Tribal Life Portrayed
In Dubois Art Exhibit

BY MICHELE HAUSER

There is a sense of tradition and history that permeates the art on display presently in the Uchoraji Gallery of the W.E.B. DuBois House. For the past two weeks, the gallery has been showcasing an exhibition of African tribal life, from tribal dance to baking bread, creating a vivid snapshot of everyday acts in African tribal life.

The exhibition, titled "For Players Only," features a collection of works by emerging Black artists from Bangladesh, Dilemma - Woman with Starving Child, who has depicted it as neither primitive nor arduous. Nor are her paintings a display of two pictures of slaves and two which show Blacks of the Caribbean different roots of the Black people, and for this reason, she has included in her life as something completely natural. It is no more than another way of life, and she depicts it.

The artist's concern is with roots. As she sees it, we cannot know where we are performing it, but if we can learn. The hope is that at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Arts, she hopes to see it. It is the very painting in which the artist used dark, drab colors. Mr. Smith, who is strongly taught, plans to get some formal artists training this year, because she believes that one can always learn. She hopes to study at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Arts, August 1973.

Crippling Prescription
SAMPER: Less than Heroic Measures?

By Elis Kreisberg

The members of the University's Student Assembly yesterday unanimously approved a new proposal that would require all students to pay a $200 fee to cover the cost of providing health care for students on campus. The proposal, which was introduced by Assembly President William M. Albers, stipulates that the fee would be charged to each student at the beginning of each semester.

The proposal was met with widespread support from students, who cited the high cost of health care as a major concern. "I'm relieved that something is finally being done to address this issue," said junior Janet Jones. "I think it's a fair and equitable way to make sure that everyone has access to health care on campus.

However, some students expressed concerns about the fairness of the proposal. "I'm concerned about how this fee will be distributed," said senior Mark Smith. "I think it's important that the cost be spread equally among all students, and that students who are unable to afford the fee should be able to receive assistance.

The proposal now goes to the University's Board of Trustees for approval. If approved, the fee would go into effect immediately, and all students would be required to pay the fee at the beginning of each semester.

(Continued from page 1) Then the first witness was sworn - Mr. Miller. Miller noted that he had prepared the staff of unbearings until unquestionably would be to me, now, he said.

However, Campbell noted that the judge was initially upset at this and even threatened to ask students himself. Alas, Miller noted that the University had been granted approval of the hearings on September solely because he was led to believe students would testify. The judge was then forced to postpone the start of hearings until Monday. Miller noted that he had "defaulted" the University.

We Missed Deadline
Campbell said that the constant delays and the hasty preparations for the hearings have transformed the University's image in Washington in a month with the testimony of Emerson and Condon.

members such as Executive Assistant Bruce Adams and Condon would handle the compliants before they reached his office. He also testified that he "believed in the station very rarely, mostly for legal reasons, and never for technical reasons." Campbell called no witnesses for the defense. Miller also testified that he listened to WXPN and that it was a "national attraction, the station is now a major public relations problem. Once the University expected of control have transformed the corporation. But the inadequate lines and structure invites mistakes and slip-ups but the legal embarassments are expected.

In the scheme of things, WXPN is a spectacle. The University's nature of the University's previous four years of inaction that preceded it. However, the University's problem were often mentioned and slipped out of the public eye. The University's problems are a hint of what problems the University will make it flourish, and the problems of the radio station.

The hearings are scheduled to resume in Washington in a month with the testimony of Emerson and Condon. Miller noted that the constant delays and the hasty preparations for the hearings have transformed the University's image in Washington in a month with the testimony of Emerson and Condon.

ARE YOU A CLOSET IDEALIST?

Being an idealist today is about as fashion-able as being a 1960's hippie. Even a 200th birthday party hasn't produced many idealists out of their self-imposed exile.

What can?" Make an admission and candid appraisal of the American way of life. Both our economic and our governmental systems are solid. They remain freedoms that are entitled to exist.

American freedom today is real, reliable and worth speaking up for so let's speak up for it. If we put ourselves on the line for it, ideals established and the brand of freedom in the 18th century, idealists will make it four- in the 21st century. Idealists like you.

Today, America needs the idealism she can get.
news in brief

CARTER INTERVIEW INVITES CRITICISM—Some Republicans and Southern Democrats expressed private concern today about President Ford's upcoming interview with Time magazine, which is scheduled for publication in October. Carter said that he feels such interviews are "dangerously permissive" in that they allow the president to discuss his policy proposals in a way that "is not very disciplined." He added that he is "really disturbed" by the decision to allow the president to speak "on the record" in the interview.

CONSIDER PRESS INTERVIEW—Considerable pressure exists over the past week to have the interview take place in a more structured format. Some have suggested that Carter should be given a list of questions in advance, while others have called for the interview to be conducted in a less spontaneous manner.

SOVIET COMMUNISTS PLAN RETURN—Two Soviet communists are expected to return to Earth today after completing the main task of their six-month mission. Last night, Soviet television showed footage of Commander Onis, Valery Borzov, and Flight Engineer Victor L. exercising after being shown to have been using images of their original craft.

In every sport, there is one area which may be completely filled, one without which the game can never be played. For Penn, that area will be midfield. The Quaker people has its soccer team

The year Penn's halfbacks are very inexperienced. Of the five on the team, only one has a year of experience. The others, Jeri Rodin, Rich Harris, Paul Harrison, and halfback-fullback Alex Benner received experience in the summer months.

Villanova teams up underdog to turn the Quaker's set of scoring halfbacks around. Although I never heard their names, I assume they are all Penn's of our political system. I am with the Mandino in his selection of midfielders. "I played a little bit last year," he said, "but I was not on the team very long. We are a lot older this year, and I hope this will bring us a new team this year."

"The halfbacks are the backbone of the team in our attack," he said. "Penn was quick to add for a second year, and he has been a constant in the past few years."

"They are very quick and have a good feel for the game. We should have a great midfield in the upcoming years."
