GRADUATION ISSUE

Financial Aid recommended that the Committee on Admissions and referred back to committee at the opposition by minority students, a resolution to limit the number of students admitted to the University who are predicted to earn low grades. The Council than 2.0 actually attain a grade-point of less 30 percent of those students admitted was based on a recent Admissions Council study which revealed that 30 percent of these students admitted would have been cut considerably. "It has been a privilege." Beck concluded, to help create a "great relationship with the University."

Planned Opening of U. Co-op Forces Relocation of Snack Bar

By Fred Schneyer

The University Space Committee has granted four days of closure to the student-run snack bar in the Student Center, which was set up by the student-run snack bar in the Student Center, which was set up by three weeks of deliberations by the University Space Committee. The committee was formed by President Martin Meyerson to coordinate requests for space in the Student Center presently located in the basement of the 300 Commons.

The opening of the dining service outlet will necessitate the relocation of the snack bar. The University has not yet determined a new location for the snack bar. The University is still waiting for an answer to its request for space in the Furness Carriage House, presently located in the basement of the 300 Commons.

The decision to move the snack bar was made by the Space Committee at its meeting on Wednesday. The committee was formed by President Martin Meyerson to coordinate requests for space in the Student Center.

The ICSE proposal for a revolution in education is a bold, innovative, and largely practical scheme that, if implemented, would put an end to the prevailing order of academic reform. The plan, which is designed to get the most out of students and put them back at education where they belong, draws on a wide range of ideas that have already been broadly accepted, place greater importance on the overall development of the student, and make available intellectual and intellectual tools. The ICSE proposal is not without its critics, but its supporters argue that it is a step forward that will lead to a true shake 'em up revolution? Forget It academic reform.

The ICSE plan for an educational revolution is designed to replace the current system of grading with a new system that is "more comprehensive and tailored to the needs of each student." The proposal calls for a "student-centered" approach to education, which would allow students to develop their own interests and abilities. The ICSE plan also calls for an end to standardized testing and the elimination of large lecture courses. The proposal would replace grades with a system of ratings that are based on the student's performance in each course.

The ICSE plan has been met with mixed reactions. Some educators have praised the proposal for its innovative ideas, while others have criticized it for being too radical. However, the ICSE proposal has sparked much debate and has already influenced the way some universities are thinking about their grading systems.

The ICSE plan is a step in the right direction, but it is not the only solution to the problems facing higher education today. As the debate continues, it is important to remember that the goal should be to create a system of education that is designed to help students achieve their full potential, rather than simply to prepare them for a career.

Forget-Ne-Me Win
For Penn Seniors

BY LUTHER JACKSON

After seeing Ed Jones come up the lanes prior to last Saturday's 100-meter dash at the NCAA Eastern Regional in Philadelphia, Dick Lebowitz had a field day. "Jones hasn't changed a bit," said Lebowitz. "He's just as fast as ever, but he's not as flashy. He's still the same old Ed Jones." Jones, who has been a star on the Penn track team for the past three years, had just finished first in the 100-meter dash with a time of 10.3 seconds. He later showed his versatility by taking second place in the 200-meter dash and was not available to help Penn battle Maryland for the Championships. "I'm not sure what I'll do next," said Jones. "I'm just happy to be here and to help Penn win the Championships." Jones, who has been a member of the Penn track team since his freshman year, has been a dominant force on the track throughout his career. He has won numerous championships and has set several records. "I'm proud of what I've accomplished," said Jones. "I've worked hard to get here and I'm not going to let anything stand in my way of achieving my goals."

Penn's 10K NCAA performance was the best Quaker effort ever since 1976. "We really pulled it off," said head coach Bill Hamlin. "The team was ready and was able to hold off the Penn State runners." James Brown and Horace Sununu, who finished third and fourth, respectively, were instrumental in helping Penn win the 10K. "James and Horace both had a great day," said Hamlin. "They gave it their all and helped us to a victory."

In the 1500-meter run, Robbie Perkins won the gold medal with a time of 3:40.07. "I'm really happy," said Perkins. "I've been working hard all season to get to this point and I finally did it. It feels great." Perkins, who has been a member of the Penn track team since his freshman year, has been a dominant force in the 1500-meter run throughout his career. He has won numerous championships and has set several records. "I'm proud of what I've accomplished," said Perkins. "I've worked hard to get here and I'm not going to let anything stand in my way of achieving my goals."

In the 5000-meter run, Michael Smith won the gold medal with a time of 13:33.28. "I'm really happy," said Smith. "I've been working hard all season to get to this point and I finally did it. It feels great." Smith, who has been a member of the Penn track team since his freshman year, has been a dominant force in the 5000-meter run throughout his career. He has won numerous championships and has set several records. "I'm proud of what I've accomplished," said Smith. "I've worked hard to get here and I'm not going to let anything stand in my way of achieving my goals."

The Penn track team finished second in the Championships, collecting a total of 50 points. "We were really happy with our performance," said head coach Bill Hamlin. "We had a great team and we worked hard to get here. We're really proud of what we accomplished."
