East Coast Is Paralyzed By Blizzard

A relentless blizzard dealt its final blow to the Northeast on Tuesday with above-record snowfall, the storm a relentless blizzard that had cut off schools and cities alike, and at least 10 people died in New York and New Jersey.

The worst of the storm appeared over, but the tail end of the monster snowstorm had dropped two feet of snow in the New York City area.

"The snow has been very heavy," said George Hill, a weather reporter with the New York Times. "I've never seen anything like it in my lifetime."

Tuesday the storm center had moved on. Snow-buried vehicles made matters worse along the East Coast, where thousands of National Guardsmen were pressed into action to dig themselves out.

This is the first year students have been used to help out in the snow removal, said a spokesman for the University. "I got up early for class and I can't study all day," Donnally explained.

The snowstorm, which began Jan. 30, forced the University into a three-day break scheduled for the university's spring break in March.

The weather toll since January 1 to at least April 1 had been extraordinary.

Shapp Request No More Rise In State Allocation to U.

By GEORGE KELLAM

Pennsylvania Governor Milton Shapp on Tuesday released his budget for the next fiscal year, the most that the University has received this year. The University received the same $11.85 million state allocation received this year. The University said that the $1.5 million cut in state aid since last year, along with the best of all possible worlds, represented an annual decrease in state support for the University.

Shapp did not recommend any increases in state support for any colleges and universities in the state. "This is a time when we make a harder decision," he commented.

"There are two problems - no budget and we're not sure what happens," he said.

At the University, snow removal continued on Tuesday, and a record amount of snow was removed. In addition, 5,700 tons of snow were hauled from the campus area to the campus.

A snowplow crew, after a snowstorm that left the campus area under several feet of snow, cleared the campus area on Tuesday.

"We're trying all the time to get the snow removed," said Provost Eliot Stellar, who was in charge of the snow-removal program.

"No, we're not satisfied with the results," Stellar said.

"I'm ready to go," Stellar said. "I got up early for class and I can't study all day," Donnally explained.

HELP!
A black (12 mos. old) female German shepherd with tan feet, answering to the name "Roxy" was lost by the Belknap residence house door at 3715 Locust, Philadelphia, PA 19104. If you see this dog with her "kidnapper" or know of her whereabouts, please call 215-686-3577 - ANYTIME.

A substantial reward is offered for the recovery of the dog.
The play details the experiences of Sizwe Bansi, a black South African who applies for a job at a white-owned bank, only to be told that he is denied employment because of his race. Sizwe's case is a metaphor for the discriminatory passbook system that was prevalent in South Africa. The play is set in a time when apartheid was in full effect, and it explores the intersection of race, class, and gender in South African society.

Inexpedient Delay

The University Administration delayed until 4 a.m. Tuesday morning before canceling classes for the day. Professor Ron Bond said that he did not want to disrupt important University functions if it could be avoided.

But the other Big Five schools—LaSalle, St. Joseph's, Temple, and Villanova—announced Monday night that they would cancel classes Tuesday because of the approximately 11 inches of snow dumped upon the area. In addition, Philadelphia public and parochial schools were announced closed for Tuesday, Monday night.

Most of the University faculty live in the suburbs and commute to the University. With forecasts that the weather in the suburbs would reach 15 below zero this night, it should have been easy to predict difficulties that professors might have trying to trek to the University.

A Lax Regard for Campus Theft

By Rob Dubow

The University has been known to refer in jest to students who use lockers as "the sausages in a bun," but one policy in place at 15th Street and Lombard—where one employee who had arrived in the University in 1969—was referring to the number of lockers stolen while they had been closed that day.

There were many, many more.

"That occurs whenever there are lockers," a student told the Daily Pennsylvanian. "Somebody would steal it, and then it's not so easy to catch them because people, and people, and people, by stealing something,苍 infer that you own it. And that's how you get away with it."

Rob Dubow (PS 55) is the staff editor of the Daily Pennsylvania.

An Unrecognizable Sort of Torture

By Joseph T. Moldovan

In response to Mark Seltzer's column, "A Test in Skokie," (DP, February 7), I contend that the proposed law is nothing more than a cover-up of the abuses of this freedom of speech as guaranteed by the First Amendment.

The abridgment of this freedom of speech as guaranteed by the First Amendment thereby does not become some new freedom of speech as guaranteed by the First Amendment, which I believe this to be an abuse of that right.

As for the students, if the University Administration were to try and suspend the students for going on an "unofficial" strike, as was proposed by groups such as the United Students for Social Reform, as many as 300 students would not be suspended, but would simply continue their "strike" until they were suspended.

Furthermore, if the University Administration were to try and arrest the students for going on an "unofficial" strike, as was proposed by groups such as the United Students for Social Reform, as many as 300 students would not be arrested, but would simply continue their "strike" until they were arrested.

The University Administration should no longer hesitate to refer to the Shah as an enlightened leader. All this Shahism reveals is that the Shah is an enlightened leader who can be trusted to do what is right for his country.

The Shah's visit to the U.S. was a great day for all of us. It was a great day for the Shah, a great day for the Shah's Visit, and a great day for the Shah's Visit.

State Allocation to University

Meyerson and Stellar agreed that it will be much more difficult to get legislation in any area by the legislature and the budget message, Stouffer said that increases in any area by the legislature will "only be accepted by us if they are accompanied by serious cuts in other areas." We are very worried that quality of education will suffer.

On his way to the finals of the U.S. Open in Pennsylvania late last month, Francisco Gonzalez won his first tournament of the season and, in the process, ended a year in which he had been hurt and discouraged. Gonzalez's 6-1, 7-5, 6-4 victory over the No. 2-seeded Ken Brown in the singles final was his first win over a leading U.S. player since he upset 1977 U.S. Open champion Jimmy Connors last year.

Gonzalez's win in the U.S. Open was only the second of his career, but it was something of a breakthrough for him. Despite a series of injuries, he had been unable to play at his best for much of the past year. But in the past two months, he has been able to practice more consistently and has started to develop a stronger game.

Gonzalez is now ranked No. 25 in the world and is considered one of the top players in the U.S. He has been a consistent performer in recent years, reaching the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open in 1976 and the semifinals in 1977. He also reached the final of the U.S. Open in 1975, but lost to Jimmy Connors.

Gonzalez's victory in the U.S. Open was a turning point for him, as it provided him with a boost of confidence and experience. He is looking forward to the remainder of the season, and hopes to continue his success on the court.
