the guidance of Quinn, delivers a masterful performance that leaves no doubt about the power and relevance of the Revolution.

The show opens with the arrival of British army fatigues, and Dave Topchik's brilliant parody of an American Flag dress into the hands of Nathan Hale. The audience is left in awe as the show opens a new chapter in American history.

The score is well treated by tile in-house orchestra, and the costumes are beautifully designed. The attention to detail is remarkable, from the fabric of the Revolution-era clothing to the authentic weapons of the time.

The show is a tour de force, with performances by familiar faces like Paul Revere and Betsy Ross. The characters are well developed and well performed, and the show leaves a lasting impression on the audience.

Brown Men, Women Test Swimmers

By JONATHAN LANNIER

The first weekend of the spring semester will be no party for the Penn men's and women's swimming teams. The semester will be no party for the Penn men's swimming team either, but just not enough.

"We knew that basically we're not competitive," Ciejek claimed. "With the Bruin height and their speed, we're just going to have to hit the boards hard, better here in high training towards towards towards towards."

A tougher fight is what the quakers will have to come up with Penn's men's swimming team. Zdrabko, the junior, will be back in the loop after a more than 10 year absence.

Re: BILLY SCHAGER
When Penn's backup team (14-3, 9-3) faces a time-inclusive No. 18 Princeton (19-1, 8-2) in January's last regular season home game, the possibility of a major 100-game stretch for the Quakers is a distinct possibility. Although the Princeton team has yet to play a game as formidable as the Mid-State's No. 1 ranking, a home victory would be a big upset for Princeton. If the Quakers win, they will have a chance to win the Ivy League championship. If the Princeton team wins, they will remain unbeaten and hold on to their first-place ranking. The Quakers have played some of the greatest teams in the country, but a win against Princeton would be a major accomplishment. The game will be played in Philadelphia, and both teams are expected to give their best efforts.

Re: LESTER EAPLY
Will the real Penn Quakers (5-6) please stand up? Are the basketball team that knocked off the Maryland basketball team and defeated Princeton last weekend? Or are they the team that lost to Cornell and Dartmouth earlier in the season? The Quakers have been inconsistent throughout the season, and their game against Princeton on Friday night will be a key test of their true talent.

Penn freshman Giants Slay Prep

Re: ROBIN TROPP
Penn freshman basketball seems to be doing everything wrong. The team has struggled to find chemistry and has been plagued by turnovers and mistakes. However, the team has shown improvement in recent games, especially against the strong Big Red. If the Quakers can continue to play at a high level, they could be a threat in the Ivy League.

Quaker Weekend: Three for the Road

Re: DAVID SCHRODER
If there's one thing that UMCO Jim Merrick is known for, it's his ability to plan and strategize. With the team facing a tough road trip against the Ivy League's top teams, Merrick and his coaching staff will need to come up with a plan to keep the team competitive. The Quakers will face tough opponents in each of their next three games, so it will be important for the team to stay focused and execute their game plans. The weekend will be a crucial period for the team to turn their season around and establish themselves as a serious contender in the league.
