Lack Of Funds Endangers Vet School’s Accreditation

By ERIK JACOBS

HARRISBURG—University officials and the Pennsylvania House Appropriations Committee’s higher education subcommittee are demanding that the University of Pennsylvania end its 15-year-old relationship with the University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School, which will result in the loss of $1.2 million in state funding. The University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School was founded in 1894 and is the oldest and largest veterinary school in the United States.

The University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School is currently facing severe financial difficulties due to the loss of state funding. The school’s budget is in deficit and its financial situation is uncertain. The school is seeking a $1.2 million infusion from the Pennsylvania legislature to avoid a deficit and to continue operations.

The University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School has a long history of providing quality veterinary education and training to students. The school has produced many successful professionals who have gone on to work in various fields including veterinary medicine, research, and agriculture. The school is home to several research laboratories and centers that conduct cutting-edge research in areas such as animal health and disease prevention.

The school is also known for its outreach programs and partnerships with other institutions. It collaborates with regional and national organizations to provide veterinary services to underserved communities and to promote animal welfare and public health.

The Pennsylvania House Appropriations Committee’s higher education subcommittee is calling for the University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School to be cut off from state funding and to seek alternative funding sources. The committee has also called for an investigation into the school’s financial management and decision-making processes.

The University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School has disputed the recommendations of the committee and has stated that it is committed to finding a solution to its financial situation. The school has requested an extension of time to address the committee’s concerns and to explore alternative funding options.

The University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School’s accreditation status is also in question due to its financial difficulties. The school has until June 1 to submit a plan to the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA) to address its financial issues.

The AVMA is the primary accrediting body for veterinary schools in the United States. It requires schools to meet specific standards to maintain accreditation. The University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School has recently experienced changes in leadership and has faced criticism for its financial management.

The University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School has sought assistance from the Pennsylvania legislature and other stakeholders to address its financial situation. It has also sought input from the AVMA and other accrediting bodies to determine its accreditation status.

The University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School is an important institution in the field of veterinary medicine and training. It has a rich history and has contributed significantly to the advancement of veterinary knowledge and practice.

The school’s financial situation is of concern not only to its stakeholders but also to the broader veterinary community. The university is working to address its financial issues and to ensure the continued operation and accreditation of the school.

Women’s Group May File Complaint Over University Grievance Process

By ANNE MARIE STERN

University Women for Equal Opportunity at the Pennsylvania State University have announced their intention to file a complaint with the Office for Civil Rights (OCR) over the university’s grievance process. The OCR is an office of the U.S. Department of Education that investigates complaints alleging that an educational institution has violatedTitle IX of the Education Amendments of 1972.

The complaint alleges that the university’s grievance process is discriminatory and violates Title IX. The Women’s Group has expressed concern about the lack of transparency and fairness in the grievance process, particularly in cases involving allegations of sexual harassment.

The Women’s Group has called for the university to implement a Title IX policy that is consistent with federal guidelines and that protects the rights of all students. They have also called for the appointment of an independent investigator to handle Title IX complaints.

The university has responded to the Women’s Group’s concerns, stating that it is committed to ensuring that all students are treated fairly and that their rights are protected. The university has also stated that it is working to improve its grievance process and that it is committed to implementing changes that are consistent with Title IX.

The Women’s Group has stated that it will continue to monitor the university’s grievance process and to seek improvements. They have also called on other institutions to support their efforts to ensure that students’ rights are protected.

The Women’s Group’s complaint is significant because it highlights the ongoing challenges that many educational institutions face in implementing Title IX policies and in ensuring that all students are treated fairly. It also underscores the need for continued vigilance and for the support of students who are seeking to protect their rights.
Vet School

recent financial history with the state. With the $8.3 million cut in the education last year and if you add two years of inflation, that is a $13 million dollar cut in real dollars in one

We also pointed to the fact that the University has yet to receive any of this year’s appropriation following the

Meyerson said before entering the hearing that he had been encouraged

As the construction of the hospital is Meyerson said that the chances of an million dollar cut in real dollars in one year, "Meyerson said.

