Activities Group Demands End To Surveillance

By ARTHUR D. BUCKLER

The University Activities Council (UAC) overwhelmingly passed a resolution Thursday calling for an end to the surveillance of student activity. The surveillance, the UAC said, was performed by the Plainclothes Detectives on groups and the files of the University Council which it reviews.

The resolution on surveillance was passed at the UAC's spring meeting, held on the University of Pennsylvania campus. The meeting was attended by representatives of every recognized student activity and 11 instructors. The resolution was endorsed by 19 University Council representatives.

The resolution called for an end to surveillance of student activities by the Plainclothes Detectives on groups and the University Council which it reviews.

Custodial Union To File Grievance Over Use of Non-Worker Volunteers

By ANGEL GREGO

The Custodial Union will file a grievance against the University on the issue of hiring non-workers to perform custodial duties. The union said it will file the grievance because it believes the hiring of non-workers is a violation of the union contract.

Ivies Set Discussion On Admissions Case

By STEVEN A. MARSHAK

Representatives of the Ivy League universities will meet to discuss the admissions case. The meeting is expected to include representatives from all eight Ivy League universities.

At the meeting, the possibility of drawing up a statement on the case will be discussed by the representatives. The statement is expected to be presented to the Intelligence Committee of the United States Senate.

The meeting will be held in New York City and is expected to last one day. The representatives will discuss the admissions case and the aftermath of the California Supreme Court's decision in the Bakke case.

Surveillance Information Has Been Held Back, Investigators Suspect

By RICHARD COOKSON

Members of a University Council committee investigating Campus Security's monitoring of campus groups and individuals have accused the committee of being overly secretive. The members said that the committee has not been forthcoming with information and has not allowed the council to participate in the investigation.

Assessing the Future of the University

By Martin Meyerson

The past half dozen years appear to have been a period of reassessment for many businesses and universities. The numbers of college-age students and graduates have begun to decline, and many universities and colleges, even more so, are subject to inflation as other parts of our society, will find their expenses increase more slowly than revenues. However, the university cannot continue to fail to keep up with the ever-increasing costs of higher education. Costs to students and their families will continue to be only at major independent universities such as Pennsylvania.

For the past few years following the elimination of most premium salaries have increased significantly and the cost of living has increased significantly and the cost of living has increased. In order to achieve these goals, the university must, in my judgment, continue to rise precipitously. Income from private sources will compensate for any loss in student tuition. The university is well-bathed in defense and military research money. It is not possible to predict the changing fortunes of the university but, like other universities abroad, to continue to provide for a proper combination of the arts and sciences in the university, to provide the best possible education for our students, and to continue to attract and retain the best possible students.

The challenge to our University is...to continue to build quality and even to run counter to the declining forces surrounding us.

Golfers Face Weekend Challenges at Rutgers

"This triangular match is our first real test of the season and should tell us what kind of team we have this year," noted Coach Hayes.

The varsity squad needs to get past the MA1SA Elim's in order to go to the demanding Eastern Intercollegiate. From there, they will play the only representatives in America, the Navy, at the Naval Academy in Annapolis.

Permanently installed for three different regattas this weekend. The varsity squad that was fielded on Tuesday, March 30, has much experience in the season's opening round but they are not worried because, as Coach Hayes puts it, "they're just going for practice. Practice makes perfect.

Eli Eyes on Hollis as Laxmen Clash

BY DANNY RODENBAUM

Talk about survival skill. Last season coach Bob Molloy got his Penn lacrosse squad through the UAA season unscathed. This season, Molloy will face his own challenges.

When reached for comment, defensive minded McHenry was hesitant to divulge any specific plans for containing the upperclassmen. "Well, we're definitely going to need to have our defense perform up to par this year. Our forwards will have to be more effective on the ground, and our midfielders have to show some leadership. We also need to get our local defensemen more involved in the play."

Eli Eyes on Hollis as Laxmen Clash

BY LUTHER JACKSON

Penn and Princeton will play in the last regular season game today at Princeton's Schenley Field. The Quakers will be facing their biggest challenge of the season so far, as they look to knock off the Ivy League leaders.

The Quakers have struggled throughout most of the season, but have shown signs of improvement in recent games. They have won three of their last five games, and will look to continue their hot streak against Princeton.

The Princeton Tigers are currently ranked second in the Ivy League, and have won six of their last seven games. They are led by senior attackman Peter Hollis, who has scored 20 goals and added 10 assists this season.

Penn will look to contain Hollis and the Princeton offense, but will also have to watch out for the senior midfielders whose strong play has contributed to the Tigers' success.

Despite the challenges, the Quakers are confident in their ability to compete with Princeton. "We know that we can play with them," said senior midfielder Jake Adlam. "We just need to show up and give our best effort."

The game is scheduled to start at 1:00 PM and will be held on the campus of Princeton University. Fans are encouraged to attend and support the Quakers as they aim to make history against the Ivy League leaders.
