Security Director Shultis Resigns Amidst Controversy Over Actions

By RICHARD GORDON

Shultis, however, the most volatile issue involving Shultis appeared on May 1, 1980, when another campus official said that he regretted Shultis' decision. "I think Shultis' resignation is a very bad move," the official said. "I hope he'll change his mind." He added that he did not think anyone would have been more effective at running Campus Security.

He said that he had received a call from the Philadelphia Inquirer last week, and Shultis planned to resign at that time. "He said that he would resign," the official said. "He said 'I did make some mistakes in how I ran this operation.'" Shultis is expected to return to the position of associate director of Counseling Services.

SAMP Accepts More Applicants Than Last Year for Smaller Class

By STEVEN DUBOW

As an apparent result of the University Trustees' decision to phase out the School of Allied Medical Professions, the interim Provost, Robert Fina, announced that SAMP小于d accepted twice as many applicants as last year for the class of 1980.

SAMP Accepts 41 Applicants vs. 21 Last Year; Number 2 Class

"The University's exchange program will not be able to participate in the SAMP program for the Spring semester," a University spokesman said, "at least not until the legal issues are resolved."" The University is working towards correcting the problem in order to participate in the SAMP program.

History Professor Awarded $20,000

To Write Book on Colonial America

By PETER BLACMAN

"I will try to find persisting things that are already characterized by my world as the place." He added that he did not see the world as his world, but rather as a world that he is a part of.

Vegetable Report" Deemed Impetus for WPXN Ruling

By JEFFREY N. BARKER

"I do not think that it is a problem," Shultis said. "I think that it is a minor problem." He added that the University was working towards correcting the problem in order to participate in the SAMP program.

"History Professor Michael Dukerman has been awarded a Rockefeller Foundation Fellowship to study the American way of life in the colonial period." He added that he did not see the world as his world, but rather as a world that he is a part of.
and the city resolve the matter with a will do everything in their power to said Monday he "would hope the RDA represents the University in this case, usually high."

at a fair market value in accordance with regulations of the Department of Before it can be sold; - the RDA must sell all real estate - the RDA must pay off notes from Page I) Continued

3400 Block Plans (Continue from Page 1)

-Fina said Monday that the RDA is in-convincing the American people of the seriousness of the crisis. The creation of a than 50 agencies which currently deal with energy short-change requiring drastic government measures to counteract its effects, in-yesterdayPresident Jimmy Carter warned that there is an imminent energy CARTER OUTLINES ENERGY POLICY-Jn a nationally televised speech, President Jimmy Carter outlined his a minimum of conflict.

1. UNITED STATES: Thursday, April 21, 1977

2. EGYPT: Thursday, April 21, 4:30 P.M. Ambassador Ashraf Ghorbal

3. SYRIA: Tuesday, April 26, 4:30 P.M. Ambassador Mawaffak Allaf

4. UNITED STATES: Thursday, April 28, 4:30 P.M. Harold H. Saunders Department of State
Destroying Neighborhood Feeling

By Jeffrey Yates

The interesting series in the University's general daily paper about the plan to demolish the SAMP building this summer and the University's unique presence in West Philly has been a rich source of information, debate, and interesting ideas.

The investigation of these events by the Committee on Open Educational Environment (COE) is an important process that will help shape the future of the University and its relationship with the neighborhood.

We hope that Shultis's successor will handle his position differently by operating a more open, cooperative Security office. Compliance by both Shultis and his predecessor will have a decisive impact on the future of the University in West Philly.

Shultis's Treatment

The retirement of Security and Safety Director Daniel Shultis has been anticipated for a long time, but apparently was hastened by recent pressure from the University community.

Shultis's treatment by the University and the neighborhood has been a source of concern and debate. The University's decision to demolish the SAMP building without consulting the neighborhood has been criticized as an example of poor communication and decision-making.

The investigation of these events by the Committee on Open Educational Environment (COE) is an important process that will help shape the future of the University and its relationship with the neighborhood.

We hope that Shultis's successor will handle his position differently by operating a more open, cooperative Security office. Compliance by both Shultis and his predecessor will have a decisive impact on the future of the University in West Philly.

Raising Security Consciousness

By Ruth Wells

We have been asked to put together a list of a few simple safety tips for you to keep in mind when you're out and about on campus.

Keep your doors and windows locked, and don't let anyone in.

No dater's elevators with strangers. If it's just you and them, don't answer personal questions on the phone or in person.

Travel with another person if you feel unsafe, or call a friend or family member.

Stay aware of your surroundings. Be careful of people who seem suspicious.

If you feel you are being followed, check directions, walk toward other people, and call campus security.

Use your first floor as your starting point, and know your way around.

