Bordogna said Friday he wants to work to make the Moore School "the number one engineering school in a private, liberal arts institution.

Grad School Applications Up

By CAROL HUTCHINSON

Applications for admission to most Georgetown graduate schools have increased or remained equal to the numbers received last year.

Law School applications, for example, show a slight increase over the average of last year's applications at the 227 to 239 level.

The law school applications for admission this fall were up against last year's applications by 1 percent, amounting to an average of 230.

Bordogna said the school has received applications from 230 women, or 12 percent of the total, compared to 232 in 1971.

This year applications from women have increased 6 percent over last year; from 226 to 229.

Graduate applications for admission, he added, have increased 6 percent over last year's figures.

In the School of Foreign Service, 130 applications were received from women compared to 122 last year.

In the School of Industrial Administration, 38 applications were received from women, compared to 37 last year.

The School of Extension of Georgetown University received 27 applications from women, compared to 28 from 1971.

Law School Dean decided earlier this year to increase the freshmen class from 200 to 220.

Spurgeon said this decision was partially to enhance the school's financial position and partially to maintain a complete class.

Graduate School of Fine Arts (GEFA) Dean Peter Shepheard will step down after the 1971-72 academic year after six years in the post.

Shepheard was persuaded by University President Martin Meyerson to take the GEFA dean's seat when the vacancy was created after FAS faculty approved a new major March 2, will also evaluate the major.

The Undergraduate Communications Committee, formed to oversee these changes, consists of four FAS students and five faculty members.

The committee will be limited to ten members on a select committee for the Fine Arts Faculty Information Committee, after which a full committee will be formed by the Instructional Committee, North Shore.

"Most of the students who apply have been enrolled in communications courses," he said. "During the first semester they may decide to pursue this further, or they may lose interest in the major.
