Vet School Budget Balance Likely Due to Increased State Funding

By STEVEN A. MARQUEZ

The University School of Veterinary Medicine expects for the first time in many years to have a balanced budget.

"For 1977 we will find it will be balanced," said President Robert Nathan. "We haven't had a balanced budget since 1975.

The budget surplus is mainly the result of a $3.5 million increase from the state legislature that increases the school's appropriation by 50 percent over the 1975 grant. Another state grant that gives the school $500,000 was released by health and human services.

Although there is a surplus, Mar quez noted that it would be prudent to continue small "band-aid" repairs to the campus buildings.

The decision in March was hailed by many veterinary students as a victory of sorts in the Vet School's fight for its independence.

Selection of a new museum director will probably come from those who are accepted from the current staff.

CAMPUS EVENTS

A notice to be placed in "Campus Events" must be submitted by 3 P.M. two days prior to the date it is to be published. Notices should be limited to 25 words. No notices will be accepted for any event or service with an admissions charge or fee. We must impose a limit of three notices per event. Official notices must be properly authorized by a faculty member or administrator.

When announcing the time of an event use the following format: "at 11 A.M. today," or "at 7:30 P.M. Monday."

"Today refers to the day the notice will be printed. Otherwise, write the day of the week; if more than one week off, write the date. Capitalize only those letters which you wish to be capitalized in print.

The Daily Pennsylvanian reserves the right to edit or eliminate notices due to space limitations.
Prisoners
Law Project Protects Rights Behind Bars

By JEFFREY N. BARKER

One year before the state began its investigation into the Farview State Mental Hospital, University Law students did the groundwork for a case which eventually brought about the eventual release or transfer of 400 patients from the controversial institution.

The law students were working in the mental health arm of the Law Project, a nonprofit organization, which engages in social and political justice issues. The project’s work is directed toward a variety of goals, including the protection of the rights of prisoners and patients whose care has been handled by state hospitals.

The students’ work, which concentrates most of its efforts on Farview, an institution called “a mental health nightmare” by the American Bar Association, has been handled by the students’ legal services lawyer, Ed Tiryak. He has been assisted by a staff of volunteer doctors and nurses.

The project’s services are available to anyone who asks for them, even those who are unaware of the project’s existence. The project has been handling a large number of cases, including those of criminal defendants and those of patients who are mentally ill.

We Think You Should Read This because you pay too much!

Many times in the short future—maybe even now—you are going to be involved with publishing some material to be distributed to the public.

That material might be a newspaper or a magazine. It might be a brochure or a pamphlet or a program or a flyer. It might even be your resume.

Whatever it is to be printed, you want it to be the best there is. There is no better way to guarantee the quality of your publication than to produce it with phototype. There is no place less expensive than DP Graphics for Phototypesetter to purchase phototype.

DP Graphics is the composition shop of the DAILY PENNSYLVANIAN. We have been typesetting for the newspaper several years now. Our equipment is the most modern and our staff is well trained.

We think you should take advantage of us!

U. Plans Construction Of Four Tennis Courts

BY FRED SCHNERER

The University had tentative plans to add four courts to the Levy Tennis Pavilion in the 1977-78 series, according to the new Vice-President for Operations Services. Free Shaw, the plan was approved by the Trustees last week.

"The tennis boom is this country partially fueled by this project," Shaw said. "You're going to be happy it's not going to be said in a court whereabouts they weren't to be happy.

Shaw said Tuesday that the University had received pledges for three large courts and that none of those was cash or intestition that are readily convertible.

In addition, he said, some of the pledges, the amount of which was not disclosed, have to cover the bulk of the construction cost. Shaw explained that the total of the loans and the pledges actually exceed the total construction costs since Development Office does not expect to get money from those pledged "until we have argued for the project.

Shaw said that part of the construction cost will be made up through revenue from the several projects in the pavilion. Levy Pavilion is one of the few athletic facilities on campus where we have the opportunity to charge admission for intercollegiate and intramural sports, he said.

million, 30 percent of the goal. Of the funds received for the drive money specified for endowments still need considerably other areas, mainly due to the low start of the Family of arts and Sciences campaign.

For those with nearly 1 million, 25 percent of the goal. Term funds, for various reasons, will receive one court, about $750,000 of the goal, and about $600,000 of its 5 percent of the goal. The rest of the money will go to pay for gifts of $10,000 and upwards.

Sultan’s Donations Enable Creation Of Oriental Studies Professorship

By LIONEL FEINSTEIN

The Department of Oriental Studies has established an assistant professorship in Islamic and Arabic studies, with substantial funding coming from the Sultanate of Oman. The assistant professorship was endowed in honor of Shaykh Faisal bin Fahd, son of the late King Fahd of Saudi Arabia. The endowed professorship is intended to promote the study of Arabic and Islamic culture and to strengthen the program to make it one of the top programs in the country.

The assistant professorship was endowed on the basis of the studies of the Sultan of Oman embassy official Tillman Durdin, on the basis of his dissertation from ancient times to the present. It was awarded, according to Middle Eastern studies professor Lionel Feinstein, "for his contributions to the field of Arabic studies." Feinstein added that the professorship has enabled the university to attract more students and to strengthen its program in Arabic studies.

The Department of Oriental Studies was established at the University of California, San Diego, in 1969 to do his Ph.D. coursework in Arabic. Since then, he has been teaching and researching in the field of Arabic language and literature, and has published extensively on the subject. He has also served as an advisor to several students and has helped to establish the university's Arabic studies program.

According to Feinstein, the establishment of the assistant professorship is a significant step in the development of the university's Arabic studies program. He noted that the university has been planning this for years but needed depth in this department. The assistant professorship will provide the university with the resources to expand its program and to attract new students.

The university's Oriental Studies program is one of the top programs in the country, and the establishment of the assistant professorship will further strengthen its position. The university is committed to promoting the study of Islamic and Arabic culture and to providing its students with the resources they need to succeed.

Spikers Struggle By Foes

"By TED FENN

An old sports adage states that a good team will grow bone by bone. For the lack of a better method of scoring, the Lafayette spikers club was held at bay by the introduction of tough opponents from Franklin & Marshall. Lafayette's volleyball team was all set to move into second place but in its surprising trump card opponents from Franklin and Marshall on Friday and Saturday, as time ran out in the second game. The Spikers' losses have been to a fine, tough football team, possibly tougher than any they have encountered..."