The delay will cost the state budget. The delay will cost the University approximately $80,000 in interest charges.

Meyerson cited University moves to cut it, one lecture; the decisions of the School of Allied Medical Professions (SAMP), for elimination of 210 staff positions, the inconsiderable increases in staff salary.

Meyerson said that he had been encouraged after talking to several legislators, but he conceded that the chances of an increased appropriation this year are small.

As the construction of the hospital is delayed, the $13.5 million price-tag of the hospital will rise due to inflation.

Monday, February 27, 1978

increased appropriation this year are

Meeting: Tues, Feb 28 At 3:00, Franklin Room, Houston Hall

EARN OVER $600 A MONTH FOR THE REST OF YOUR SENIOR YEAR.

If you are interested in math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It’s called the NUPOC-Collegiate Program (NUPOC is short for Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate), and if you qualify it can pay you as much as $611 a month for the remainder of your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you will receive an additional year of advanced education. Education that would cost thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy we pay you.

It isn’t easy. Only one of every six applicants will be selected, and there are fewer than 300 openings. But those who make it find themselves in one of the most elite engineering training programs anywhere. With unequaled hands-on responsibility, a $24,000 salary in four years, plus travel, medical benefits and education opportunities. (Juniors eligible to apply after first semester)

For more details on this program, ask your placement officer when a Navy representative will be on campus, or call the Officer Program Office listed below:

L.T. W.E. Hoffman- (215)-564-3824
NAVY NUCLEAR PROGRAMS
128 N. BROAD ST., PHILA., PA. 19102

PENN STUDENT AGENCIES—411 Logan Hall
243-6815
The following column was submitted by the Pennsylvania PENNSYLVANIAN Office of the Governor.

The administration has agreed to support the Center's professional theater series. As such, the Annenberg program will continue. The University's financial situation, however, will require that the Annenberg Center for Communication continue to support the Annenberg program. The administration has determined that this is the best course of action, given the current financial situation and the need to preserve the Annenberg Center for Communication.

The administration has agreed to support the Center's professional theater series. As such, the Annenberg program will continue. The University's financial situation, however, will require that the Annenberg Center for Communication continue to support the Annenberg program. The administration has determined that this is the best course of action, given the current financial situation and the need to preserve the Annenberg Center for Communication.
Tigers Top Racquetmen, Team Finishes At 7-2

By ANDY HESS

There was a lot of tension, but there are times when a team can feel good in a losing cause. The Penn 1-1 squash tandem beat 7-2 Princeton's 3-4 No. 1 doubles by an apparently one-sided 5-4 score. In this case, the score was misleading, as the Quakers did play well.

The Red and Blue's second man Jim Foster complimented the team's performance. Foster was playing a double, but his partner, the Dandy's Worth, was blown away by Frank Dennis. Foster was down 5-4 in games and trailing 3-1, facing three match points at 15-13. But Foster made three fantastic shots to save the first match point. He then swept the net two points to knot the match. It was Foster's only good game, but his effort was nonetheless impressive.

"I was not disappointed by my loss in the matches," said Foster afterward. "Princeton is by far the best team we have not. There were a lot of good matches, so we can go on our own merits."

That said, Princeton was the victor 7-2. The Quakers won only three of the eight singles matches. Tim Edwards, the second in doubles, was the only one who swept the next two points to take the game. He then saved the first match point. He then swept the net two points to knot the match. It was Foster's only good game, but his effort was nonetheless impressive.

"I was not disappointed by my loss in the matches," said Foster afterward. "Princeton is by far the best team we have not. There were a lot of good matches, so we can go on our own merits."

Film Products and Processing

NEW LONDON STYLE PIZZA

Grinders Hoagies Steaks

PIZZA

Our Daily Home Made Dough

For Better Service Call:

EV2-1492
EV2-0308
For Convenient Pick-Up

Near The Hi Rise
44 South 40th St.
Salters Shakes Quakers To Sweep

By STEVE PETERS

The Daily Pennsylvania

Monday, February 21, 1978

Salters Shakes Quakers To Sweep

By DICK STEVENSON

The Daily Pennsylvania

Monday, February 21, 1978