Bakke Inspires
Closer Scrutiny
Of U. Policies

By SUSAN ELMAN
The Supreme Court's admission policy raises many questions in the U.S. In particular, there is debate over whether the controversial Allan Bakke reverse discrimination suit against the University of California Medical School, which has been upheld by the court, is being followed correctly.

The University of California at Davis, which has been ordered to reserve 16 percent of its places for minority applicants, is currently being developed by a Dental Program.

The McGil reports deal what it seems is a problem, that is, the reluctance of all institutions, who are"consistently and currently deferred" with the public's lack of understanding and important And Minority applicants are handled differently from non-minority applicants. This is an issue of concern to the administration. The administration has been lobbying the state legislature in recent years to pass laws that would mandate the creation of a Dental School. The plan, if implemented, will definitely increase the Dental School's capacity.

The administration has been working closely with the state legislature to ensure that the Dental School's capacity is increased. The administration hopes to see the appropriation bills passed in the near future.

By JOEL SEGEL

A impedes with decades of first-time students.
The University of California Medical School, which has been ordered to reserve 16 percent of its places for minority applicants, is currently being developed by a Dental Program.

The plan, if implemented, will definitely increase the Dental School's capacity. The administration hopes to see the appropriation bills passed in the near future.

Committee To Plan Fiscal Details
Of Dental School Reorganization

By RICHARD E. GORDON

The Dental School Committee is preparing to plan the fiscal details of the Dental School's reorganization.

The plan, if implemented, will definitely increase the Dental School's capacity. The administration hopes to see the appropriation bills passed in the near future.

ECONOMIST Speaks on Impact of Energy Crisis

By GARY BINDER

The impact of the energy crisis on the economy was discussed by Dr. Gary Binder, the Economics Department, at a meeting of the Philadelphia Economic Club.

Dr. Binder explained the various factors that have contributed to the energy crisis, and outlined the potential impacts on the economy.

The energy crisis has had a significant impact on the economy. Dr. Binder explained that the high cost of energy has led to increased inflation, and has also contributed to a slowdown in economic growth.

Dr. Binder also discussed the potential solutions to the energy crisis, including increased energy efficiency and the development of alternative energy sources.

Dr. Binder's presentation was well-received, and was informative.

Inflation and widespread harvest

Although some students said that they were not sure if the reorganization would be successful, others believed that it was a good move.

The students also expressed their concerns about the new guidelines, which they felt were too restrictive.

The planning committee is now reviewing the new guidelines. They are expected to make a decision about the new guidelines by the end of the month.
The Steering Committee Of The Center For Aging

Present: J. Williamson, M.B., Ch.B.
Professor, Geriatric Medicine
University of Edinburgh, Scotland

Care Of The Elderly Patient
In The United Kingdom:
Who Needs A Geriatric Service?

October 19, 4-6 P.M.  Faculty Club
Winch & Cheese
Front Dining Room

Tonight:
Ladies Night 9-2
and don't forget -
The Yoshuk Pokum
$1.75
(With Mushrooms, Peppers Or Pizza Topping)

Xerox Copies
1.15 per original - .5 cents
16 and up per original - .4 cents

Campus Copy Center
2007 Walnut Street
Near to Shamba-Halibin
Lowest Prices on Campus

Jewish Campus Activities Board
University of Pennsylvania
Philadelphia, Pa. 19104-5200

Visit Israel Following Finals In December 1977
Special Program for Students Under The Aegis of the Jewish Campus Activities Board
Student Tour I-Dec. 21-Jan. 4
Student Tour II- Dec. 6-Jan. 9
Only $875 Complete

- Telephoning career with deep religious purpose
- Free Israel visa
- Complete tour of Israel
- Facilities to meet all budgets
- Learn about state and social customs
- Biblical sites
- Complete sight seeing
- Excellent opportunities for spiritual growth
- English speaking guide
- Different programs for inservice visiting students
- Faculty mission to Israel-Dec. 26-Jan. 5
- Applications now being accepted
- Celebrate the 30th Anniversary of the Jewish State in Israel

Contact:
Jewish Campus Activities Board
University of Pennsylvania
Philadelphia, Pa. 19104-5200

The Daily Pennsylvania
Tuesday, October 18, 1977

Pa. Senate Appropriations

(Continued from page 1)

plan," she added, referring to the legislative leaders' strategy which so far has not worked.

