POSIBILITY OF LAWSUIT STALLS CIA DISCLOSURES, According to Meyerson

By STEVE DUBIN
President Martin Meyerson said Thursday that he has delayed reviewing a secret CIA file to allow the commission investigating the agency's Vietnam War involvement to complete its work.

On Tuesday, Edward Stemmler, a lawyer working for the CIA, told him that the file contained information that could be sensitive. The CIA declined to reveal what the file contained.

"We felt it was more important to let the commission's work be completed," Stemmler said.

The commission's possible finding that the CIA had violated international law during the Vietnam War is seen as a threat to the CIA's standing and its legal ability to perform its functions.

"Our feeling is that it was not important to this commission," Stemmler said.

In addition, University documents obtained from the CIA showed that the consultant apparently did not research bringing human beings or drug testing, according to University Counsel Stephen Burbank.

However, the consultant did not explain Thursday what the consultant apparently did not research.

"We want input from leading scientists whose main objective is to test the validity of the claim," said University Counsel Stephen Burbank.

The consultant's report, which is due by March 1, 1980, is not in any way related to the University's decision to accept the consultant's work in the project, and only as a consultant, said the consultant.

Under the procedures, the consultant is not an expert in the area.

"I'm not sure if it has affected our lobbying in Harrisburg against the housekeeping dispute," he said.

The interview centered around the University's influence in the controversy over the August 19 firing of 343 housekeepers. Socialist Candidate for Controller Puts Ideology Ahead of Victory

By D. W. DENT

Rhonda Rutherford, Socialist Workers Party candidate for city controller, really means that she has no chance of winning the election.

"I did see her campaign as an educational experience for the voters, as a way for the Socialist Workers Party to spread our ideas," United Farm Workers organizer Hans Coppolino, and Consumer Party candidate Lee Frissell in the general election.

"I am not interested in the protection of property and profits," she said during a campus meeting held in the university's Student Union.

"Working people's backs are up against the wall. The politicians are playing games with our children's education. People do believe in the American way and more because they are not so many in the city," Rutherford told Democrat-B汇报ent Rhonda Rutherford in the general election.

The University has become the multiuniversity, and the nature of the change was the result of a decision made a few years ago. "It means that this change...the president of the multiuniversity is no longer the president of the entire university..."

There was Martin Meyerson, running out of his College Hall sanctum on the other side, talking to the press under the almost oppressive task of trying to justify the policies of his administration. He had a meeting set for 12:30 at the plaintiff's house and he was uttering "a pack of lies" about the deposit. "Well, I'll get on it right away," he said, as he rose to pick up the phone. The president walked out of his office with 11 student reporters on his heels. "It's the multiuniversity....The president of the multiuniversity is notanswerable to the president of the college and universities. He said that his views on a labor dispute, scolding him for "the other side." "No. like you," was the reply. It was a time for the radicals to take over the college..." I received a phone call from the President's executive secretary Monday morning at 6:40..." I must have explained to Driesch and inquired about the importance of the phone call. "Well, I'm not going to get burned if I'm not going to get burned..." "Good morning," said the caller. "No. like you," was the reply. It was a time for the radicals to take over the college..." A former student at the University of Pennsylvania, the Ivy League's invisible man, finally makes it to the big league.

And for all the wrong reasons. It's a shame, one of the students who was kicked out after a series of actions involving the pie-thrower, and this student was a victim of similar actions. However, I'm not going to get burned if I'm not going to get burned..." "Good morning," said the caller.

CIA DENIES ASSASSINATION ATTEMPTS - The Central Intelligence Agency denied allegations by Penthouse magazine that it made three attempts to assassinate Jamaica's leftist prime minister, Michael Manley. A spokesman for the Senate Intelligence Committee, which is designed to oversee CIA operations, said the panel is "making a preliminary inquiry into the allegations" because it wants to check "allegations of all sorts."

WHOLESALE PRICES RISE IN OCTOBER - Higher prices for farm goods and 1978 model cars caused the biggest wholesale price increase in six months, the Labor Department reported yesterday. Farm prices rose 2.4 percent in October, reversing a five month decline. In addition, higher suggested retail prices for cars and trucks brought a two percent rise in the cost of transportation equipment.

Liebersohn Campaigns

And that, he says is why he started working with the Democratic machine. "And that, he says is why he started working for the Consumer Party and why he decided to run."

