Decline of Political Stock
Caused Stellar Resignation

By GREG MANNING

The University’s flamboyant president, Eldor Stellar, decided to resign Monday, citing the “harshness and parsimony” of the Board of Trustees. Stellar, who has been the president for 14 years, said that he feels there should be “more of a meritocracy” at the University, and that he wants to return to teaching. He said that he would like to return to his native country, where he was born and raised.

Stellar cited the Board’s decision to issue a $5 million grant to the University of Pennsylvania as a reason for his resignation. He said that he was “taken by surprise” by the decision, and that he did not know about it until Sunday. He added that he would like to return to his native country, where he was born and raised.

Stellar was appointed president of the University in 1985, and has been credited with increasing the University’s reputation and its student body. He has also been criticized for his aggressive style and his tendency to make controversial decisions.

Stellar said that he plans to return to teaching at a university in his native country, and that he hopes to continue his work in the field of political science.

Admiration and Hope Evoked for Provost

By GREG MANNING

The University’s provost, Eldor Stellar, decided to resign Monday, citing the “harshness and parsimony” of the Board of Trustees. Stellar, who has been the president for 14 years, said that he feels there should be “more of a meritocracy” at the University, and that he wants to return to teaching. He said that he would like to return to his native country, where he was born and raised.

Stellar cited the Board’s decision to issue a $5 million grant to the University of Pennsylvania as a reason for his resignation. He said that he was “taken by surprise” by the decision, and that he did not know about it until Sunday. He added that he would like to return to his native country, where he was born and raised.

Stellar was appointed president of the University in 1985, and has been credited with increasing the University’s reputation and its student body. He has also been criticized for his aggressive style and his tendency to make controversial decisions.

Stellar said that he plans to return to teaching at a university in his native country, and that he hopes to continue his work in the field of political science.

Stellar said that he plans to return to teaching at a university in his native country, and that he hopes to continue his work in the field of political science.

Penn Press Loses Funding
At Chaotic Budget Meeting

By RON GERN

The Penn Press has lost its state funding for the coming academic year. The press, which has been in existence for 14 years, has been facing financial difficulties in recent years, and has been unable to secure state funding for the past two years.

At a meeting of the University’s Board of Trustees Monday night, the press was informed that it would not receive state funding for the coming academic year. The press, which has been in existence for 14 years, has been facing financial difficulties in recent years, and has been unable to secure state funding for the past two years.

The press has been a major force in the University’s intellectual life, and has published many important works. It has also been a source of controversy, and has been the subject of many debates about its role in the University’s academic community.

The press is now  ineligible to receive state funding, and must rely on private sources of income. The board has stated that it will not consider renewing its funding for the press in the future.

The press has been a major force in the University’s intellectual life, and has published many important works. It has also been a source of controversy, and has been the subject of many debates about its role in the University’s academic community.

The press is now ineligible to receive state funding, and must rely on private sources of income. The board has stated that it will not consider renewing its funding for the press in the future.
Gargoyles in Quad History

Among problems faced by Quad administrators was the "sorority" (making out) at the botanical garden, gambling, and drinking. Whims came across a story of a group of fraternity members who met on the Quad.

The group included two brothers and two friends from New York City. They had been there a few days, but did not see a large number of people in the Quad.

Because of the low number of people, they were not too worried about the problem. However, the next day, they were confounded by a witness who evidenced their behavior.

"They were only playing frisbee in the Quad," the witness said.

The group ofQuad characters Whims has discovered is one who are not afraid to make noise. Whims suggests that the Quad's history is one of those who have made the Quad a place of fun and activities.
Although the committee would have liked to sell the stock of a number of South African companies, Trescher added Monday, "but we're not in the business of helping a business as an end in itself. Therefore, we have decided the stock will be sold in a way which is consistent with the Sullivan Principles." Trescher said the decision was made in consultation with the University's Trustees Investment Committee.

Sullivan principles, you have a model, you have a standard to adhere to and all the things that corporate mutuality means. And the U.S. government is willing to accept the Sullivan Principles as it is now.

Sullivan principles, you have a model, you have a standard to adhere to and all the things that corporate mutuality means. And the U.S. government is willing to accept the Sullivan Principles as it is now.

