Two Gentlemen of Verona/Mixed Classical With High Contemporaries

By ADA LEVINE

William Shakespeare was a man ahead of his time. Or at least he was a poet ahead of his time. To understand what made Shakespeare so unique, one must understand his time. The world in which he lived was a world of superstition and fear. The idea of a playwright was not accepted by the majority of society. The idea of a playwright's intellectual depth was not understood. What the world they knew was a world of superstition and fear.

The play is an integration of classical and modernity, a concept Shakespeare realized in the context of his time. It is set in a hip version of Renaissance Italy, specifically Verona and Milan. The two main characters, who are portrayed as good friends, are the ones who share the stage throughout the entire play. They are portrayed as clever, witty, and full of knowledge. The audience is left to imagine the rest of the scene.

The play will be presented at the Harold Prince Theater on November 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, and 27. Will Shakespeare roll over in his grave? Are Two Gentlemen of Verona and judge by yourself?

There's a lot of discussion going on in the student body as of late. One reason is the current and future景象 of the station. More and more students are beginning to ask the question the University's president, President Meyerson, has asked himself: "Is the radio station important to the University, or is it just a hobby?" In the past, WXPN has served as a strong, creative outlet for the students. Many students have seen WXPN as a place where they can learn and develop their skills. However, some students have begun to question the station's purpose and mission.

One student who has been vocal about this issue is Diane Kaplan, who was chosen FM program director in the spring. Diane Kaplan, along with other students, has been calling for a stronger, more inclusive future for WXPN. She has been pushing for a station that is more focused on student programming and less on commercial interests.

Another issue that has been raised is the station's funding. The station currently relies on student fees to operate, but many students feel that this is not enough. They believe that WXPN should be able to support itself through advertising and other sources.

In an effort to address these concerns, WXPN has recently opened a special guest star—SAMP. SAMP turns out graduates who are able to understand and deal with the problems of society of today. Putting good, well-trained people into the world does not contribute to the advancement of society. Putting good, well-trained people into the world does not contribute to the advancement of society.

"If one manages to muddle through President Meyerson's vague meandering, he realizes that the Meyerson model is nothing more creative than an attempt to maintain Penn as a second-rate Harvard."
Undergraduate Assembly Reports On SAMP Phase-Out Question

By ELIZABETH HANES

The Undergraduate Assembly (UA) received reports on the University Council's current stand on the controversy and detailed budget appropriations for a committee to aid in the preparation of next year's student government budget. As previously reported, the 37-11 save SAMP proposal was defeated.

There was concern expressed about the possibility of SAMP's phase-out or changes in the SAMP program.

Vice-chairman Ken Taber said that if one "read between the lines," it is that the respect given to the council by the administration is very bleak indeed," Taber said. "If one "read between the lines," it is that the respect given to the council by the administration is very bleak indeed," Taber said. "If one "read between the lines," it is possible that the administration may not adhere to the University Council's current stand on SAMP is possible that the administration may not adhere to the University Council's current stand on SAMP.

Taber added that all efforts toward helping to resolve any parts of a "humanitarian obligation." The UA argued over the allotment of money for different purposes in the publicity campaign. Fifty dollars was given for the use of telegrams and postage, $80 for buttons and $62 for printed advertisement.

"I think, on the whole, if there has been a tendency, it has been to shift toward more understanding of alternative clusters and more flexibility in the part of the committee itself. The Oxfam has been a very similar kind of organization. In said departments which have the power to approve clusters, some of which are in the committee itself, there has some of its surpluses, the world problem. "People need to be reminded that people in other countries don't have the same living standards we do. I'm sure many people realize this but they don't think about it," Keating said.

Departments also will no longer be able to list a cluster of only one course. "If one of the courses is disapproved, all of the courses in the cluster are disapproved," Keating said. "We also put at a disadvantage, Keating explained.

Hungry Action Committee Plans Fast

By RAFFLETH LASKEY

The Hunger Action Committee will sponsor a 24-Hour Fast next Thursday. The fast is intended to increase awareness of the world hunger problem and raise relief money, according to committee spokesman Ann Agee. Students with dining contracts have been notified to forfeit their meals for November 18 and donate their cost to relief organizations. Donations are also being collected at the Christian Association and on Locust Walk. Donations will be forwarded to a local emergency relief program that students have already supported.

A second recipient will be the Oxford Committee for Famine Relief (OFCAR), a politically unaffiliated worldwide organization.

By MARK DYMANY AND CLELSON SMITH

The Peruvian national basketball team came to the United States in the hope of learning the finer points of the game. Last night at the Palestra, however, the Peruvians saw their dreams dashed by an opposition led by Penn's senior star, Alston Simmons, who scored 21 points in the 76-47 victory.

The Peruvians were outmatched from the start. They couldn't find the basket; they couldn't defend. The

Sweeper Alison Irving follows
In Athletic Footsteps of Family

By NANCY GOLDING

Junior Alison Irving, who played the all-important defensive sweeper position on her Penn women's soccer team, yesterday was released on a three-year professional contract.

Irving, 20, a 5-foot-10, 150-pound sweeper, is a star of the women's national team and has been a regular in the U.S. women's national team since 2000. She has been praised by coaches for her speed, agility and decision-making on the field.

The move was made possible by a $5 million investment in women's soccer in the United States, which has led to increased interest in developing the sport at the professional level.

Irving said she was delighted to be able to pursue her dream of playing professional soccer. She has been working with the U.S. Women's National Team since 2000 and has been a member of the team since 2002. She has also played for the U.S. National Team in the World Cup and Olympic Games.

Irving's release follows her impressive performances in recent years.
She led the U.S. Women's National Team to the gold medal at the 2004 Athens Olympics and the silver medal at the 2006 World Cup.

Irving's release also opens the door for other talented players to pursue professional careers in soccer.

The move is expected to have a positive impact on women's soccer in the United States and around the world.

George Siler, Cornell's head
assistant after retiring recently announced he will be joining Vanderbilt's staff as an assistant coach. Siler, who was Cornell's head coach for the past three seasons, said he was looking for a new challenge and is excited to work with the Commodores.

The 1973 all-City football team
was named in the Philadelphia Inquirer in November. The team was composed of players from various high schools in the city, including South, North, and northern districts.

The team included running back Dick Seddon, football
captain; halfback Jack Reynolds, and linebacker Ken Mauro. The team was chosen by the Inquirer's football writers for their excellence in the sport.

The team was led by Seddon,
who had a successful career at Cornell. He was a three-year starter and was named to the All-Ivy League in his senior year.

As expected, Yale football coach Ralph Lattimore confirmed he would return as the team's head coach for the 2006 season.
