Honors College’ Proposal To Pick Brightest Students

By JONATHAN GREEN

Director of Admissions for Northwestern University

The Northwestern University has submitted a proposal to the Illinois legislature seeking authorization to establish an Honors College. If approved, the college would be the first of its kind in the state and would offer a unique educational experience for the most academically talented students.

The proposal would create a new division within the university, separate from the existing College of Arts and Sciences. This division would be dedicated solely to招收 highly accomplished students, providing a rigorous curriculum and personalized academic support.

The Honors College would focus on interdisciplinary courses, fostering collaboration across disciplines, and offering opportunities for research and independent study. It would be housed on the Evanston campus and would house the existing Honors Program.

The establishment of the Honors College is seen as a way to attract top-tier students to the university, enhance its reputation, and solidify Northwestern’s position as a leading research institution.

The proposal will be considered by the Illinois General Assembly during the current legislative session.

INDIAN DANCE, an integral part of that nation’s culture, will be performed Wednesday, April 19, 1978.

The woman prays to a deity for relief. This background of India to be understood by all of pantomime that breaches language barriers and allows the religious-cultural dancer does much to convey the sentiments of the Indian existence. It is a form interpretation of the tale as it is told through background songs.

The most common theme of these originally religious dances is of a woman viewed “as an offering to God” according to Angeloff.

Although present day Indian culture has inspired a great cult following in America, it (Hare Krishna) has also spawned serious stereotypes and misinterpretations. Students, attracted by an interest in India, are still celebrating it. The popularity of India, are still a ‘ MADMAN.

The Balalaikas, Ukrainian Dance, will be performed at the Annenberg Center.

The Peace Science Dilemma:
By Vartan Gregorian

The conclusion of the review will appear in tomorrow's Daily Pennsylvanian.

The report is an official publication of the Review Committee, and it will be presented at a news conference this afternoon. The report is expected to cost around $5,000 to produce.

The Review Committee is comprised of experts in the fields of peace science, international relations, and social policy. They were appointed by the University's Board of Trustees and are expected to present their findings to the university community in a comprehensive report.

The report is expected to cover a range of topics related to peace science, including the impact of nuclear arms control agreements, the role of non-governmental organizations in conflict resolution, and the effectiveness of diplomatic strategies in resolving international disputes.

The review is expected to take place on the University's campus and is expected to be attended by members of the academic community, as well as representatives from various government agencies and international organizations.

The report is expected to be released at a press conference that will be held at 3:30 p.m. today, in the University's Administration Building. The report will be available for public review and discussion shortly thereafter.

The Review Committee has released a preliminary statement regarding the findings of their investigation, and they are expected to make further revelations in the near future.

The review is also expected to address concerns related to the role of University administration in the decision-making process regarding strategic military spending. The committee is expected to present their findings to the university community in a comprehensive report.

Tends to be self-perpetuating.

Buildings for the past three years," Beerman said.

Buildings themselves. "We have been battling the physical structure of the upperclassman, his interaction with other students doesn't have to end," Beerman said.

But in addition to the structure, the impersonal reputation of the High Rise is due to the transitory group of people you are isolated if they want to be," Abbot said.

"People live in places like this because they don't want much interaction," Beerman said.

"People come in wishing that they were in the Quad, but later, because this is a special student," Abbot said.

glowing terms of Strauss’ professional abilities. Typical of their comments is Alter’s. “Strauss is a good man and very talented,” he said.

Currently, a subcommittee of the budget committee, formed last semester, is meeting to recommend changes to help the committee. Among the ideas being bantered about are timetables for the committee to complete its work, changes in membership requirements, and guidelines that will help define certain levels of increase.

“I don’t blame anyone for the committee’s problems. I blame the system,” Adams said, adding that the system forces decisions to be made at the top. He adds that decisions should be made at lower levels. Reflecting similar thought is committee member and Associate Provost John Hobstetter, looked upon by the committee as knowledgeable, who said more guidelines need to be established. “We need to build a systems guideline instead of a global approach,” Hobstetter explained.

FUNDAMENTALS OF MOUNTAINEERING

What is mountaineering all about? Funny you should ask. Because we just happen to have an answer: (Ah-h, life’s little coincidences.) Mountaineering is a skill, a science and an art. Yet anyone with a thirst for excellence and normally developed motor skills can master it. Simply study these fundamentals and follow them faithfully.

1. Step one, appropriately enough, starts by selecting the correct site. To do so, pick up a bottle of Busch. This is commonly called heading for the mountains.

2. Okay, here's where the fun begins. Hold the mountain firmly in your left hand, grasp the mountain top with your right hand and twist the little fella off. There you go.

3. Now for the tricky part. Neophytes, listen up: the proper pour is straight down the center of the glass. Only in this way will the cold, invigorating taste of the mountain come to a head.

4. Once poured, pacing becomes paramount. As any seasoned mountaineer will tell you, the only way to down a mountain is slowly, smoothly and steadily—soaking every swallow of the brew that is Busch. If you’re a bit awkward at first, don’t be discouraged. Perfection takes practice. Soon enough, having emptied your glass and filled your soul, you too will be a mountaineer.

Don't just reach for a beer. Head for the mountains.

"It was a close game," said Penn women's lacrosse coach, Anne Fagan. "Everyone knew it was going to be a close game."

Of course, a win would have made it a little bit sweeter. Nonetheless, the Quakers (3-5) played an all-out exciting game yesterday in a 3-0 deficit to Temple (5-2) at Franklin Field.

The air was cold and the conditions were harsh as Temple opened their season with a dominating performance. The Quakers simply couldn't keep up with the visitors.

"They are two of the top teams in the country," said Hays. "They are two of the top teams in the country."

Perman's team edges there.

"Temple is very strong through the middle, especially offensively," added Fagan. "They are consistently putting points on the board."

In a 12-10 victory, Temple scored four consecutive goals, bringing the game wide open.

"It was a good game," said Penn's captain, William Woodman. "I think we can move forward now."

In a 12-10 victory, Penn held the series 20-12-2, winning last year's game convincingly on their home edge.

"They have a lot of experience, both on the field and off," added Woodman. "They have a lot of experience, both on the field and off."
Avenging Netmen Host PSU

By FRANCIS M. MARIN

Penn's 1978 baseball season was launched in style yesterday by a quartet of home-run-hitting seniors. The Red and Blue team exuberantly burst through the ball gate at Franklin Field yesterday. A walk and two singles filled the bases in the second and the Quakers went on to put up four runs in the inning. Although the pitcher was out the next time around, theestate to the next hit. Joe Stacky, pinch-hitter for Mike Knapton, lined a single to left that drove home the fifth run and sent Penn to the lead. The Quakers went on to win, 7-3.

Bqall Quits Lincoln

By RICHARD MCADAM

Lincoln's baseball season ended yesterday as the Red and Black team lost to Penn, 7-3. The Quakers scored four runs in the second inning and went on to win. The score was tied 1-1 in the top of the second inning when the Penn second baseman hit a three-run home run. The Red and Blue team scored two runs in the third and the final two runs in the seventh. The game was called in the eighth inning because of rain. The two teams played a total of six games, with the Quakers winning all but one. The final score was 3-1 in favor of the Red and Blue team.