[tuesday, Jory 25, 1978]

Feeling Over U. South Africa Ties

During the 1977-78 academic year, the University's 15 holdings was estimated at $4,000,000. The total market value of the University's 12 holdings was $3,000,000. The total market value of all University stocks was estimated at $5,000,000. The purchase of South African companies is consistent with Corporate Responsibility.

Participants in the study included: Dr. David A. Trescher, Dean of Business and Economics; Dr. John C. Sullivan, President of the University; and Dr. Richard E. Lerner, Vice-President of the University.

The Sullivan Principles are not a solution. They were meant to be a solution. As long as there are American companies that have holdings in South Africa, they still contribute to the problem. The Sullivan Principles are a model, they are a standard to adhere to. And the U.S. government is willing to accept the Sullivan Principles as it is now.

The Sullivan Principles are not a solution. They were meant to be a solution. As long as there are American companies that have holdings in South Africa, they still contribute to the problem. The Sullivan Principles are a model, they are a standard to adhere to. And the U.S. government is willing to accept the Sullivan Principles as it is now.

The Sullivan Principles are not a solution. They were meant to be a solution. As long as there are American companies that have holdings in South Africa, they still contribute to the problem. The Sullivan Principles are a model, they are a standard to adhere to. And the U.S. government is willing to accept the Sullivan Principles as it is now.

[tuesday, Jory 25, 1978]

Feeling Over U. South Africa Ties

During the 1977-78 academic year, the University's 15 holdings was estimated at $4,000,000. The total market value of the University's 12 holdings was $3,000,000. The total market value of all University stocks was estimated at $5,000,000. The purchase of South African companies is consistent with Corporate Responsibility.
Tiring Battles, Angry Constituencies

By Jon Pochos

By John Daniszewski

Stellar's resignation announcement comes at a time when the University finds itself in an extremely politicized state. Stellar's statement was the result of a long overdue closed decision-making process and came fairly early for a meeting this Friday to assume the responsibilities of the chancellor's office. Among his achievements, Stellar's best-known was his plan to develop the University and the Benjamin Franklin school. Stellar's resignation comes at a time when the University finds itself in an extremely politicized state.

Stellar's resignation comes at a time when the University finds itself in an extremely politicized state. Stellar's statement was the result of a long overdue closed decision-making process and came fairly early for a meeting this Friday to assume the responsibilities of the chancellor's office. Among his achievements, Stellar's best-known was his plan to develop the University and the Benjamin Franklin school. Stellar's resignation comes at a time when the University finds itself in an extremely politicized state.

Letters to the Editor

Peace or Self-Deception?

By Scott Bok

The Benjamin Franklin College reform has been at the heart of recent discussions about the University's future. The reform is a clear example of the University's commitment to academic freedom and excellence. The reform aims to create a new, more inclusive academic environment that values diversity and encourages critical thinking. By challenging the traditional boundaries of academic disciplines, the reform opens up new possibilities for research and teaching. The reform is a bold step towards creating a more dynamic and innovative academic community.

Peace or Self-Deception?

By Scott Bok

The Benjamin Franklin College reform has been at the heart of recent discussions about the University's future. The reform is a clear example of the University's commitment to academic freedom and excellence. The reform aims to create a new, more inclusive academic environment that values diversity and encourages critical thinking. By challenging the traditional boundaries of academic disciplines, the reform opens up new possibilities for research and teaching. The reform is a bold step towards creating a more dynamic and innovative academic community.

Not the Answer

By Scott Bok

The Benjamin Franklin College reform has been at the heart of recent discussions about the University's future. The reform is a clear example of the University's commitment to academic freedom and excellence. The reform aims to create a new, more inclusive academic environment that values diversity and encourages critical thinking. By challenging the traditional boundaries of academic disciplines, the reform opens up new possibilities for research and teaching. The reform is a bold step towards creating a more dynamic and innovative academic community.

Academicians more and more are becoming public figures and even the scholarship they profess is heavy with political implications.

The Wrong Way

The University's undergraduate programs, for a growing number of students, do not serve as a safe haven or an opportunity to take the small, seminar opportunities that they are interested in. Many students leave the University with a sense of disillusionment and a feeling of being misled. The University must act to ensure that all students have the opportunity to take advantage of the liberal arts education that is the hallmark of a Penn education.

