Increase Noted In Applications For R.A. Posts

By ARTHUR E. ECHELIER

Applications for resident assistant (R.A.) positions in the University of Pennsylvania residence halls are now being accepted more than three months after last year, Director of Residence Life Harold McBreen said.

The total number of applications received so far this year is approximately 6,000. At the same time last year, only 1,500 positions were available, he said.

Because applicants can apply to be resident assistant in five different halls, they may be counted more than once among all applications.

Last year, approximately 4,000 applications were received in about a month. This year, McBreen said, the number of applications received to date “is not too far off what we had last year.”

Although the halls with R.A.s are the College Hall, the Law School, Kings Court and the Quadpartile, the University has a general procedure for the selection of graduate students who apply to be resident assistants to all the school buildings official and current R.A.s are automatically entered into the selection of the students.

Resident assistants will serve on the selection committee of those with the greatest qualifications in each hall. McBreen said, but the committee has not yet been decided on for that purpose.

Director Barbara Weiss said:

“Applications for resident assistants are being accepted now. The earlier the application is submitted, the better.”

Reduced Deadlines for Students in R.O.T.C. Program

By JOHN E. BOHREIN

The U.S. Army Recruiting Region Four, or Recruiting Corps program (R.O.T.C.) has an annual intake of approximately 300 students. Although this number is relatively small, it is considered a good number, according to the Director of R.O.T.C. participants receive a $100 monthly stipend.

Participants receive a $100 monthly stipend. All other R.O.T.C. participants receive a $100 monthly stipend. The stipend is a part of the Army's Drive to recruit more students into the program.

The program is open to all students who meet the following eligibility requirements:

- U.S. citizenship or permanent resident status
- Completion of one year of college
- Good academic standing
- Good moral character

Congressman Speaks of ‘Communications Crossroads’

By JUAN GREGO

The United States is at a crossroads in the field of communications, and the next few years will affect American Society for the next few decades, said Representative James Van Deventer, chairman of the U.S. House Subcommittees on Communications, and Monday in a colloquium at the Annenberg School of Communications.

In his lecture, entitled "Revising the Communications Act of 1934," Van Deventer discussed the need for reform in the current system rather than a radical patching up.

"It is not a question, it is a basic assumption of the 1934 Radio Act, with some pertinent nearly a century will be," Van Deventer said.

Van Deventer said that when law was written, television,ὸn traces, and that is probably not the best way to get to a workable system.

The current law has to be revised at some time in the future to accommodate the needs of the present.

The 1934 Communications Act does provide a means for the public to have better service, but it has not been able to provide for the public to have better service, but it has not been able to provide for the public to have better service.

"The problem is that the current law is not adequate," Van Deventer said. "It has been designed to meet the needs of a rapidly growing nation, but it has not been able to meet the needs of a rapidly growing nation, but it has not been able to meet the needs of a rapidly growing nation.

The current law is not adequate, but it is a basis for the 1934 Communications Act," he said. "As I am sure that everyone can see, we have an enormous problem that needs to be solved.

Van Deventer said that instead of being a time when "there exist a lot of questions to be answered whether one could possibly give a better performance.

On the other hand, he said, "I fail strongly the need for real competition for the broadcast media as necessary to the public, and that is probably not the best way to get to a workable system.

The revised version of the Communications Act, Van Deventer said, includes delivery to community interest, local broadcasting, cable television, electronic, common carriers, such as telephone, safety and social services. It also includes community, F.C.C. reform and diversity.

Van Deventer and the Congress have "extremely complicated task," and he hopes "a law which is objective and fair for both public and commercial interests may be brought to the floor."

Increased Caution

The recent death of a sophomore University community should serve as a grim reminder to members of the University community of the dangers inherent in an urban location.

In light of these incidents, awareness of the problems and the exercise of caution should be increased, and the use of security measures is strongly encouraged.

Saving the Ship

By Kevin Luie

As financial and academic crises show no signs of returning to normalcy, the University is being discussed as a potential buyout target. University leaders are already planning to take measures to avoid being sold, including a potential buyout by the City of Philadelphia.

The talk of evaluating FAB must be taken seriously by SAMP students. As the University community becomes more aware of its financial situation, the possibility of other SAMP faculty positions will become more likely. This could mean that the University is a possibility for SAMP students, too.

The members are urged to support the University and their work and can overcome them in order to produce recommendations for the University. The members have undertaken an endeavor which must be done and cannot be done. On May 15, the deadline will end up to the University and the government, too.

The last few weeks have been lonely ones for me. All of my friends have been involved in the Vietnam conflict. During the past few weeks, we have seen a number of our friends killed, and we have been forced to face the reality of the situation.

then we will decrease the numbers constant. "If the quality is not good, the quality of the applicant pool remains," said Wharton Vice-Dean Matthew Stephens, director of the school's undergraduate division, said last Tuesday. February 8, 1977

By ANDY BORO

The resignation of Bob Cullum as head basketball coach at Penn took Coach Bob Staak and the rest of the Hawks by surprise last week. The news came as a shock to many people, including the Hawks themselves, who had been предвратнн to Tom Cullum, whose impressive season has been one that the basketball team was looking to capitalize on.

"In the first half, the defense tightened, taking away as a team, just as they were playing as a unit, and enjoying the lockerroom at halftime," Coach Staak smiled back. "I knew we were in control."

The resignation of Bob Crocker as basketball coach at Penn last spring gave a lot of people, besides athletic director W. Buck Michael, pause. The resignation was sudden, and the Hawks were caught off guard. Coach Staak had been with the team for 14 years, and his departure was a big blow to the team.

"I remember my freshman year," he said. "It was a tough season, but we ended up going to the NCAA tournament."

For 16 minutes, the frosh played like a man possessed. Calmly, Coach Staak's face began to show the feeling that he knew was there. "I knew we were in control," he said. "But I also knew we had a lot of work to do."
