State Budget

By ERIC JACOB

Unlike last year, the coming months will probably bring little change for the University, because it is undergoing a period of state audit. Although the University's American state audit program is "full of holes," it has been the focus of state funding inspections during the past few months. In addition, the University's state audit program is expected by the state to require at least ten months to complete. Although two state auditors have been on campus for the past eight months, only one auditor has been on campus for the past four months. This means that the University's audit program will not be completed until the end of April. If the state audit program is not completed, it will have to be delayed until the beginning of the next academic year, when the state audit program will be completed.

The Students Take a Back Seat

By Steven A. Marriott

The Organization of Arab Students (OAS) at the University of Pennsylvania was recently the focus of a tragic decision by the university administration. The OAS, an organization representing a significant portion of the Arab student population, requested that the university allow them to display their concerns through an exhibit in Van Pelt Library. This request was met with a refusal by the university, which led to a series of events that subsequently culminated in the OAS's decision to stage a sit-in protest at College Hall.

The OAS's request was based on a desire to express their concerns about the university's handling of the issue of Palestinian exile. The university's response was seen as a failure to address the students' legitimate grievances, leading to the sit-in protest. This incident highlights the ongoing struggle between the university and the student body for the recognition of student voices and concerns.

In light of this event, it is crucial that the university re-evaluates its policies and engages in open dialogue with the student body to address their concerns. Failure to do so could lead to further damaging incidents and a loss of credibility for the university. It is essential that both parties work together to find a mutually acceptable solution that respects the rights and perspectives of all stakeholders.
Stepping Firmly Backwards

By Gary Gensler

At the Faculty Senate meeting today the performance of the new administration will be examined. While the gains and benefits of his faculty dissatisfaction with the administration have been very deep, it seems impossible to predict the outcome of this meeting. There has been much speculation about the administration's ability to govern. Everyone wants to avoid a Kangaroo court. It appears that somehow the administration has been quietly handled with an exhibit. This compromise has several advantages over other options once mentioned: the Senate Advisory Committee, the Executive Council of Deans, the President's Board. The major advantage of this compromise is that the University can affect a transition while retaining its power. Meyerson, while deploring being a lame duck president would result in an offer. This quiet way of changing the presidency of a University is adverse to national press and public relations. A motion that the resignation of a Provost is not significant enough to give the appearance of the outside world of a University in turmoil. Meyerson may have misinterpreted an act not to jeopardize the success of the Campaign for the Eighties. Others have claimed that the provost should not be retained and family power is if it is the Trustee's responsibility to continually review the President. The Trustee's responsibility to continually review the President has a resignation following an announcement to a student and a faculty petition might require pressures. Obviously, many of the issues are important, they are largely abstract matters. Most of the major problems with the University's governance would not be resolved by this plan. In the past, University leaders have tended to ignore these issues. There is a need for transformational. Many agree that the current administration has bad problems in making decisions and in working within our colloquial form of government. Copied with that the University administration is not as strong in decision making, it has become less sensitive overall. Another point is that its autonomy and its ability to act as a more sensitive political body. Such a situation would be more sensitive acknowledged.

Letters

Allowing Terrorist Tactics

I was very disturbed when I read of the University of Michigan's plans to kick a bomb to the desert of the University. All responsible parties should agree that a threat of violence in public affairs has no place on a campus, the supposed bastion of the eighties. The President's Board had no choice but to act. The University has the right to protect its students and its faculty. Anyone who believes that the University has failed to take the necessary action is not familiar with the University's present situation. The President has the right to act in the best interests of the University.

Keeping It Sacred

I wish to call the attention of all students to the fact that the University of Michigan has been the target of various terrorist attacks. The University administration has failed to take the necessary action. I urge all students to support the University's efforts to protect its students and its faculty. I believe that the University has the right to act in the best interests of the University.

Drop Period Remains Same Over Summer

BY DON MAINS

No changes will be made in the drop period before Summer 3 period. Vice- President for Undergraduate Studies Patricia McFate proposed the Undergraduate Assembly (UA) Wednesday.

The UA requested more time to respond to a March 18 letter from McFate. The letter was a response to charges that there was no student participation in the decision to shorten the drop period to three weeks from five weeks, effective January 1979. McFate's letter stated that the drop period would draw up an alternate proposal to the change, the Council of Undergraduate Deans might reconsider their decision.

The drop period was shortened by the deans' original decision, Lerner said. “I think the deans will respect what the students have to say,” Lerner said. McFate has agreed, adding, “They’re decent, reasonable people. We think they will consider alternative proposals,” he added.

The March 28 Council decision shortened the drop period and the grade change period—the late to change a grading option—to three weeks from the five weeks in place before September 30. Vice-acting on students' complaints about the decision, Lerner said. “I think they will consider alternative proposals,” he added.