The Problems with the UA

By Keith Farrow

As other writers have pointed out, there are not many places to get your hands on a good solid, well-written, liberal arts education these days. The University of Pennsylvania is one of the few places where you can still get a decent liberal arts education.

There are many places where you can get a good education, but the University of Pennsylvania has a few things going for it that most other schools don't.

One of the things that makes the University a good place to get a liberal education is the quality of its faculty. The University has many excellent professors who are dedicated to teaching and research.

The University also has a good range of courses and majors to choose from, and it is easy to find courses that interest you.

Finally, the University has a good sense of community, and it is easy to get involved in activities that you enjoy.

Here are a few things you should keep in mind if you're thinking about attending the University of Pennsylvania:

1. The University is a good place to get a liberal arts education.

2. The University has many excellent professors.

3. The University has a good range of courses and majors.

4. The University has a good sense of community.

5. The University has a good range of extracurricular activities.

6. The University has a good location, and it is easy to get around.

Raising Security Consciousness

By Ruth Wells

We have been asked to put together a list of a few simple safety tips for you to keep in mind when you're out and about on campus.

Keep your doors and windows locked, and don't let anyone in.

No dater's elevators with strangers. If it's just you and them, don't answer personal questions on the phone or in person.

Travel with another person if you feel unsafe, or call a friend or family member.

Stay aware of your surroundings. Be careful of people who seem suspicious.

If you feel you are being followed, check directions, walk toward other people, and call campus security.

Use your first floor as your starting point, and know your way around.

The Problems with the UA

By Keith Farrow

As other writers have pointed out, there are not many places to get your hands on a good solid, well-written, liberal arts education these days. The University of Pennsylvania is one of the few places where you can still get a decent liberal arts education.

There are many places where you can get a good education, but the University of Pennsylvania has a few things going for it that most other schools don't.

One of the things that makes the University a good place to get a liberal arts education is the quality of its faculty. The University has many excellent professors who are dedicated to teaching and research.

The University also has a good range of courses and majors to choose from, and it is easy to find courses that interest you.

Finally, the University has a good sense of community, and it is easy to get involved in activities that you enjoy.

Here are a few things you should keep in mind if you're thinking about attending the University of Pennsylvania:

1. The University is a good place to get a liberal arts education.

2. The University has many excellent professors.

3. The University has a good range of courses and majors.

4. The University has a good sense of community.

5. The University has a good range of extracurricular activities.

6. The University has a good location, and it is easy to get around.

Raising Security Consciousness

By Ruth Wells

We have been asked to put together a list of a few simple safety tips for you to keep in mind when you're out and about on campus.

Keep your doors and windows locked, and don't let anyone in.

No dater's elevators with strangers. If it's just you and them, don't answer personal questions on the phone or in person.

Travel with another person if you feel unsafe, or call a friend or family member.

Stay aware of your surroundings. Be careful of people who seem suspicious.

If you feel you are being followed, check directions, walk toward other people, and call campus security.

Use your first floor as your starting point, and know your way around.

The Problems with the UA

By Keith Farrow

As other writers have pointed out, there are not many places to get your hands on a good solid, well-written, liberal arts education these days. The University of Pennsylvania is one of the few places where you can still get a decent liberal arts education.

There are many places where you can get a good education, but the University of Pennsylvania has a few things going for it that most other schools don't.

One of the things that makes the University a good place to get a liberal arts education is the quality of its faculty. The University has many excellent professors who are dedicated to teaching and research.

The University also has a good range of courses and majors to choose from, and it is easy to find courses that interest you.

Finally, the University has a good sense of community, and it is easy to get involved in activities that you enjoy.

Here are a few things you should keep in mind if you're thinking about attending the University of Pennsylvania:

1. The University is a good place to get a liberal arts education.

2. The University has many excellent professors.

3. The University has a good range of courses and majors.

4. The University has a good sense of community.

5. The University has a good range of extracurricular activities.

6. The University has a good location, and it is easy to get around.

Raising Security Consciousness

By Ruth Wells

We have been asked to put together a list of a few simple safety tips for you to keep in mind when you're out and about on campus.

Keep your doors and windows locked, and don't let anyone in.

No dater's elevators with strangers. If it's just you and them, don't answer personal questions on the phone or in person.

Travel with another person if you feel unsafe, or call a friend or family member.

Stay aware of your surroundings. Be careful of people who seem suspicious.

If you feel you are being followed, check directions, walk toward other people, and call campus security.

Use your first floor as your starting point, and know your way around.

The Problems with the UA

By Keith Farrow

As other writers have pointed out, there are not many places to get your hands on a good solid, well-written, liberal arts education these days. The University of Pennsylvania is one of the few places where you can still get a decent liberal arts education.

There are many places where you can get a good education, but the University of Pennsylvania has a few things going for it that most other schools don't.

