Still Subject of Discussion

Many of the companies are also refusing to send deliveries to campus—"We're not taking sides either way," said one fraternity member. "We're just following orders from the Teamsters local 115." Because of the dispute, a number of fraternities have been unable to receive supplies. "I'm not going to cross the picket lines," he said. "I'm not going to send them anything at all."

Meyerson Advises Student Group Against Lobbying in State Senate

By STEVEN A. MARQUEZ

The status of a proposed cooperative health care program with Thomas Jefferson University is still the subject of discussion between Faculty Senate Leader Robert Stellar and the dean of Jefferson's school of allied health professions, John Gaddis.

The University Trustees urged the presidents of member cooperatives to develop the cooperative program with a view to bringing them "closer together" on the School of Allied Medical Professions. "It should be a model for the future," said Stellar.

A University Senate sub-committee has been established by the Senate to analyze the proposals and to try to evolve a plan "amicably and without any ill will or any bad feeling among the people who have been trying to work on this program," said Stellar.

"It's the attitude of the Trustees that is of interest to us," Stellar said. "The Trustees have been very accommodating and I think we're getting along very well with them."

Meyerson Proposes Senate Action

By JEFFREY N. BARKER

"The allocation will come before the Senate later this year," said Senator Wayne Meyerson. "The Senate can't be bound by an action of the Board of Trustees, and we're going to bring the matter to the Senate this fall.""The proposal was introduced by Meyerson in the Senate last week, and the committee heard testimony from students and faculty members opposed to the freeze.

The Senate committee, chaired by Meyerson, recommended to the Senate on Wednesday night that they proceed with the proposals, which would increase the student body appropriation from $17 million to $20 million.

Stellar and Kurnis "are just discussing whether it's fair," Stellar said. "We're going to try to reach an agreement on this issue." Stellar said the committee hoped to have a report ready for the Senate to consider by the end of the month.

New Dental Program

The University of Pennsylvania is planning to establish a new dental program, with an initial budget of $5 million, to be supported by the University's Faculty Senate.

"It's a good thing," said Stellar, "if they can come up with a healthy plan."

"The $17 million allocation from the University is one of the reasons why the Senate has been able to continue with the proposal," said Stellar.

Campus Security Officers Enter City Police Academy

IN HARRISBURG
Six University campus security officers have entered the Pennsylvania State Police Academy at City Hall for police training. Deborah McCabe, Sandra Moteles, Nancy Frantz, Helena Gibbons, Deborah McPhail and Sandra Middlebrooks will be the first campus security officers to be trained at the Police Academy. Previously all officers were trained through a police department and the Chambersburg Police Department. Dr. Robert Wells said, "It is very significant that these officers are receiving training at the Police Academy because the training will take place in an urban setting which is the specific area that these officers will be dealing with."

The Labor Dispute

By Don Manno

The past several weeks, universities across the country have faced ever-increasing problems in finding appropriate personnel to run their programs. Programs are being cut back, faculty members are being forced to relocate due to the tenure crunch and staff members are also losing their jobs.

In higher education, this crisis has hit the University of Pennsylvania unusually close to home. Oustside of the rat race, the University laid off all housekeepers and contracted out services to outside firms.

If the University's post-cost-saving measures, such as the phase-out of the School of Arts and Sciences Professors, are any indication of the University's true fiscal position, it is a dire financial situation.

This crisis, however, is not new. For years, the University has been in a fiscal crisis. In order to keep its financial position from further deterioration, it has been forced to cut back on programs, force faculty members to relocate, and cut staff members' wages.

The University can no longer deny the need to save money. It has already slashed its payroll and cut back on programs. It is now time to cut back on the University's overhead costs.

In the following days, University officials will be deciding on the fate of the University's housekeepers. They will be deciding whether to keep the housekeepers or to contract out their services. This decision will have a direct impact on the University's financial position.

The decision to contract out the University's housekeeper services will have a direct impact on the University's financial position. It will mean a loss of revenue to the University. But it will also mean a loss of jobs to the University's housekeepers.

The University should be the first to say that it is not in the University's best interest to contract out the University's housekeeper services. It should be the first to say that the University's housekeepers are an integral part of the University's community. They are an integral part of the University's history.

The University should be the first to say that it is wrong to contract out the University's housekeeper services. It should be the first to say that the University's housekeepers are an integral part of the University's community. They are an integral part of the University's history.
Immediate Majority Rule Urged At Forum on Africa

By MARIA BRAGA

A group of predominantly black students, faculty, and others, including several visiting speakers, gathered in a room adjoining the National Security Agency (NSA) auditorium to hear Toure urge black Americans to band together in a “national movement for majority rule,” in order to make “the struggle a success.”

Toure urged black Americans to support the movement for majority rule in Africa. He added that the black American population is “our greatest ally” in making the struggle a success.

WHAT'S AN NSA CAREER?

It’s different things to different people.

Of course, most of the employees at the National Security Agency have certain things in common: all are citizens of the United States, they are civilians employed by the Department of Defense; they are engaged in projects vital to our national security and intelligence production; and they all enjoy the benefits that accompany Federal employment. However, the differences between our career opportunities are just as interesting as their similarities. For example:

TO THE ELECTRONIC ENGINEER (BS, MS): An NSA career means deriving into unique projects which can span every phase of the R&D cycle. An engineer may design, develop, test and accept communications systems for the NSA. He may work with devices and systems whose capacities and speeds are still considered tomorrow in most quarters.

TO THE COMPUTATIONAL SCIENTIST (BS, MS): Means applying his or her knowledge in a wide scope of sub-disciplines such as systems design, systems programming, operating systems, computer applications and in an environment of fast growing electronic, military, and national needs.

TO THE MATHEMATICIAN (MS): A career means applying mathematics, working with extremely challenging mathematics and mathematics-related problem. Statistic mathematical, logic, and computer applications are just a few of the tools applied by the NSA mathematician.

TO THE LONGITUDINAL MIS (BS, MS): A career consists of transmitting, translating, and perhaps conducting analysis and documentation projects. Those, Mid-Eastern, and Asian language majors can operate challenging assignments and continuing self development.

Interested in learning more about the difference in an NSA career? Include an interview with us through your Student Placement Office today. U.S. Citizenship is required.

Meyerson Advises Group

Citing a letter sent by Rubenstein to the University’s internal grievance board, Meyerson said the administration was aiming to "avoid personal involvement in the dispute." The students said the administration attempted to exclude the student body from participating in University decisions.

"The experience tells me people are afraid to act on their own. They are afraid to speak out. They are afraid to take risks. They are afraid to express their opinions. They are afraid to be heard.

Frost Force Turnovers; Whip USMA Prep, 24-8

By STUARTS-MARIN

The freshman football team (3-1), normal of failures, continued its devastating attack on the opponents with a dominating display against the USMA Prep. The Quakers scored 24 points in the first half alone, setting a new record for the team. Prior to this game, the Quakers had not scored more than 7 points in any game. The Quakers dominated the USMA Prep with a 24-point lead, winning the game 24-8.

The Quakers started the game with a powerful rush, scoring on their opening drive. They continued their strong play, scoring on their next two possessions to take a 14-0 lead at halftime. The USMA Prep was unable to mount a sustained offensive drive, failing to score a single point in the first half. In the second half, the Quakers continued their dominance, scoring two more touchdowns to extend their lead to 24 points.

The Quakers' defense was also impressive, limiting the USMA Prep to just 8 points. The defense intercepted 3 passes, recovered 2 fumbles, and held the USMA Prep to just 73 total yards of offense. The Quakers' strong performance on both offense and defense resulted in a decisive victory over the USMA Prep.
