Judge Says Maturity and Equality Will Obliterate Rape in Society

By RAEME LARKER

The phrase "Maturity and Equality Will Obliterate Rape in Society" was written on a small card and placed on a table at a press conference. The speaker was an attorney who had been appointed by the court to represent victims of sexual assault.

"The act of rape has virtually no place in society," she added. "It is a crime of power and violence, and it must be stopped."

She said that college campuses are such likely places for rape to occur because of the prevalence of alcohol and drugs. She called for a more proactive approach to preventing rape, including increased education about consent and the importance of communication in sexual relationships.

The attorney also discussed the need for better reporting mechanisms for rape victims and the importance of supporting survivors through counseling and other services.

"We will no longer have rape when people are educated about the consequences of their actions," she said. "We will no longer have rape when survivors are believed and supported."

"We will no longer have rape when society as a whole acknowledges the seriousness of this crime," she concluded. "We will no longer have rape when we take the steps necessary to prevent it and to provide help and support for survivors."

PLAIN TALK FROM ARMCO ON FINDING A JOB

Why too much regulation may rule you out

How would you like to be forced to get permission from the government agencies before you could work? That's what Armco has to do. Within you could hear a similar sturm from nearly any large company in America—if the regulatory paperwork knows them any time you talk to you. Excessive regulation thwarts your chance of getting a job.

Most of us agree that the goals regulation papers are serious. Clean air and water. Safety at work. The problem is the way government people write and apply the rules to these goals. Too often, the rules don't really do what they claim. They just tie companies up as hard as they try to comply.

Excessive regulation now take up a volume printed in small type 15,000 pages or more, written last year alone. And Washington is not more impressed by a growing army of state and local regulations.

One knows how much money regulation costs. Some say, it's up to 50 billion a year. Companies paying that bill can't use that money for jobs. A study shows the averaging now pays a company $43,893 in capital costs and $24,867 in labor costs. Both cost $68,760. All at $2,614 for job regulation. It just isn't that much, which could have saved 500,000 jobs. No sensible American wants to systematic dismantling of Government regulation. But we think the answer goes beyond the need to cut the cost of our regulation. It's consumerism. The contractors, in turn, "need this Armco at last count had 670 federal periods, with 2,700 state and local contracts. What happens to Armco and other companies is what happens to you. We're all important. But what happens to a company's jobs is the big picture.

The Government requires companies to give employers reports on their benefit plans. Fair enough. But the very making these plans, the compilers of Armco's plan didn't let us in on a report on our company's benefits. We're not sure the contractors are being done on our people benefits. It was straightforward and uneventful. The newsmen on the sidelines were looking for something to write about, but nothing seemed to happen.

Coach Hays disagreed with his players' evaluation. "It was a good game," he commented.

"It was hard to believe that our freshmen took out Bill McNamara's 9-1 record," said Coach Hays.

The match was never really close, and the Quakers were in control from the get-go. The first half was all about the Garrett, and "the nerves got worse after that," laughed Hays. "The Quakers are better than we thought they were." And Hays was satisfied with the scores he charged. "It was an efficient score, especially for this time of the year," he explained. "Rattling Greens in a tough course and we played better than I had expected.

Not only did the match give new Penn freshman Herb Professor the chance to shine, but it also proved to be an effective warm-up for the upcoming season. "I'm glad we got to play against a strong team," said Professor. "They were a lot better than we expected." And Hays agreed. "They're a good team, and our match was a good test for us."

The Quakers dominated the game from the start, winning 8-2 and 5-4. "We're looking forward to the season," said Hays. "We're going to have a good team this year." And the Quakers are confident. "We're going to be better than anyone else. We're ready for the season," said Hays.

Quaker Oats

Lacrosse replaces willow bats. In an unusual ceremony at Penn on Friday, Penn's 1973 Promotions officers presented the Quakers' lacrosse team with willow bats to replace the traditional lambswool and bull's horn. The ceremony took place in front of the Quaker lacrosse team, located in the gym at the University of Pennsylvania. The Quakers' new bats are a departure from the traditional lambswool and bull's horn used in the sport. The willow bats will be used in all of the Quakers' games this season. Netman Fife Hits High Notes

By STEVE BAULKER

The Penn tennis player recently played a strong game of tennis, which included hitting a high note. "When I was a freshman, I'd be so nervous," Fife said. "I'd miss a ball or two, but now I'm more relaxed."

"I feel like I've gotten much stronger," Fife said. "I've worked hard on my serve and volley." And that's not all. Fife also feels he has "gotten much stronger" in his overall game. "I've worked hard on my serve and volley," Fife said. "I feel like I've gotten much stronger in my overall game.

Softballers Sacked, 12-6

In the first game of the season for Franklin and Marshall, the Quakers' women's softball team came out on top, winning 12-6. All but one starter who played in the game was a returning player. "I'm very pleased with the way we played," said Coach Pat Hulse. "We had a lot of good innings, and we were able to put the game away early."

"It was a good game," Hulse said. "The Quakers were able to put the game away early, and we were able to put the game away early."