One of the things that makes the University a good place to get a liberal arts education is the quality of its faculty. The University has many excellent professors who are dedicated to teaching and research.

The University also has a good range of courses and majors to choose from, and it is easy to find courses that interest you.

Finally, the University has a good sense of community, and it is easy to get involved in activities that you enjoy.

Here are a few things you should keep in mind if you're thinking about attending the University of Pennsylvania:

1. The University is a good place to get a liberal arts education.

2. The University has many excellent professors.

3. The University has a good range of courses and majors.

4. The University has a good sense of community.

5. The University has a good range of extracurricular activities.

6. The University has a good location, and it is easy to get around.
U. Music Professor Wins Pulitzer Prize

by DANIEL M. ASHT
Associate Professor Richard Wernick Monday for an original musical composition entitled "Vision of Terror and Wonder." This prize, in the category of "Distinguished Musical Composition," carries with it a $1,000 cash award.

"It's very exciting," the 45-year-old composer said Monday. "I couldn't believe it for the first couple of hours. It took awhile for the reality to sink in." Wernick, who joined the University faculty in 1968, described his award-winning composition as "a fusion of harmonic and non-harmonic tendencies." He said the composition is based on three parallel original texts: Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Hebrew; Revelations, from the New Testament, in Greek; Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Arabic. According to Wernick, the Hebrew and Arabic are the "original" texts.

"The composition all pertain to the destruction of the world and its recreation," said Wernick.

Housing

(Continued from page 1)

"There have not been any negotiations and there is no idea as to how much or who will pay for PGH facility, Beermann said.

"Kaddish-Requiem, and A Prophesy for Jerusalem."

"I couldn't award a position," carries with it a $1,000 cash award. According to Wernick, the winning 30-minute composition as "a fusion of harmonic and non-harmonic tendencies." He said the composition is based on three parallel original texts: Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Hebrew; Revelations, from the New Testament, in Greek; Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Arabic. According to Wernick, the Hebrew and Arabic are the "original" texts.

"The composition all pertain to the destruction of the world and its recreation," said Wernick.

A number of Wernick's creations have been recorded, including: "A Prophesy for Jerusalem," "Kaddish-Requiem, and A Prophesy for Jerusalem." Wernick, who joined the University faculty in 1968, described his award-winning composition as "a fusion of harmonic and non-harmonic tendencies." He said the composition is based on three parallel original texts: Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Hebrew; Revelations, from the New Testament, in Greek; Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Arabic. According to Wernick, the Hebrew and Arabic are the "original" texts.

"The composition all pertain to the destruction of the world and its recreation," said Wernick.

"I had no prior knowledge. I'm shocked. I'm thrilled," he said Friday. "It's an honor to be recognized for my work." Wernick, who joined the University faculty in 1968, described his award-winning composition as "a fusion of harmonic and non-harmonic tendencies." He said the composition is based on three parallel original texts: Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Hebrew; Revelations, from the New Testament, in Greek; Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Arabic. According to Wernick, the Hebrew and Arabic are the "original" texts.

"The composition all pertain to the destruction of the world and its recreation," said Wernick.

A number of Wernick's creations have been recorded, including: "A Prophesy for Jerusalem," "Kaddish-Requiem, and A Prophesy for Jerusalem." Wernick, who joined the University faculty in 1968, described his award-winning composition as "a fusion of harmonic and non-harmonic tendencies." He said the composition is based on three parallel original texts: Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Hebrew; Revelations, from the New Testament, in Greek; Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Arabic. According to Wernick, the Hebrew and Arabic are the "original" texts.

"The composition all pertain to the destruction of the world and its recreation," said Wernick.

"I had no prior knowledge. I'm shocked. I'm thrilled," he said Friday. "It's an honor to be recognized for my work." Wernick, who joined the University faculty in 1968, described his award-winning composition as "a fusion of harmonic and non-harmonic tendencies." He said the composition is based on three parallel original texts: Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Hebrew; Revelations, from the New Testament, in Greek; Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Arabic. According to Wernick, the Hebrew and Arabic are the "original" texts.

"The composition all pertain to the destruction of the world and its recreation," said Wernick.

A number of Wernick's creations have been recorded, including: "A Prophesy for Jerusalem," "Kaddish-Requiem, and A Prophesy for Jerusalem." Wernick, who joined the University faculty in 1968, described his award-winning composition as "a fusion of harmonic and non-harmonic tendencies." He said the composition is based on three parallel original texts: Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Hebrew; Revelations, from the New Testament, in Greek; Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Arabic. According to Wernick, the Hebrew and Arabic are the "original" texts.

"The composition all pertain to the destruction of the world and its recreation," said Wernick.

