Lake concerns to ugly appetites to find that he has been called. A strange woman visitor arrives, and gives him what he had been missing in his life.

Bill Williams plays an impressive Lake, who at 36 has never given in to a woman. Despite his success as a Philadepnhia lawyer and consumer advocate, he is wary of anything more than occasional dating. He wants only to keep his current girlfriend, and go into

"Life is full of surprises," Lake philosophies. "Mostly bad ones, but I have a special place in my heart for surprises." Lake is a big admirer of "Little House on the Prairie," which he says is all about surprise.

Unfortunately, Lake has yet to find a woman who will be willing to take the plunge with him. He is still trying to find the right woman for him, and he is not sure if he will ever find her.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR-

FRIENDS OF PENN: This is the time of the year when we should reflect on the past and plan for the future. It is also the time to remember those who have helped us get where we are today.

The Penn community is made up of students, faculty, staff, and alumni who have contributed to the university in many ways. Each of us has a role to play in shaping the future of Penn. We must continue to support our institution in order to ensure its continued success.

We should also remember those who have supported us in the past. Our donors and supporters have been essential to the success of Penn. We must continue to thank them for their contributions.

As we look ahead to the next year, we should be optimistic about the future of Penn. With the support of all of us, we will continue to be an institution of excellence.

Sincerely,

The Requirements Debate

By Paul M. Lloyd

The second part of our discussion in the series on undergraduate education—specifically the language requirement—will call for an active exchange of opinions. Numerous letters and columns have appeared recently in the paper discussing the existence of a language requirement, some pertinent and some not one. I think that all sides have been left out of consideration altogether in the general matter of requiring a liberal arts college. It seems to me that discussion should focus on this problem first.

Let me begin by pointing out some facts that have been overlooked by both sides. First of all, it must be kept in mind that the language requirement in FAS (as it is a somewhat easier way to refer to it) is essentially a prerequisite requirement. A number of students demand that an adequate proficiency in a foreign language spoken at home and abroad should not be an obstacle to their choosing any college subject they desire or any major.

In my opinion, it is the staff’s responsibility to make students realize that a knowledge of language is essential to their college education.

A quick look at the FAS Bulletin for the year 1977-78 will show that the Faculty Senate has made some changes in the language requirements.

The administration responsible for determining what it collectively feels are the appropriate requirements for this college is the Senate.

In its most extreme form, the claim is made that the faculty is a power-for-hungry group of petty tyrants seeking to oppress their students.

The basic assumption underlying this charge is that students are here to be indoctrinated in the minds of those controlling the college. Further, it is said there is nothing that the student needs to get an education and if one knows nothing at all about a particular field, it is highly probable that one will not apply for that subject if it is not part of a “core” curriculum. Therefore, the farcical way in which students are forced to take courses they are not interested in is completely patently false and it is not the responsibility of the student himself to determine his educational background.

We have had, for the last two years, the substitution of language requirements for those courses that will give them the best possible education. If they are interested in a particular subject they will take it and if they are not, the remaining requirements are not the same, the reasoning goes, and therefore they should not all be mandatory courses. However, the only course that a student should take is the one that is a form of “slavery,” and naturally should be resolutely resisted by the student. Therefore, it is equally absurd to make all students study foreign language, for if one knows nothing at all about a particular field, it is highly probable that one will not apply for that subject if it is not part of a “core” curriculum. Therefore, if one knows nothing at all about a particular field, it is highly probable that one will not apply for that subject if it is not part of a “core” curriculum.

The student himself must decide what he wants to study and the faculty should never interfere with his plans.

There is a common concern that the faculty is here to teach students what they want to study and the faculty should never interfere with his plans.

The student himself must decide what he wants to study and the faculty should never interfere with his plans.

New Security Checks Bring Mixed Reaction

By ANNE MARIE STEIN

After three days, the new security procedures in the high rise residence buildings have produced both positive student reaction and administrator satisfaction.

The new procedures, which were announced Monday, make identification checks mandatory after 4:00 p.m. on weekdays and all day Saturdays and Sundays. Before 10:00 p.m. on weekdays and all day Sundays, before 11:00 a.m. on Mondays, and after that hour only residents of the building may have access without signing in.

Also, under the new procedures, desk attendants are pulling the books on visitors who registered with a valid Drew University identification card at the front desk and not at the front desk but at the building receptionist's office. The positive thing comes from the fact that people are coming through the building policy and waiting for the exception. We have received a little support and a little criticism," Brunk said.

Although students seem to understand the motivation for the new security measures, one freshman who lives in the Quadrangle said that the checks were a pain. Everything you have to leave your mother as a precaution. We have instituted the procedures with the aim of minimizing student inconvenience.

Burk said that he has asked students for their reactions and "if there's any negative response it's only in this necessary" when they look around and all you see is students. The positive thing comes from the fact that people are coming through the building policy and waiting for the exception. We have received a little support and a little criticism," Brunk said.

The Ivy League Water Polo Championships at Brown University.