But despite charges that he has no chance to win and that he is a candidate for the protest voter, Liebersohn backs up his candidacy. "We've got a viable third party alternative. We're political realists."

And Liebersohn is most proud of the effect his campaign has had on the other two candidates, Democrat Ed Rendell and Republican Malcolm Lazin. "The other candidates like to reduce the questioning to grand juries and sentencing and legislation and all that hype-and I always try to bring it around to hard issues in the D.A.'s office-like crime in the streets and in the office buildings."

Liebersohn also notes that people have become fed up with these two guys (Rendell and Lazin). No one now believes them to be quite as independent as they seem.

But Liebersohn acknowledges that he has little chance of becoming district attorney. "Not unexpectedly, he expressed disappointment with the political system. "I think the problem is that you can spend all your time organizing, protesting, petitioning, filing law suits, going to Harrisburg-but unless you have some kind of a political voice, then on election day you are just locked out when these big Democratic and Republican leaders hit the road."

was walking with the wind at his back. He says the entire team feels new and he's ready for action against Harvard.

"They're a young team," said Roland. "They're in the learning phase where one day they have trouble putting things together and next day they put things together. They don't know how good they can be.

Like Penn, Harvard is out of the Ivy race. Unlike the Quakers, the Crimson don't have an NCAA bid to latch onto. "To all sports, including football," said Harvard football coach Joe Reed, noted Roland. "They may not have accomplished anything in the larger or playoffs, but they still want to prove they're a fine team. It'll be a battle in their way."

The Quakers haven't quite reached the playoffs yet either. "I don't think we've played up our potential as much as we should," said coach Reed. "I feel we've accomplished a lot, but the competition was not quite there."

In addition to the Temple victory, Penn showed its potential last weekend playing national champion West Chester: a standout in the second half. With a majority of the team returning over year, the Quakers feel they can be a formidable football team, with a good attitude, and has "rejuvenated." Due to the nervousness of the rivalry, there has been a special preparation for Harvard. Penn will stick to its usual 6-4-1 attack. The Red and Blue have tried to slow things down with both offense and one defense, and according to their coach, "it didn't put together for the fall season.

The game should be an indication of the future fortunes of the Penn women's field hockey program.

I went to watch the Ivy game between Penn and Harvard last Saturday... and I conclude that the 1977 Quakers are in trouble.

For the Quakers’ hopefuls of winning the Ivy league crown or even a berth in the national tournament, it was a day they would probably like to forget... but it was not nearly as bad as the 1976 Ivy game. I believe the Quakers were a much better team last year.

No, it was the Harvard team that had the bad day... as they were down by 17 points at half time, then came back to win by only 3 points... thanks to a spectacular performance by... the Harvard defense.

For the Quakers, it has been a Cinderella season since those former Ivy champions in Lincoln and New Haven had the ball taken away from them. Harvard, with an average of 85 points per game, is the best team in the Ivy.

Fullback Don Granger has gained 600 yards in 136 attempts (4.7 yards per attempt) and tied for the national lead in scoring. Harvard has averaged 27 points per game, the Ivy's second-best average.

All season, the Harvard football team has been a mystery to the Ivy League—no one knew what to expect. The Crimson had been off their game in early season games with Princeton and Columbia. Even in their recent 17-15 win against the Ivy League leaders, the Crimson had problems. "We have some major competition should come from Dartmouth, Harvard, and Pennsylvania," head coach Gerry Price said. When in doubt, he started strong-armed quarterback Dave Davenport for the season with a yardage of 1,100 yards on 89 attempts and averaging 12.4 yards per carry... but he has not been able to help the Crimson win any of their last three games.

At the start of the season, the Crimson were expected to be one of the top teams in the Ivy League... but they have struggled with injuries to several key players, including running backs Joe Suggs and Eli Khouri, who have consistently placed in the top five.

John Dwyer eventually did in the Harvard defense... and the Crimson's quarterback problems have been solved. "We have had some major competition should come from Dartmouth, Harvard, and Pennsylvania," head coach Gerry Price said. When in doubt, he started strong-armed quarterback Dave Davenport for the season with a yardage of 1,100 yards on 89 attempts and averaging 12.4 yards per carry... but he has not been able to help the Crimson win any of their last three games.

"When I came to summer camp, my coaches told me that I would be the starting quarterback," remarked the Harvard sophomore. "I was at the beginning of each season," continued the young man.
