Criticizing Graduate Towers' Functional Architecture

When I read that, once upon a time, Great Towers was an award for something called "functional architecture," it didn't take much to figure out just what was meant by this "functional." I am not the first to point out that those who wish to enforce the "no smoking" signs by concrete, one can't help but wonder how it is outside, where, when one approaches their own living situation.

I feel that my perceptions might be too particular an axe to grind, but I've been noticing how, without the benefit of re-approaching from the land of the dead, the Grad Towers are truly bleak—even on the sunniest of days—and one realizes after not too long a time that it is always much more pleasant to return "home" in the dark.

If one plots nick of sitting in the shady—-the very common area in the next-door neighbor: she knocked on my door informing me that my phone calls were not as private as I might have thought—sister was her cracking. And good luck in finding a good corner to place anything square in front of Houston Hall, I breathed the aroma of fresh new paintManhattan—my suitcases (containing the three weeks worth of clothing which always seemed absolutely necessary for any ten day vacation, but also I feel, a bit too much burdensome too. For ten short days the harsh realities of architecture, the omnipresent "no smoking," were banished from my mind. I was returning to the warm, protective womb of home and family. The beauty of the perfect domestic scene created complete by my possessions found in my room. Each face was a glinting of contentment, twisted mouth and appearing sort of fuzzy, like the hopelessly rotten persimmon leaves at the end of summer which was un-avoidably ready.

Indeed, here was one of the many reasons I had used to rationalize my going to a college away from home, the need to finally face the harsh realities of adult life.

...That dangerous undergrd jungle in which the education is taken for granted, where the very young and the very old are rare sights; where the rest of Philadelphia seems to remain behind an invisible, often impermeable barrier.
Student Crowd Says 'We're Mad as Hell'

A demonstration involving several hundred student and faculty members was held early Thursday morning in the Quadrangle demanding the reinstatement of the Academic Freedom Committee.

Following efforts by Quad residents and campus security officers to disperse the crowd, the demonstrators refused to move to Hill House and to Smithfield.

A demonstration involving several hundred student and faculty members was held early Thursday morning in the Quadrangle demanding the reinstatement of the Academic Freedom Committee.

Following efforts by Quad residents and campus security officers to disperse the crowd, the demonstrators refused to move to Hill House and to Smithfield.

The demonstration began after the television showed at a live clip from the market newsroom, to which a group of students appeared at the Quad, according to one resident.

The students collective began to shout, "Votre mad as hell and we're not going to take this any more!" - a key line from Network. Throughout the week, hundreds of students gathered at the Quadrangle to demand the reinstatement of the Academic Freedom Committee.

The demonstration ended on a peaceful note, with the police removing the remaining demonstrators.

Injury-Riddled Softballers Take On Franklin and Marshall in Opener

By LINDA HABREY

It is a new beginning for the Penn golf team this year. This year's team has undergone a major transformation with the addition of five freshman to the roster. This year, the team will be counting on the performances of the five first-years to help them compete at a higher level.

The team has also benefited from the return of three upperclassmen who will be key players for the squad. With these additions, the team has high hopes for a successful season.

Trackmen ‘Field’ Winners

by LAUREN JACOB

The outdoor track season kicked off last Friday at Temple, where the Quakers competed against the Temple Owls and the Navy Midshipmen.

The Quakers performed well in several events, with individuals winning events ranging from the 100-meter dash to the 1500-meter run.

The team's success is attributed to the hard work and dedication of the athletes, as well as the support of their coaches.

Marielle, who won a 1-mile and 800-meter race, said, "It's a great feeling to win, especially after a long winter of training. The team worked really hard to get to this point, and I'm just happy to be able to represent them.

Overall, the track team is excited about the season and looks forward to continued success in future meets.

Quaker Softball Preview

Team's Success

The Quakers have had a strong start to the season, with a 3-1 record so far. They have shown their strength in both offense and defense, with a balanced lineup and solid pitching.

Coach Anne Sage has the ability to get the most out of her charges. This year, the team has several returning players and some new faces, but Sage believes that the team has the talent to compete at a high level.

The Quakers boast the return of eight of the twelve starters from last year's 5-1-2 team. This year's team has a lot of depth, with many players contributing at different positions.

In the outfield, co-captains Fran Iiiibowitz and Carol Pasquariello set the wings for the Penn attack, while the catcher is handled by Kim Murray. The team's strength is in their pitching, with several talented pitchers returning to the mound.

The Quakers' success is due to the hard work and dedication of the team members. They have spent countless hours practicing and improving their skills, and it is paying off.

In the infield, the Quakers have a solid defense with veteran infielders like Rich Serino and Todd Hays. The team's fielding is solid, and they have a strong defense to support their pitching.

Offensively, the Quakers are led by top performers like Nolan Rauscher and Shane. "They just have to hang in there and keep working hard," said Coach Anne Sage.

The team's success is a result of their dedication and hard work, and they are looking forward to continuing their success throughout the season.

Deep Laxwomen Raise Curtain Versus F&M

by TONY MESSER

Each coach praises the performance of his players in the win over F&M, but both have all got the same message - they are happy with the win.

Coach Sage noted, "They did a great job today; they really worked hard. The girls put everything they had into the game and we couldn't be happier with the result.

Overall, it was a great day for our team, and we're excited to see how we can build on this win in future games.

Deep Laxwomen’s win gives them an opportunity to improve their position in the standings, and they will be looking to build on this success in their next game.

SUNSHINE ON MY SHOULDERS MAKES ME HAPPY: Track Meet

By LUTHER JACKSON

Several events were held on Saturday, including the sprint meet and the distance meet.

In the sprint meet, the Penn men's and women's teams performed well, with several individuals setting personal records.

The distance meet was dominated by the Penn women, who took first place in both the 3,000-meter and 5,000-meter events.

In the men's race, the Penn men finished in second place, with solid performances from several runners.

Overall, the meet was a strong showing for the Penn track team, who continued to improve throughout the season.
