Heat Wave Forces Workers To Leave Buildings Early

By FREDDIE SCHMID

Displacement, an important requirement for the acquisition of language, is a property possessed by both man and lower primates. The psychologist David Premack discussed his research in this area at a colloquium audience Monday.

Premack began with the presupposition that humans and higher primates can store information both in language (s)peech and in symbols. Additionally, humans and higher primates need to be able to operate in both languages.

Premack discussed language ability of chimpanzees (Continued on page 2)

Philadelphia Collegiate Past Topic of Baltzell Lecture

By KAREN AMORE

University sociology Professor Elly Battiss Baltzell lectured Monday night on the historical development of institutions of higher learning in the Philadelphia area.

Battzell reviewed the course of higher education from early colonial history to the Civil War period. He outlined the original sources of Arabic and Latin in the Philadelphia area.

Baltzell concluded that the course of higher education was essentially similar in all major regions, but that it varied considerably in local institutions.

Baltzell concluded his lecture with the delivery of a.tpology for the language development, particularly in the Philadelphia area. The lecture was based on his recent book, "Institutions of Higher Education in the United States."
The Daily Pennsylvanian

Page 3

DP Survey

Jackson and Udall Run Even in Student Trial Heat

By CHRIS JENNEWIN

The Daily Pennsylvanian

Page 3

DP Survey

Jackson and Udall Run Even in Student Trial Heat

By CHRIS JENNEWIN

The Daily Pennsylvanian

Page 3

DP Survey

Jackson and Udall Run Even in Student Trial Heat

By CHRIS JENNEWIN

The Daily Pennsylvanian

Page 3

DP Survey

Jackson and Udall Run Even in Student Trial Heat

By CHRIS JENNEWIN

The Daily Pennsylvanian

Page 3

DP Survey

Jackson and Udall Run Even in Student Trial Heat

By CHRIS JENNEWIN
Tuition: A New Installment Plan

By Jeff Edwards

In the past two weeks, the Nominations and Elections Committee (NEC) has made a series of decisions which in some instances overrode the interpretations of the Fair Practice Code (FPC) and the University Senate. As a member of the NEC, I wish to clarify the context and provide a firsthand account of the situation, based on the understanding of the NEC, the FPC, and the University Senate.

The NEC has always been open to suggestions for changes in the election process, and I personally support such changes. However, the NEC's actions have been inconsistent and contradictory, and the process has been rushed, with little opportunity for public debate and review.

Leadership Gap

By Larry Field

This school year has had its ups and downs for the Undergraduate Assembly (UA). Next year, unfortunately, the group will look different. Due to a recent change in the assembly's leadership, the Assembly will not have an executive vice-president, leaving a leadership gap that needs to be addressed.

The November election process was characterized by a lack of organization and a focus on personal interests rather than the needs of the student body. The NEC's decision to invalidate the election results and order a new election was a disappointment to many students, as it created additional uncertainty and confusion.

The NEC's actions have been controversial and have raised questions about the organization's role and responsibilities. It is important for the NEC to be transparent and accountable in its decision-making process, and to consider the views and concerns of all stakeholders before taking action.

Letters to The Editor: Tuition—A New Installment Plan

I am writing this letter to protest the recent increase in tuition fees at the University. The increase is particularly unfair to students who are already struggling to make ends meet.

The University administration has claimed that the increase in tuition is necessary to maintain the quality of education and to support financial aid programs. However, the current increase is not justified, and it will burden students with additional financial strain.

Tricks of the Trade

Well, now we see—its not really providing much, in fact University new tricks has bestowed upon us.

Being lightly fiscally disobedient we apparently decided to make good use of some of the purchase award savings, the shrinks have brass of the “we want six weeks rain wash- by demanding student tuition one month earlier.

The cost to the student with a 1 percent interest-paying credit account will be roughly $5 per semester.

The fall's tuition rises were at least equal to or in some cases higher than the national average for public and priva gate University level. This is a disturbing trend, and one that will certainly add to the already high cost of living for students.

Little wonder that many students are feeling the pinch and are struggling to make ends meet. It is important for the University to be aware of these concerns and to take steps to address them.

MacleNNly

Leadership Gap

The Future of Student Government

By Larry Field

The University has seen a significant leadership gap this year, as the Undergraduate Assembly (UA) has undergone a major change in its leadership. The new executive vice-president has been appointed after a competitive election, which resulted in a narrow victory for the candidate who ultimately secured the position.

The new executive vice-president has promised to address the leadership gap and to work towards strengthening the UA's role as a representative body for students. The new executive vice-president has stated that the UA will work towards increasing the involvement of students in the decision-making process and in the provision of services to the student body.

An analysis of the situation suggests that the leadership gap has been a result of the recent changes in the University administration, which have led to an increased focus on financial matters and a reduction in the resources allocated to the UA.

For Information Regarding Course Offerings, Please Contact the Admissions Office: Graduate School of Education 243-6455 B-13
Liberian Peace Force Pulls Out

The Liberian National Army announced yesterday that it would pull out of the UN peacekeeping force in Liberia. The announcement was made following a agreement between the government and the UN peacekeeping force.

The Liberian National Army said that its continued participation in the UN peacekeeping force would only serve to prolong the conflict in the region. The army said that it would cease its participation in the UN peacekeeping force effective immediately.

The announcement was welcomed by the UN peacekeeping force, which said that it was committed to maintaining peace and stability in the region. The UN peacekeeping force said that it would continue to work closely with the Liberian National Army to ensure that peace and stability are maintained in the region.

The Liberian National Army said that it would continue to work with the UN peacekeeping force to ensure that peace and stability are maintained in the region. The army said that it would continue to support the UN peacekeeping force in its efforts to maintain peace and stability in the region.

The Liberian National Army said that it would continue to work with the UN peacekeeping force to ensure that peace and stability are maintained in the region. The army said that it would continue to support the UN peacekeeping force in its efforts to maintain peace and stability in the region.

The Liberian National Army said that it would continue to work with the UN peacekeeping force to ensure that peace and stability are maintained in the region. The army said that it would continue to support the UN peacekeeping force in its efforts to maintain peace and stability in the region.

The Liberian National Army said that it would continue to work with the UN peacekeeping force to ensure that peace and stability are maintained in the region. The army said that it would continue to support the UN peacekeeping force in its efforts to maintain peace and stability in the region.
Quakers' Run 11-Smashes Textile

By DANNY SHERR

When Eamonn Coughlan came to Villanova four years ago, he was a 2:12 miler and a junior champ in Ireland. When he came to the Penn Relays this weekend, he's a senior Mainliner, "a world-class guy," according to Penn three-miler John Clark. When it comes down to the last lap, those guys always seem to find some way to get the win.

"He did his homework, probably more than anybody," said Pete Beirne, Villanova's head coach. "But he had no idea he would improve so much.

Penn coach Tim Tupper was quick to danger. "I made the statement the first year he was at Villanova that he would be the greatest distance runner ever to come out of Villanova." Taking into consideration outstanding distance runners like Ron Delaney, Marty Liquori, and John Hartnett, that's no small assertion. "I realize I'm running with a whole new batch of world-class athletes," Coughlan said.

But he had no social life, only the same type of things that a Villanova student does. "He was funny, he said, "we had a good time and I don't think we did much.""

On the course and moved the race into the heat from the Denver Show. Meanwhile, however, the marathon..."