Although negotiations have been delayed since July, the beginning of the fiscal year, because the General Assembly was unable to pass a budget and allocate their money.

Recently, in August, the school's appropriations were intentionally removed from the general state appropriations to fund the schools and allocate their money. They are reluctant to do this because the Senate bills can legally remain on the calendar for ten legislative days while they wait for the Senate last week to return today without having some firmer action forced the schools and other universities to raise money to continue their operations. They are still fighting over the House to pass a budget calling for a $300 million tax increase.

Assembly to develop a way to fund the schools and allocate their money.

Although he said Messinger still plans to try to put the Senate to consider the appropriations bills.

Afflerbach also said that the Treasurer bill had much effect on the Senate members, claiming that demonstrating by persons affected by the upcoming legislative "stampede," frequently in the Capitol.

Assembly Vice President for Administration James Shade, the University's official spokesman in Harrisburg, later concurred with this view.

Bakke

(Continued from Page 3)

brief on the briefs case that it recently submitted jointly with several other schools. The brief states that the California Supreme Court's decision should be overturned.

Although the Morill report stresses the need for diversity in the student body, it also states that "it should be the responsibility of the institution to explain the admission policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency."

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the university's admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.

Although the Morill report stresses the need for diversity in the student body, it also states that "it should be the responsibility of the institution to explain the admission policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency."

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.

Although the Morill report stresses the need for diversity in the student body, it also states that "it should be the responsibility of the institution to explain the admission policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency."

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.

Although the Morill report stresses the need for diversity in the student body, it also states that "it should be the responsibility of the institution to explain the admission policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency."

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.

Although the Morill report stresses the need for diversity in the student body, it also states that "it should be the responsibility of the institution to explain the admission policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency."

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.

Although the Morill report stresses the need for diversity in the student body, it also states that "it should be the responsibility of the institution to explain the admission policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency."

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.

Although the Morill report stresses the need for diversity in the student body, it also states that "it should be the responsibility of the institution to explain the admission policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency."

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.

Although the Morill report stresses the need for diversity in the student body, it also states that "it should be the responsibility of the institution to explain the admission policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency."

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.

Although the Morill report stresses the need for diversity in the student body, it also states that "it should be the responsibility of the institution to explain the admission policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency."

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.

Although the Morill report stresses the need for diversity in the student body, it also states that "it should be the responsibility of the institution to explain the admission policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency."

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.

Although the Morill report stresses the need for diversity in the student body, it also states that "it should be the responsibility of the institution to explain the admission policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency."

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.

Although the Morill report stresses the need for diversity in the student body, it also states that "it should be the responsibility of the institution to explain the admission policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency."

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.

Although the Morill report stresses the need for diversity in the student body, it also states that "it should be the responsibility of the institution to explain the admission policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency."

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.

Although the Morill report stresses the need for diversity in the student body, it also states that "it should be the responsibility of the institution to explain the admission policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency."

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.

Although the Morill report stresses the need for diversity in the student body, it also states that "it should be the responsibility of the institution to explain the admission policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency."

Director of Admissions Bill Barstow stated last Friday that the minimum figure of seven percent set in the admissions policy that no applicant be admitted to the University unless he is accepted on an acceptable level of academic proficiency.
Letters to the Editor

Clarinifying Affirmative Action Implications

Richard Gordon’s “Broad implications of the Affirmative Action decision” (October 12, Editorial) requires refutation.

Gordon leaps to the conclusion that a Supreme Court ruling against affirmative action programs is “unfair” because it would leave policies of discrimination in favor of children of alums. While sympathy for this demographic is to be applauded, this sympathetic position cannot be placed on the same level as affirmative action programs.

Alumni preferences constitute a residual component of existing college admission; they are not considered to be just as important as race, gender, or national origin.

