 Settlement Is Reached On Annenbg City Taxes

BY SUSAN LAYMAN

The University agreed Thursday to pay the city of Philadelphia $6,000 annually to maintain the Zellerbach Theatre.

The city had originally wanted the University to pay $35,000 a year to tax-exempt status for the Zellerbach Theatre.

An appeal on the original reassessment was heard by the Board of Revision of Taxes on Jan. 9, but a settlement was reached Thursday.

The Zellerbach Theatre, according to the city, is an "essential public necessity," therefore it is qualified for tax-exempt status.

The city asked for $35,000 a year for maintenance of government services in their present level in line with inflation.

Lord, Anything But Snow

By P. H. Wiest

How Truckin' Lord!

Dear God, that's better. You know that. I didn't know what you were talking about.

Oh, I know you're the one who started it all.

You've got to get out of this morn. You've got to get off the streets. You've got to get your face up in the air.

I don't want it to be like this. I want the snow to go away.

You've got to get on this morn. You've got to go through life. You've got to live.

I want the snow to go away. I want the world to be like it was before.

You can't go on forever. You've got to go on forever. You've got to keep going. You've got to keep living.

I want the snow to go away. I want the world to be like it was before.

You can't go on forever. You've got to go on forever. You've got to keep going. You've got to keep living.

I want the snow to go away. I want the world to be like it was before.

You can't go on forever. You've got to go on forever. You've got to keep going. You've got to keep living.

I want the snow to go away. I want the world to be like it was before.

You can't go on forever. You've got to go on forever. You've got to keep going. You've got to keep living.

I want the snow to go away. I want the world to be like it was before.

You can't go on forever. You've got to go on forever. You've got to keep going. You've got to keep living.

I want the snow to go away. I want the world to be like it was before.

You can't go on forever. You've got to go on forever. You've got to keep going. You've got to keep living.

I want the snow to go away. I want the world to be like it was before.

You can't go on forever. You've got to go on forever. You've got to keep going. You've got to keep living.

Newly-Hired Albert Gaudiosi

while sitting in his new-furnished University office overlooking College Green.

Gaudiosi has committed himself for "one-third of my time for a year" as University consultant. Since he took his position in December, he has invested in several projects, the costs of which he will not say. The University is keeping the nature of his work a secret, and it is not clear whether or not he will sign a contract if his work continues. Gaudiosi noted that he was determined to make the University "a political mastermind, a mover in the 'movers and shakers' of the city, and that a campaign of it would be given to legislators and other government officials.

The need for such a document became apparent last fall when the Pennsylvania State University reached a deadlock with the Teamsters Union, who were represented by the University. Shortly after his appointment, Gaudiosi signed an agreement with the Teamsters that the University would not strike and would not go out of business.

"The real worth of Penn has never been at the same time," Gaudiosi commented. "If the state's legislators were more aware of what's going on here, maybe they'd be a little more favorable on some programs for funding."

ARCHAEOLOGY IN ISREAL
Lecture by Dr. Moshe Kochavi, Director, Institute Of Archaeology, Tel Aviv University
On "The Earliest Hebrew Alphabet"
Room 138 University Museum
5:00 P.M. Thursday, January 26th
Sponsored by Department Of Oriental Studies And Center For Ancient History
Dr. Kochavi will discuss the development of the early Hebrew alphabet in the light of the discovery of new excavations during the course of his excavations at the site of Tel Batash, probably to be identified as a camp occupied by the Israelites at the time of the battle of Ebenezer (I Samuel 4). The Israelite defeat at Ebenezer at the hands of the Philistine forces from near by Ashkelon may also be excavated by Dr. Kochavi to the lark of the Ark of the Covenant and the destruction of Shiloh.

Yearlings Aim for 7th Win

On the court, Haigler prefers the players to lead the squad rather than himself. He is content to sit on the sidelines and offer advice during time-outs. He started a policy where he speaks first, then Mark (Jablonski) will say something, and then the players can suggest, said Haigler. "If we forget something they can remind us."

"In the final analysis, they play," he continued. "I can't perform. We really beat you up, but we should be more relaxed."

In order to defeat their northwest rivals, the Red and Blue will have to get everyone involved in their offense and get the fast break going. "It's not too difficult to see why Chestnut Hill is a very physical team," she stated. "There is nobody rougher that we play. They really beat you up, but we should be able to win.

The Red and Blue's second obstacle will be Chestnut Hill's gym. "It's a tiny gym and the walls are close to the court," continued Ashley. Coping with the condition of the gym may be more difficult than the aggressiveness and physical game and the size of Chestnut Hill. Two years ago a weaker Quaker team was intimidated by both the condition of the gym and the roughness of play. "We just weren't ready," Ashley recalled. However, last year at the Palestra the Red and Blue were able to handle Chestnut Hill.

Today's game matches two teams with contrasting styles. Penn is less physical, preferring to fast break. "We hope they learn while they enjoy," said Ashley. "We just want them to understand what we are trying to do efficiently and defensively. The guys have pride in themselves as a man and I hope they won't get complacent. We hope they learn while they enjoy themselves."

It's not too difficult to see why Chestnut Hill's coaching style is successful. "In the final analysis, they play," said Haigler. "So if we forget something they can remind us."

"It's people," answered Flick. "In a competitive situation things are different. He's the kind of player who should be playing every minute of the game... It's a question of who's the most fun to have around, who's the most fun to be with."

Some people might contend that a certain school of basketball thinking suggests that a team should play only those individuals who are the most talented. But that is not the case with Flick and his Quaker teammates. As long as the team is winning, Flick and his teammates are content to play only the most fun players.

"I think it's a lot more important to have fun playing than to have the best team," Flick said. "If you have a good team, you have fun. But if you have a bad team, you don't have fun."

In his own quiet way, Ron Haigler has quietly led by example. His reluctant to take charge in a game, and is a perfectionist in his preparation. He is a perfect example of the American basketball player, who is willing to go through the motions of the game to help his team win.

"He takes the role of a quiet gentleman," commented teammate Ted Flick. "He is not the type of player who will ever be the star of the game. But he is the type of player who will always do his best."

"I have an older brother and sister," said Haigler. "When I was young, my parents divorced and we went to live with my older brother. He had a chance to go to a top-ranked college, but he chose to stay home and become a lawyer."

Haigler still expects a close game. "I'm very excited and I'm really looking forward to it," he said. "I'm really hyper. I'm just walking on air."