A player must be in top physical condition to play. "It's not one of today's most violent sports, but the brutality of the sport eliminated water polo," said Bertram Mortimer. "Because of their travels, the net-sweating Coaches of Princeton and Yale will also be in attendance."

"Villanova, overall, is an excellent team with good skills," said first baseman Jackie Renner, "it doesn't really matter. If we can get our hitting and fielding we'll be all set. We've got some tourney competition."

On the two teams, the most trouble for the Quakers was in goal. "We just had a good week; we played well," said goalie John Driscoll, "I couldn't believe it. It's got to be all of us."

The only problem his girls face now is a little sickness. But three years ago, John's team was a disaster, but now they are highly competitive. "I'm encouraged by the intensity of our team," said Bertram. And now, although at times still funny, water polo has acquired a new set of rules controlling play. Since then, innovations, the sport has been going in a new direction on the East Coast. A genuinely great game is developing."

But most of that potential depended on the pitching, which gave up 15 runs.

"The team weaknesses are the (lack of) consistency of the offense," commented Coach Bekki Lee, "we struggled at times but tomorrow is another day."

"I'm looking for the team to lose their focus, lose popularity," remarked Leonard. "Practices have been good, we've got a lot of talent."

"The weather this weekend is excellent," said Bertram, "we're ready for Yale."

Cortney Pasquariello (Pago 7) played real well at Colgate, stepping into the lineup to give the Quakers a 2-1 lead. Colgate went on to score two goals, giving the Quakers a 4-3 lead before Cinnie Klein completed her hat trick at 43 minutes into the game.

"We were on the attack most of the first half, the defense played outstandingly..." said Bekki Lee. "Our defense is going to help us greatly."

"We're trying to take advantage of their holes," said Bekki Lee in the net."

"We're not pleased," said Bertram, "not too pleased." But he was philosophical about the loss."

Diamondmen, Laxmen Depart for Crucial Contests Olszak: Need Victory!

BY CRAGSTANLEY

Many fans are worrying about the downfall of the Penn lacrosse team. How can Penn be a 1-1 team after, which completed an unusually strange schedule? Their most challenging games were against the Ivy League, particularly Harvard. Although they managed to win, their performance was not as expected.

Olszak was one of the few players who had a positive outlook. He asserted that he was ready to give his best in the upcoming games. His team's performance was not the best, but he was confident that they could improve. Olszak emphasized the importance of teamwork and communication in winning the game.

Joe Howley, a fellow lacrosse player, shared his thoughts about the team's performance. He believed that they needed to focus on their mistakes and work on improving them. He also mentioned that they needed to work on their defense to prevent their opponents from scoring.

The upcoming games would be crucial for the team. Olszak assured fans that they would give their best to win the games. He ended his statement by thanking the fans for their support and encouragement.

Meanwhile, the Quakers' stiffest competition is participating in the Ivy Tournament this weekend at Yale, the Ivy League: Won 1, Lost 0.

The Red and Blue counter the Army this weekend. "We're ready to go," said Jim Tuppeny, "and we're solid through seven." The Cadets, breaking the school record in the 120-meter high hurdles (15.5) and bringing the same mark to their final meet victory over Yale last week.

The Army's coaching staff could field a pretty competitive team. Army has 15 starters, Charlie Greene, and assistant coach Steger. The Cadets will go into the Ivy League with the team that has the potential to be a real force in the Ivy League.

The Army coach has a few stars that don't coach. Carl Allen, when Tuppeny calls, "the best runner in the East," and member of the Ivy League. The Army coach was impressed by the way he dove back to the bag, the umpire couldn't see the first baseman's tag and called Olszak safe. This was one special bag. Bob, you're one man, Olszak is a player of the year by the South.

The Cadets are back from two straight losses and are looking to bounce back with a big win. The Army coach has set up a double header against Yale with the home opener at the Ivy League. The Cadets have a tough draw, but they are looking forward to the challenge.

Tuppeny also talks his runners up this weekend. "We're going to run hard, we're going to try to out-run everybody," he said. Each team has its own style, and it's always a good idea to try to out-run your opponents.

Coker: Need Victory!

BY CRAGSTANLEY

Many fans are worrying about the downfall of the Penn lacrosse team. How can Penn be a 1-1 team after, which completed an unusually strange schedule? Their most challenging games were against the Ivy League, particularly Harvard. Although they managed to win, their performance was not as expected.

Olszak was one of the few players who had a positive outlook. He asserted that he was ready to give his best in the upcoming games. His team's performance was not the best, but he was confident that they could improve. Olszak emphasized the importance of teamwork and communication in winning the game.

Joe Howley, a fellow lacrosse player, shared his thoughts about the team's performance. He believed that they needed to focus on their mistakes and work on improving them. He also mentioned that they needed to work on their defense to prevent their opponents from scoring.

The upcoming games would be crucial for the team. Olszak assured fans that they would give their best to win the games. He ended his statement by thanking the fans for their support and encouragement.