There seems to be great interest among your contributors in the ramifications of the Supreme Court’s decision. Questions that affect admitents programs draw the interest of people with a myriad of educational backgrounds. At least two have visited the DEPT. OF METALLURGY and have stayed late to discuss the legal implications of the decision.

A Concern for Real Life Matters

As students who are once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson.

Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

An Enlightening Lesson

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson.

Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

An Enlightening Lesson

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson. Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

A Concern for Real Life Matters

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson. Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

An Enlightening Lesson

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson. Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

A Concern for Real Life Matters

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson. Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

An Enlightening Lesson

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson. Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

A Concern for Real Life Matters

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson. Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

An Enlightening Lesson

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson. Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

A Concern for Real Life Matters

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson. Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

An Enlightening Lesson

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson. Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

A Concern for Real Life Matters

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson. Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

An Enlightening Lesson

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson. Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

A Concern for Real Life Matters

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson. Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

An Enlightening Lesson

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson. Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

A Concern for Real Life Matters

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson. Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

An Enlightening Lesson

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson. Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.

A Concern for Real Life Matters

As students who were once ignorant to the techniques required in today’s society, we would like to check John Morris and the members of the Neighborhood Team Local 35 for a very enlightening lesson. Prior to this fall we believed that “the underclass” was a term that was used to describe a demographic group that was just about any group to achieve their goals. We were naive.

This is not an argument against helping them achieve their goals. Rather, we believe that they need to take the initiative to assist themselves.
Hospital Patient Falls to Death

By ERIC JACOBS

A 36-year-old patient at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania leapt to his death Sunday from a sixth-floor window in an apparent suicide event.

The patient, Dennis Simon, a former Reading, Pa. resident who lived in an apartment at 4527 Pine Street, died instantly following his fall at 4:20 a.m. Sunday. He had been admitted to the hospital last Wednesday, suffering from a broken arm and a concussion.

Simon had been diagnosed with schizophrenia at the state mental hospital in Phoenixville and had been released from there several months ago. He had been admitted to the hospital on July 17 after a shooting incident during his stay at the state hospital.

Simon was transferred to the state hospital in Phoenixville after his arrest in October for shooting a fellow patient.

In his room, the victim's blood was found on the floor, the bed, and the sheets. There were no signs of struggle or struggle.

The police said that the body was carried to the hospital and that there was another patient and a visitor in the room when Simon jumped backward through the closed window.

The hospital's public relations director, Dr. Leon Blum, fielded calls from the media. "We are devastated by the loss of one of our patients," he said. "Our thoughts are with the family and friends of the patient and with the hospital staff who knew him."
Slump Clouds Booters’ Ivy Future

By BISHOP HOFFMAN

A look at the Ivy soccer scene in recent games shows the Penn team still has far to go before it can be considered a serious threat to Penn's soccer star. The Ivy league is not about to give up on the Quakers just yet, however.

The Penn booters have had an extremely difficult season in the Ivy, losing 12 games, drawing 1, and winning just 1. The only bright spot on the season so far has been the game against Dartmouth.

Gamble’s Fall Fashions

By MARK HAYMAN

It's the season for bold fashion statements, and the Quakers are leading the way with their colorful and creative uniforms.

In the early 1970s, the Quakers adopted a new uniform policy, allowing players more freedom to express their personal style. This led to a variety of looks that were both functional and fashionable.

Champion Boo Runs for Fun

By RICH HOFMANN

Richmond "Boo" Morcom is an intramural track star at Penn, known for his competitive spirit and his love for the sport of running.

As a young man, Morcom was an amateur track star, but he eventually turned his passion for running into a full-time career. Today, he still runs competitively, competing in everything from 5k races to marathons.

Stickwomen Face Ursinus

By ROB SCHAEFFER

The Quakers and the Ursinus College women's hockey team are facing off this weekend in a crucial match for both teams. The game will determine who advances to the championship round of the league playoffs.

The Quakers have been on a roll lately, winning their last three games, while Ursinus has struggled, losing their last two. The game will be a tough one, but the Quakers are confident they can come out on top.