THE STATE VOTES

Democratic Race: Where the Candidates Stand

When Jimmy Carter, ia candidate for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination, formally announced his candidacy last month, he outlined his economic and social programs in a speech that was widely praised. Although he still calls himself "a firm believer in the public enterprise system," close examination of his proposals reveals that many of them are more moderate than he has been credited with. For example, although he has long supported increased federal spending to stimulate hiring by private firms, he has put forth an economic plan that calls for the government to reduce its role in the economy.

Primary Voters Choose Delegates, Pick Candidate in ‘Beauty Race’

A vote in any election has a different meaning for Pennsylvania voters today than it did for those who cast ballots in the 19th century. In the days when candidates often walked from door to door on Election Day to urge support, the vote was a means of determining who would succeed the incumbent. Today, the vote is a means of determining who will succeed the incumbent in a subsequent election.

As Pennsylvania voters prepare to cast their ballots in the Democratic primary, the candidates are vying for the support of the state's 174 delegates. The candidates are: Senator Al Gore, Representative David Sibley, and Representative James Clyburn.

Penn Union Council Complains About Coverage

Penn Union Council, national co-bedroom of the College Republicans, has filed a complaint with the Student Association, alleging that faculty members of the student press are favoring the Democratic candidates in the presidential contest.

The complaint, sent to the Committee on Student Publications on Tuesday, May 4, alleges that "All faculty members who write for or appear on the student press are consistently favoring the Democratic candidates in the presidential campaign."

The complaint charges that this bias has been "observed over a period of many months and is a general state of affairs among faculty members who write for the University Press, 34th Street, the Collegian and the Daily Pennsylvanian."

The complaint goes on to say that the bias is "also reflected in the activities of the student press, where the editorial page in particular has been consistently biased in favor of the Democratic candidates."

The complaint charges that the bias has been "observed over a period of many months and is a general state of affairs among faculty members who write for the University Press, 34th Street, the Collegian and the Daily Pennsylvanian."

The complaint urges the Committee on Student Publications to take action to "correct this situation and ensure that the student press is fair and unbiased in its coverage of the presidential campaign."

The complaint is endorsed by Robert T. Smith, President of the Penn Union Council. Smith is a strong supporter of the Republican ticket and has been active in the campaign for Ronald Reagan.

CARTER CONFIDENT OF PENNSYLVANIA VICTORY

By FRED SCHNEYER

Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter told a Philadelphia press conference Friday that he thought Senator Barry Goldwater's campaign has "for all practical purposes, collapsed." He also indirectly criticized Senator Hubert Humphrey for not entering any of the presidential primaries while still not ruling out a last minute entrance into the contest.

"I believe that the convention (scheduled for Aug. in New York) would be making a serious mistake if they nominate a candidate who has not entered a primary or caucus state," Carter said.

The more significant aspect of the economic policy section included Carter's call for a balanced federal budget based on full employment for 1979. The government currently allows for an unemployment rate of approximately five percent when formulating the budget.

Carter said he supported an expansionary fiscal and monetary policy aimed mostly at private sector to stimulate demand and production thereby increasing jobs.

Carter said he supported a radical change in the federal government's budgeting system calling for future budgets to be developed over a three year basis.

According to Carter's prepared statement, "the three year rolling budget technique will permit businessmen and public officials to do a much better job in long-range planning and projecting future needs."

Small Fire Breaks Out In Quadrangle Dorm Room

By TERENCE GROSS

A one-room fire of undetermined origin broke out Sunday night in a room in E.F. Smith dormitory in the Quadrangle.

According to several Fire Department officials, the fire started in window shelves in the side room of a three room suite. The alarm was called about 8:57 p.m. by Department officials, the fire started as a result of three refrigerators and an air conditioner being plugged into one electrical outlet.

The occupants of the room, Arthur Kravitz, Carlos Soriano and John Holland, were not in the room when the fire started. Harnwell Arts Votes to Move To Renovated Section of Quad

By JOEL SIEGEL

Although construction will not be completed until the end of this year, administrators will decide by April whether or not to move the Harnwell Arts Project to its new location. Those who have voted overwhelmingly in favor of moving are members of the Harnwell Arts Co-op, which the Arts Project has voted overwhelmingly to move to the Quad.

In a poll conducted this weekend, 87 percent of the Co-op members indicated that they would not be opposed to the move. "We felt it was appropriate to see whether people wanted to move into an open-ended situation," Arts Project Master Rich Warach said Sunday. He added that some members might not want to suffer through construction.

The new Harnwell Arts building will be the first step in the University's planned Quad renovation program. There will be 18 spaces for project members in the first renovated area, which includes Brodhead, Freesteen, McKean, and parts of the Class of 97 and Franklin houses in the upper Quad. The estimated cost for the new arts building is slightly over $2 million.