A number of Wernick's creations have been recorded, including: "A Prophesy for Jerusalem," "Kaddish-Requiem, and A Prophesy for Jerusalem." Wernick, who joined the University faculty in 1968, described his award-winning composition as "a fusion of harmonic and non-harmonic tendencies." He said the composition is based on three parallel original texts: Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Hebrew; Revelations, from the New Testament, in Greek; Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Arabic. According to Wernick, the Hebrew and Arabic are the "original" texts.

"The composition all pertain to the destruction of the world and its recreation," said Wernick.

A number of Wernick's creations have been recorded, including: "A Prophesy for Jerusalem," "Kaddish-Requiem, and A Prophesy for Jerusalem." Wernick, who joined the University faculty in 1968, described his award-winning composition as "a fusion of harmonic and non-harmonic tendencies." He said the composition is based on three parallel original texts: Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Hebrew; Revelations, from the New Testament, in Greek; Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Arabic. According to Wernick, the Hebrew and Arabic are the "original" texts.

"The composition all pertain to the destruction of the world and its recreation," said Wernick.

A number of Wernick's creations have been recorded, including: "A Prophesy for Jerusalem," "Kaddish-Requiem, and A Prophesy for Jerusalem." Wernick, who joined the University faculty in 1968, described his award-winning composition as "a fusion of harmonic and non-harmonic tendencies." He said the composition is based on three parallel original texts: Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Hebrew; Revelations, from the New Testament, in Greek; Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Arabic. According to Wernick, the Hebrew and Arabic are the "original" texts.

"The composition all pertain to the destruction of the world and its recreation," said Wernick.

A number of Wernick's creations have been recorded, including: "A Prophesy for Jerusalem," "Kaddish-Requiem, and A Prophesy for Jerusalem." Wernick, who joined the University faculty in 1968, described his award-winning composition as "a fusion of harmonic and non-harmonic tendencies." He said the composition is based on three parallel original texts: Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Hebrew; Revelations, from the New Testament, in Greek; Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Arabic. According to Wernick, the Hebrew and Arabic are the "original" texts.

"The composition all pertain to the destruction of the world and its recreation," said Wernick.

A number of Wernick's creations have been recorded, including: "A Prophesy for Jerusalem," "Kaddish-Requiem, and A Prophesy for Jerusalem." Wernick, who joined the University faculty in 1968, described his award-winning composition as "a fusion of harmonic and non-harmonic tendencies." He said the composition is based on three parallel original texts: Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Hebrew; Revelations, from the New Testament, in Greek; Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Arabic. According to Wernick, the Hebrew and Arabic are the "original" texts.

"The composition all pertain to the destruction of the world and its recreation," said Wernick.

A number of Wernick's creations have been recorded, including: "A Prophesy for Jerusalem," "Kaddish-Requiem, and A Prophesy for Jerusalem." Wernick, who joined the University faculty in 1968, described his award-winning composition as "a fusion of harmonic and non-harmonic tendencies." He said the composition is based on three parallel original texts: Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Hebrew; Revelations, from the New Testament, in Greek; Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Arabic. According to Wernick, the Hebrew and Arabic are the "original" texts.

"The composition all pertain to the destruction of the world and its recreation," said Wernick.

A number of Wernick's creations have been recorded, including: "A Prophesy for Jerusalem," "Kaddish-Requiem, and A Prophesy for Jerusalem." Wernick, who joined the University faculty in 1968, described his award-winning composition as "a fusion of harmonic and non-harmonic tendencies." He said the composition is based on three parallel original texts: Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Hebrew; Revelations, from the New Testament, in Greek; Isaiah, from the Old Testament, in Arabic. According to Wernick, the Hebrew and Arabic are the "original" texts.

"The composition all pertain to the destruction of the world and its recreation," said Wernick.
Batmen's Bliss Cook Hawks

BY ANDY ROSE

Their pitching may be erratic and their fielding may be vulnerable, but let it be said with certainty and statement that the Penn baseball team can still win.

In past years, however, few have noticed this fact, the Quakers had an easy time dismantling St. John's, and thus far this year, not even the Ruffed Grous can match their zest for destruction.

And so, they did it again at Shibe Park field, flinching at the word, at the source of the problem for their diamondwomen this time -- the upperclassmen.

They led the way, and that's the way it was. A power play was the upperclassmen. And that's the way it was.

But then all of a sudden it doesn't continue to work and the team falls apart. What was, however, is that the freshmen were clubbing and putting their way to the Promised Land.

Yesterday, with a victory against their crosstown foes, and it won't be an easy task for the Penn women's softball coach Linda Carothers.

"I'm really sick of repeating myself," sighed Carothers, "but our huge number of injuries, injuries, injuries. Penn women's softball coach Linda Carothers.

As promising as the freshmen are, they still have not found the formula for their pitching and defense, win, up, and on.

"It's a very good win," said Penn. "I've been forced to do."