Students Gather Names During Petition Drive To Keep SAPM Open

By ELIZABETH SANGER

Two years ago students involved between 200 and 2000 signatures on the \textit{Hamilton Spectator} annual drive according to SAPM's Dean of Students, Donald W. Oehlenschlager. The students hope to gather 3000 signatures for the drive by Tuesday at 5 PM.

Earlier in the year, Oehlenschlager revealed that all discussions between the University and the Thomas Jefferson School of Law were over the proposal of SAPM with Jeffries, he added "we do not want to leave this school feeling as if there is no intention of making a public announcement.

This is not a decision in itself," Oehlenschlager furthered. "The other choices that were available, however, are not viable. The administration wants to continue with the same program.

Jeffries himself confirmed that talks with the University have reached an impasse. He added, "we want to continue in a 'workable manner.'

Jeffries said that, while talks with the University were suspended two weeks ago, he did "not feel that the University has yet been given any indication of making a 'public announcement.'

Oehlenschlager explained that, in the event that the University decides to phase out SAPM, it will be necessary for the students to prepare a plan for the school's future. However, he added, "the plan cannot be based on the University's past failures. The plan must be doable and realistic.

Jeffries also said that, if the University decides to phase out SAPM, it will be necessary for the students to prepare a plan for the school's future. However, he added, "the plan cannot be based on the University's past failures. The plan must be doable and realistic.

Thursday. Paul said that few students "were obviously against signing the petition." Over the next three days students will be nationals second campus to perform as many interesting acts as possible. This last decision was made by Paul, and he was the only one who was also interested in the SAMP office. As of last week Paul said that SAMP has received the endorsement of 14 activity groups and the Student Activities Committee has ordered an additional 1000 signatures. On the same day Paul said that SAMP has received the endorsement of the group.

Earlier this week without much fanfare, the student television network Here's Your Story premiered its first piece of the fall season. This "Saturday Night Special" program was presented to residents in the Southwest student center. It is the first time that UT has inquired about the possibility of bringing televisions into dormitories.

Although the network is still very small, few students expected this first effort by the student television network. The program was presented to residents in the Southwest student center.

The show is not without flaws. At times, we get lost in the production of the show. We feel fortunate that the student television network is being aired on campus. A Nobel Thought

By Paul Provenson and Harvey Becker

Over the past decade, the University of Pennsylvania has emphasized research in all departments. As a result of this effort, a few Nobel prizes and generous scientific citations have been awarded to students and faculty. However, the Nobel prize in physiology was given to Dr. Robert A. F. Uhry for his work on the late warning signs of old age. However, this is not the only major scientific research being conducted here at the University of Pennsylvania.

The truck stops here. To learn more about the University of Pennsylvania and its research, please visit the website of the University of Pennsylvania. The University of Pennsylvania is committed to excellence in research and education. If you have any questions about the University of Pennsylvania or its research, please contact the Office of the Director of Research.

Harvard Turns Gridders Over, 20-8

By JOHN EISENBERG

The Crimson football team continued to impress its opponents with a grueling victory over Dartmouth last Friday, a 20-8 triumph that sent the Broad Green into New York for a showdown with Columbia.

The Crimson defense was again the key to the victory, as Harvard gave up only 111 total yards to the Big Green and forced six Dartmouth turnovers.

"The defense was just outstanding," said head coach Bill Wagener. "They did a great job of disrupting the Big Green's offense and creating opportunities for us on offense."}

Gridders Make Meal out of Lions

Lightsighted Romp

By STEVE PETERS

Columbia University is widely regarded as a haven of academic excellence, but its football team has never been a household name. However, the Lions are set to make a statement this season with a victory over the up-and-coming Harvard Crimson.

"We have the talent and the drive to make this a successful season," said captain John Smith. "We're ready to take on Harvard and show them what we're made of."
