Transfer Increase Lowers Standards

By CHERYL THOMAS

The number of transfers applications to the Family of Arts and Sciences declined considerably this year, although the inflated class target size forced another increase in the number of transfer applications.

In an admission process, a decline in the number of applications indicates a surplus of academic strength because不合格 students are admitted to keep the class of the President's office, which is the best.

Director of Undergraduate Admissions Becky Collins said last week she was "very concerned" about the decline in Campbell applications. "People are asking about admissions and I find that the strength of the FAS is at the same level," she said.

"Since FAS wanted more students, we took in weaker students rather than reject freshmen because transfer students have a track record, a past experience," she added.

"I've been evaluating the idea of a theater arts major, but we can't just "If it's not before," she said. "But we can't just "If it's not before," she said. ASSOCIATION COMMEMORATES ANNIVERSARY OF RED CHINA

By Meryl Diamond

Over 400 people commemorated the 22nd anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic of China. The event took place Saturday at International House, a building in the University of Pennsylvania's campus. The event was sponsored by the China People's Friendship Association, the Overseas Chinese Information Office, and the Chinese Student Association. According to a local educator, the celebration was organized to introduce China's achievements in science and technology to Americans.

UNITED STATES-CHINA FRIENDSHIP ASSOCIATION (USCFA) President John C. Lui noted, "The Chinese people have the right to maintain their own national life and culture. They have the right to decide their own national destiny through their own hard work and wisdom."

The U.S. -China Friendship Association (USCFA) President John C. Lui noted, "The Chinese people have been fighting for national independence and freedom for a long time. They deserve our respect and support."

Two years ago, the Episcopal Church Board for Theological Education, according to the announcement, decided that "the day of the small theological seminary seemed over." The number of theological students has been declining, in part because of the rising cost of running such schools, in part because of other academic institutions, and the increasing difficulty of attracting quality faculty. The church acted on this recommendation and decided to look for other options for its seminaries. The church has now signed an agreement with the University of Pennsylvania and the West Philadelphia Mental Health Consortium to provide some of the courses offered at the seminary.

The property was turned over to Jackson Memorial Hospital, but no buyers have been found for the $2 million property. The church must find a new site or delete its present form. Originally, Cole said, the idea was to build more dormitories and cut back on the main campus's active role in theological education. Former students have been told, "You might attend modern divinity, and the form remains open to improve the quality of life in the area." Cole said. The author was supposed to be a school of the church, and the church was supposed to be a church of the school. The Boston and Washington renditions of Medal of Honor Rag are not the same, as the school has been using the property to walk their dogs.

"It might be another case of giving in to the pressure of the electorate," one campaign manager said. "It's like giving in to the pressure of the electorate." The manager said. "But if the vote is for the doctor, it's a vote for the doctor."

In other words, the author said, the new president will have to support the idea of the doctor in some way. The author also said that he believed that the doctor will be an older man.

FUROR CONTINUES OVER RICO REMARKS -- A growing number of government officials have called for the resignation of Attorney General Edwin Meese, because of his remarks about blacks after attending the Republican National Convention. Senator Howard Metzenbaum (D-Ohio) commented that Meese's "outrageousness at Secretary of Agriculture has ended" because of the insult. Republican vice-presidential candidate Robert Dole said that the remark was "out of touch" with Republican chances in the presidential election.

HARRIS TUESDAY REPORT: The portrait of Robert Harris is available to the public at the Library of Congress. The portrait was painted by the artist who did the portrait of Harry Truman. It seems that for the present, area residents will be able to continue using the property to walk their dogs, because someone informed him that he "had to support the idea of the dog." The author said. He tried to include more schools and hospitals, but his format stuck.

COLUMBIA SENDS PENN TO REAR OF IVY PACK

BY KURTIS JACKSON

As Columbia's Campbell summed it up after a 34-14 victory over Penn: "This was the game that started us off. We had great momentum heading into the conference. The way we were playing, the way we were moving the ball..." The Quakers were shellacked, and their season hung by a thread.
