Hannibal Quintet Slated For Foxhole Performance
LINDA FISHBURN
It is understandable why Marvin Peterson changed his name to Hannibal. He has absorbed much of the culture and musicianship of New Black Music. A native of Texas, he has absorbed much of the "north of the Rio" feelings blare out in all of the trumpeter's music. Hannibal's only recording is one he did with "Children of the Play" which was dedicated to the memory of great jazz saxophonist Sonny Stitt. His new group, to appear on the 44th annual Stitt Memorial Concert this Friday night at 8 at the Foxhole, features bass for both the Revolutionary Ensemble and the Dewey Redman Quartet.

"Declaration" Spoofs Bicen
By JOHNNY ZEPPEL
On Sunday at 8:30 P.M. in Houston Hall Auditorium, the National Theatre Company will stage their take their way through 200 years of American history in "Declaration," a one-act play which is about two homos in love mind you). "Declaration" is the brainchild of Edward Albee's blazing satire "All in the Family" in that liberals will laugh at Of American ideals, as well as favorite American pastimes like materialism and political spies. It considers obsession as a form of sexual sublimation, and "Butterflies are Free," "The Age of Sham," and "The Miracle Worker." A typical company season begins in the summer months when casting and rehearsals take place in New York City. During this time sets are being constructed by professional scenic artists, costumes are being designed and made, and the� music, acting and directing set up as special service. The play is followed by The American Dream, Edward Albee's blaring satire of American ideals, as well as favorite American pastimes like materialism and political spies. The play is similar to "All in the Family" in that liberals will laugh at Of American ideals, as well as favorite American pastimes like materialism and political spies.

What Power and Money Can't Buy

By Janet Novack

There's a popular myth around this University, that if you only went to the Wharton School of Business you might have one of those dreamy jobs. It's a myth, of course, and it's not entirely false. But the truth is, even the most successful Whartoneer of them all would be a failure if he or she tried to sell a newspaper. That's right, I'm talking about the New York Times. But that's another story.

So, what does this have to do with power and money? Well, let me tell you. You see, power and money are like the two sides of a coin. One side is shiny and new, while the other is worn and used. And it's not just the coin that's used, it's the person who holds it. You see, power and money can buy you a lot of things, but they can't buy you respect. And that's what we're really talking about here.

But let me tell you more about the Wharton School. It's a place where the best and the brightest come to learn about the world of business. And, let's face it, it's a tough world. It's a world where power and money rule. And it's a world where respect is earned, not bought.

But let me tell you a little more about this University. It's a place where the future is bright. It's a place where new ideas are born. And it's a place where people come to learn about the world and how to change it. And it's a place where respect is earned, not bought.

But let me tell you about the power of this University. It's a power that's been built over the years. It's a power that's been earned. And it's a power that's been respected.

But let me tell you about the money of this University. It's a money that's been earned. It's a money that's been respected. And it's a money that's been used to change the world.

But let me tell you about the respect of this University. It's a respect that's been earned. It's a respect that's been respected. And it's a respect that's been earned.

But let me tell you about the future of this University. It's a future that's bright. It's a future that's full of possibilities. And it's a future that's respected.

But let me tell you about the past of this University. It's a past that's full of history. It's a past that's full of stories. And it's a past that's respected.

But let me tell you about the present of this University. It's a present that's full of ideas. It's a present that's full of opportunities. And it's a present that's respected.

But let me tell you about the Wharton School. It's a school that's full of power. It's a school that's full of money. And it's a school that's full of respect.

But let me tell you about this University. It's a place where the future is bright. It's a place where new ideas are born. And it's a place where people come to learn about the world and how to change it. And it's a place where respect is earned, not bought.

And that's the story. The story of power and money and respect. And that's the story of this University. And that's the story of the Wharton School of Business.

Carter Win Spurs Optimistic Look To Future White House Residence

By ELLIS M. RODERICK

Carter was expected to appear in the White House residence on his first full day as president, April 28, 1976. With this new status, he is expected to play a key role in the Democratic campaign for the White House. In his inaugural address, Carter said, "I am prepared to serve the people of this nation with loyalty, integrity, and honor."

Although his victory was expected to be a landslide, Carter’s team was optimistic about the outcome. "We’re going to stay number one all the way to the convention," said a campaign spokesman. "We’re going to stay number one all the way to the convention." Carter’s team was confident that the win would give him a boost in his campaign for the presidency.

POOR RICHARD'S RECORD

361 Locust Walk

April 26-April 30

Where great beaches are just the beginning.

You'll find just about every kind of beach along our two hundred miles of Pacific coastline. Beaches of white, gray and black volcanic sand. Beaches for snorkeling, fishing, sunbathing and even surfing (at Santa, you might find the perfect wave). And all within a year-round springlike climate.

In fact, because El Salvador is a small country, you'll discover dozens of exciting activities within easy reach. Water skiing on shimmering crater lakes. Colobial churches and soaring native markets. Towering volcanoes and cloud-covered forests. Or dash dotted after dark.

And El Salvador is one of the most affordable vacation spots in the world, with every type of accommodation, from first class hotels to scenic camping sites. The rate of exchange for the dollar is the same as in 1934—so your money still goes a long way. Best of all, you'll find our local residents are friendly as the year-round springlike climate.

Send us the coupon below, and we'll send you more information on El Salvador. (Special note: if you'd like to represent El Salvador on your campus and help organize group tours, we can make your campus one of the most rewarding.)

Batsmen Swat to Overtake Lions...

By PAUL BEHEUT

The weekend that was supposed to close out the Ivy League series at Franklin Field has been rendered meaningless by the sudden emergence of another team in the mix, Colorado. The Buffaloes, who had 4-0 records in both parts of the Ivy, are now 5-0-1 in the conference and are the picture of health both offensively and defensively. The Buffs, who are coming off a convincing win over Penn, are confident that they can handle Columbia's offense, which is averaging 6.8 runs per game.

Columbia, for their part, are no pushovers. They have a solid defense and a strong pitching rotation. The Lions, who are hoping to capture their third straight Ivy title, know that they will have to play their best baseball if they want to come out on top.

If Columbia does have a weakness it's their defense. The pitching corps is led by junior left-hander Tyler Ford, who has been a solid performer all season. Columbia's offense, on the other hand, has struggled at times. However, they have managed to score enough runs to keep the team in the mix.

The Tigers, who are coming off a 12-5 victory over Harvard, know that they will have to play their best baseball if they want to come out on top. The Tigers have a solid pitching rotation, but their offense has been inconsistent at times.

The Ivy League is known for its close games, and this one should be no different. The Tigers and Buffs are both in the mix for the Ivy title, and this game will go a long way in determining who comes out on top.