Academicians more and more are becoming public figures and even the scholarship they profess is heavy with political implications.

Academicians more and more are becoming public figures and even the scholarship they profess is heavy with political implications.

Academicians more and more are becoming public figures and even the scholarship they profess is heavy with political implications.
275 ways to put a little class in your summer.

Many departments offer independent Study and Directed Reading Research during the summer. Immerse in 210 Legion Hall or consult the Summer Sessions Bulletin.
SPUP Receives HUD Grant

(Continued from page 1)

The principal researchers for the project will be Janet Pack and Chairman of the Department of Regional Science Stephen Gale. Gale and Pack will also work in conjunction with researchers at four other institutions including the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services, the New School for Social Research and Queens College.

The study will gather information from a sample of large cities throughout the country and focus on assessing two main issues. The study will look at the basic activities funded under the CDBG and determine which projects benefit the most and in what manner.

A review of SPUP's early last year called for a reassessment of the school citing several reasons. The review stated the school was too small to function and the money it received was too small to make a difference.

President Martin Meyerson and Provost Eliot Stellar rejected the phase-out proposal last summer. Stellar stated it would be a difficult task to meet the requirement of balancing its budget which is placed on all the University's schools.

A review of SPUP early last year called for a reassessment of the school citing several reasons. The review stated the school was too small to function and the money it received was too small to make a difference.

President Martin Meyerson and Provost Eliot Stellar rejected the phase-out proposal last summer. Stellar stated it would be a difficult task to meet the requirement of balancing its budget which is placed on all the University's schools.

A review of SPUP early last year called for a reassessment of the school citing several reasons. The review stated the school was too small to function and the money it received was too small to make a difference. President Martin Meyerson and Provost Eliot Stellar rejected the phase-out proposal last summer. Stellar stated it would be a difficult task to meet the requirement of balancing its budget which is placed on all the University's schools.
By CLYDE SMITH

It's been that kind of a rollercoaster season for the Penn women's water team (5-7). The squad began the year with an upset victory, continued mostly on freshmen to fill the vacant head problem, not physical," she said. "We could accurate predictor if he was Jean Dixon.

the last stretch, but could not make up>

lengths going into the last 500 meters. They rowed well over

race had admitted "if the winds are blowing like usual, we're eight's (3-1) undoing as they lost to a bigger and stronger

Women Outmuscled by Knights were realized Saturday when the notoriously strong flight toward the goalie in the Franklin and Marshall game two weeks ago affected the rest of the team."

Mandy Lessig limited the Quakers to three goals and two assists in the MM pasting of Cornell Saturday. Heller scored three goals and two assists in the MM pasting of Cornell Saturday. Heller

Although Penn was never

accurate predictor if he was Jean Dixon.

But as for the women, their loss serves as a notice that needs. Beth has worked hard all her first consistent outing," said game against Family, allowing only the first couple of games. The same

Though the batwomen had

have lost.

now to play a little

The women started badly and fell behind by one and a half problems we thought we had ever-

At least those problems took in the last 500 meters. They rowed well over

Though the batwomen had

have lost.

the last stretch, but could not make up>

lengths going into the last 500 meters. They rowed well over

race had admitted "if the winds are blowing like usual, we're Sudzina Strides to Marathon Win

By ROY SELBER

For Quaker track coach Jack LeFort, a marathon is a different kind of athletic endeavor than those experienced in college and track meets. It is a marathon in which the runner's mind and body must work together in a decathlon, which is the ten-event struggle.

"Every ten miles a runner might only have to give his nerve to be at one of the level of the road, but on a marathon, a runner's mind and body must work together in a decathlon," he said. "The mind and body must work together to overcome the mental and physical obstacles."

"It's a mental challenge," he added. "You have to keep your mind straight when you're running. You have to keep your mind straight when you're experiencing the pressure of running in the Olympics."

Jamesburg, New Jersey native, "a decathlete has to put everything together in a decathlon," he said. "The mind and body must work together to overcome the mental and physical obstacles."

"A decathlete has to put everything together in a decathlon," he said. "The mind and body must work together to overcome the mental and physical obstacles."

"A decathlete has to put everything together in a decathlon," he said. "The mind and body must work together to overcome the mental and physical obstacles."