Hill Requires Upperclass Applications

By MARK ROBERTS

Upperclassmen wishing to live in doubles or triple rooms must complete an application, Assoc. Master Robert F. Zemsky said Thursday.

Currently, a specified number of upperclassmen are allowed to live in doubles or triples through a lottery system. These upperclassmen are chosen randomly.

During subsequent question-answer period, Zemsky said that he does not believe that the upperclassmen would have to complete an application.

"In the past, the upperclassmen have been chosen randomly. The upperclassmen who were chosen were determined randomly," Zemsky said.

As a result of the increased number of applications, Zemsky said that the upperclassmen will have to complete an application.

"The application will allow the upperclassmen to be considered," Zemsky said.

The application will be reviewed by a seven-member student committee.

The applications for upperclassmen will be reviewed and, if approved, the upperclassmen will be notified of their acceptance.

Professor, Socialist Debate

By DAVID HIRST

CAPITALISM VS. SOCIALISM was the Issue at a Houston Hall debate Thursday between the Urban Studies department, the Workers Party, said Thursday in a press release.

Dick Roberts, a member of the Urban Studies department, said that the debate was a "very public" and "very aware of the Wharton social implications".

"At the same time, we're not talking about a fictional Wharton," Roberts said.

Applications to Hill House

While the Whartonites are attempting to prove their acting ability, one thing they do not have to prove is their business ability. Apparently, Carroll did a good job of proving her marketing plan. Hill House is celebrating the opening of its new dormitory, Hill 2, with a contest. Two of the Wharton Follies shows of "The Wharton Follies — A Musical Revue" were sold out. When you've got only 2 tickets to the big game and you forgot that you asked Cheryl, Lori, Tracy, Kelly, Sabrina and Trisha, but they didn't...it's no time to get filled up.

Tenure Dilemmas at the University

By Fred Schnyder

The word strikes fear in the heart of almost every academic. University administration, often entwined with tenure, can leave an indelible mark on one's career. University tenure, which is essentially a long-term appointment, provides financial security and job stability. However, the process of achieving tenure can be challenging and intimidating for many academics.

Schnyder highlights the importance of tenure as a critical aspect of academic life, as it allows for freedom and creativity in research and teaching. The process involves a rigorous evaluation of one's scholarly work, teaching effectiveness, and service to the institution. schnyder emphasizes the need for transparent processes and fair evaluation criteria to ensure that tenure decisions are based on merit and not on personal biases or politics.
Penn Fencers Breathe Easy

By STUART G. MARON

The Penn fencing team should be breathing a sigh of relief after winning a meet by only five points this weekend. The Quakers defeated the University of Pennsylvania in both epee and sabre.

The ten-man team has only won big in two matches so far this season. "We have the ability to start off time this team got its act together," said Micahnik, "I expect the team to go for every touch and not let up. It's time for the foils."

The Bulldog epee club has a sound fundamental background but lacks aggressiveness. Quakers Randy Eggleston, the only undefeated fencer from a near fatal accident, and Chris Hanson, should fare well.

Stanley Ng may provide some stiff competition for the foils. The Bulldog saber team is "aggressive and a bit more pugnacious than the other weapon," commented Micahnik. "Yale's saber team is "aggressive and has a weak fundamental background but lacks aggressiveness," said Micahnik. Yale's saber team is "aggressive and has a weak fundamental background but lacks aggressiveness," said Micahnik. The other weapons," commented Micahnik.

"We'll remedy this at Yale," said Quaker fencing coach Dave Micahnik. "Yale tries hard but they don't have the background." Micahnik, "It's time this team got its act together..."

at the largest city in the smallest state, where we pride ourselves in being at the forefront of everything, there is always something new happening. this weekend is no exception. it's the annual showdown between two teams whose names are synonymous with basketball: the bruins and the ivies. the game is set for saturday afternoon at the onondaga arena, and tickets are selling fast.

the bruins have been on a roll lately, with four straight wins to their name. they're currently in first place in the ivy league, just a game ahead of the ivies. the ivies, on the other hand, have been struggling a bit, with two losses in their last three games. they're currently in third place, behind the bruins and the wildcats.

the match-up is a classic ivy league showdown, with both teams looking to solidify their positions in the league standings. the bruins have a more balanced scoring attack, with multiple players averaging double figures. the ivies, on the other hand, rely on a few key players to carry the load.

but it's not just about the game itself. the atmosphere will be electric, with fans from both teams packing the arena. the bruins have a reputation for being a loud and proud crowd, while the ivies have a more laid-back, supportive fan base.

so if you're a fan of college basketball, or just looking for a good time, make sure to head out to the onondaga arena this weekend. it's sure to be a classic ivy league showdown.

the opportunity has grown. the pressure has grown. the players have grown. but the success has not. it's been a difficult season for the ivies, who are currently in last place in the ivy league. they've struggled to find consistency, with losses in 17 of their 20 games. but they're not giving up hope. they're looking for a way to turn things around.

the ivies have some talented players, but they've had trouble putting it all together on the court. they've had some close losses, but they've also had some blowouts. it's been a tough season for them, but they're not ready to give up yet.

the ivies have some tough games coming up, but they're not backing down. they're looking for ways to improve, both individually and as a team. they're working hard in practice, and they're hoping that will pay off on the court.

the weather is finally starting to warm up, and that means it's time for some weekend fun! there are plenty of events happening this weekend to keep you entertained.

on friday, the ivies had a successful fundraiser at the ivies wine bar. they sold out of wine and raised a lot of money. the ivies are using the funds to support their athletic programs.

on saturday, there's a big game between the bruins and the ivies. it's going to be a great match-up, with both teams looking to prove themselves. the bruins are in first place, while the ivies are in last, so it's going to be an exciting game.

so if you're looking for some fun this weekend, the ivies have got you covered. whether it's a game, a fundraiser, or just a night out, there's something for everyone.

the writing is on the wall. it's time for the ivies to start taking some risks. they've been playing it safe too much, and it's not working. they need to take some chances, and they need to start scoring more points.

the ivies have some talented players, but they're not putting it all together on the court. they've had some close losses, but they've also had some blowouts. they're not ready to give up yet, but they do need to start winning some games.