At this point no definitive housing plans have been drawn for current members not wishing to move into the Quad. Although refurbish plans drawn have been completed, there is some possibility that they will be permitted to remain in the high rise.

In addition, Shirk noted that it would be difficult to ascertain exactly how many tickets were printed for the show and how many tickets were lost. She said accurate records of the number of tickets printed were not kept.

Approach spring with a negative attitude.

The Nature Store offers one of the most positive ways to seek out spring there is. A negative herb. A small, black one that only grows in your garden, in your office planter, on the porch, in the yard. It is the one that you move to the spring and actually enjoy it.

First, your heel is lower than the fan to join, the wind with the way you want them. And the size of every Nature Store is contained to match the actual size of the house. If you can't find it from your house, it's not there.

Inside-won't the Nature Store that you can find on your feet, free ticket. When you enter, you'll find the inner sole comfortably abs!ent from other shoes of the kind. Plus extra support for the backprop, negative heel shoes which would move. The Nature Store offers a 60-day bottom and half-cushion return policy. Knowing all this, buying a pair of Nature shoes from your own foot.

The Nature Store is just how you want it.

Tennismen Sink Navy, Fall to Tough Tigers

BY BRAD BILLING

It is possible for the Penn tennis team to play two of its best matches of the season consecutively and still not win either. That is what happened to the Tigers on April 17 when they beat the Quakers, 6-2, and the Columbia Lions, 5-3.

The Tigers, resting comfortably on top of the EITA, thrashed the Quakers with the help of singles matches won by Ricky Meyer, ace of the Penn netmen (7-6) Saturday in five of the six singles matches with only Herb Benham, Princeton's No. 2 singles, able to stop his march. The Quakers were led by Dan Przybyl, who managed to win only one of the six singles matches.

Penn's Chemist, Mark Softy continued his effective hurling, as he won both of his matches with a total of 17 strikeouts in his four innings.

Meanwhile, Penn starter Tom Hoon arrived to the game to throw only nine innings, the special lefty reliever only one out. The win marked his first of the season.

Tiger second baseman Bruce Becker, a senior, knocked the Penn batters out of the game by a 5-3 margin in the ninth, easily coming away with the win. This was the second straight season that Becker had knocked the Penn batters out of the game.

Previously, Becker was the star of the game against the University of Pennsylvania, leading the Tigers to the EITA championship.

Tiger reliever Mike Halowicki, who had not pitched in the previous two games, came in to finish the Penn game with a quick 1-2-3, bringing the total to 12 strikeouts in the nine innings. Becker was able to hold the Penn batters to a 1-2-3 in the first inning with his first batter of the day, but the rest of the Penn batters were not able to get a hit.

The 82nd Penn Relays

By DAVID SCHLAGER

As the gun went off, the world's fastest humans burst out of the blocks. The four runners began to sprint, their legs churning at an ever-increasing rate. Only seconds later the tape broke and the world's fastest mile was run.

The 82nd Penn Relays, held on the campus of the University of Pennsylvania, was a spectacle of speed and skill.

The race was a test of endurance, of strength, and of strategy. Each runner had to pace himself, to conserve energy for the final stretch.

Reggie Jones Anchors Speed-Laden Tennessee Volunteers to World Best

By ED JAMES

On a cold, overcast day, the track at Franklin Field was wet and slippery. The runners struggled to maintain their footing, but none more so than Tennessee's Reggie Jones.

Jones, a member of the Olympic Development team, was making his debut in the mile. He was not alone, for the field was filled with talented athletes from across the nation.

Jones was not deterred by the conditions. He ran with determination and focus, his gaze fixed on the finish line.

As he neared the tape, he pushed his body to the limit. The wind was against him, but he didn't let it slow him down. With every stride, he gained on his competitors.

At the tape, Jones crossed in 3:57.7, a time that would go down in history as one of the greatest in American track and field.

Jones had run a race of a lifetime, and he knew it. He turned to the crowd and raised his arms in triumph.

The crowd roared in appreciation, their cheers echoing across the field. For Reggie Jones, it was a moment of pure joy.

But Jones wasn't alone in his success. Other athletes were also turning in impressive performances.

Steve Williams, running for the University of Florida, set a new world record in the 400-meter dash. His time of 43.1 broke the previous mark of 43.2 set by Canada's Mark Tschabik in 1974.

Joy Cummings, representing the United States, won the women's 200-meter dash. Her time of 22.13 was the fastest ever recorded in the event.

These were just a few of the incredible performances on display at the 82nd Penn Relays. The meet was a testament to the incredible talent and skill that exists in American track and field.

As the sun began to set over Franklin Field, the crowd was left in awe of the athletes who had come together to compete for glory.

The 82nd Penn Relays was a day to remember, a day that would be etched into the memories of all who were lucky enough to witness it.