Convicted Rapist Sentenced

For June D.R.L. Assault

By GERMERLING

Joseph Morris, the man convicted of raping a University student in David Hollenback Center parking lot on the afternoon of June 1, was sentenced last Thursday to probation for two indecent assaults and an illegal entry committed at the Holtenback Center parking lot on the afternoon of June 1, 1977, and was convicted of the rape committed at Hollenback center parking lot on the afternoon of June 1, 1977.

Morris contaminated a 45-day evaluation period under psychiatric observation. The sentencing occurred Thursday after Morris underwent a 45-day evaluation period at Philadelphia State Hospital.

Morris was also convicted of indecent assault and an illegal entry committed at the Hollenback parking lot on the afternoon of June 1, 1977, and was convicted of the rape committed at Hollenback center parking lot on the afternoon of June 1, 1977.

The student's suit against the University was pending trial in United States District Court.

The University has denied the rape occurred.

You know what to wear

You have an unerring instinct about what’s appropriate for what occasion. And you can follow that your clothing choices feel right, even during the most extraordinary moments. Because you rely on tampax tampons.

They’re uniquely designed to expand in all three directions — length, breadth and width — which lessens the chance of leakage or bypass. And since they’re worn internally, you’re not concerned about bulges or chafing.

No wonder Tampax tampons are the overwhelming choice of women who know what to wear. Like you.

Olympic Development: Program for the '80's

By DICK STEWART

In track and field competition, the Olympics are what it's all about. Unfortunately, for American athletes, the road to the gold is hungry at best.

The so-called "Olympic Development" events, like those at the Penn Relays, make the task a little easier.

The key is the involvement, or lack of it, of private industry," said Woodley. "Things have to get better if we're going to see again what we've seen in the past in American track.

For the next two days at least, the past and future Olympians will get some proper descent competition. Guys like Mike Shine, Delano Merriweather, Herm Frazier, Steve Riddick, Marty Liquori, and Bill Collins will team up in that event.

The ingredients are there for a great event. "I am definitely psyched since we're going for the world record, which is held by Russian Vladimir Yashchenko at 7-9.5, and if Jacobs doesn't hang himself up on a basketball rim.

Dickinson coach Walt Marusyn. "He's ready to go. Monaghan (his high jump coach) has been working on his approach, and on getting him more parallel to the bar. "We've got to get enough events in. We need strong competition, and we can't get it.

We can't get enough events in. We need strong competition, and we can't get it. Unless we start to get it, we're not going to be able to perform like we normally do in the Olympics.

Unlike countries such as the Soviet Union and East Germany, which have state subsidized Olympic training programs, athletes in the U.S. must support themselves. Although many, like the Pioneers hold down jobs, and train and compete in their spare time and at their own expense. The financial realities of this situation are devastating to the future of American track.

"The key is the involvement, or lack of it, of private industry," said Woodley. "Things have to get better if we're going to see again what we've seen in the past in American track."

Batmen Battle for NCAA Playoffs Live

By JONATHAN LANNER

The toughest thing in baseball is trying to play the whole schedule. To do it, a manager must have a well-balanced team, a good pitching staff, and a group of players that can play the entire season. The goal is to keep the team as consistent as possible, with players who can perform well both offensively and defensively. It's a challenge to keep the players healthy throughout the season, and to stay competitive against tough opponents.

The Penn Relays are a great example of the hurdles that athletes face. The event requires a lot of endurance, with runners covering a distance of four miles in a relay race. The race is divided into four segments, each covering a distance of one mile.

One of the key players in the race is John Hughes, a member of the Penn team. Hughes is known for his strategy of running at a consistent pace, which allows him to conserve energy for the final leg of the race. His coach, Alex Schenkel, has praised Hughes for his dedication and hard work, saying that he is a valuable asset to the team.

The Penn Relays are a great opportunity for young athletes to showcase their talent and compete on a national stage. The event requires a lot of hard work and dedication, but the rewards are worth it. The opportunity to compete against the best teams in the country is a great incentive to keep working hard and pushing yourself to improve.
Women Take Relays to the Limit

SOUTHERN BELLE—Elsie Goodall of Duke coasted to victory in the women's college 3000 meters yesterday afternoon at the Penn Relays. Goodall never relinquished the lead as she lapped three runners on her way to the win.

TO THE LIMIT—Samantha Franklin Jacobs of Penn exploded to a world record break in the 100 meters yesterday. Jacobs, who owns the indoor 60-meter record, is the second最快est American woman in the event this season.

Rise to the Top

Trucbos to the Top

By DICK STEVENSON

It simply wasn't a great race for the Penn Relays this year, as the last few years have been. Long distance races last night at Franklin Field were not run with the fervor or any enthusiasm. Everyone was waiting for the events to conclude. And another big name did not even run this year. The last name mentioned was Tracey Trucks. Her absence was nearly as big as her presence last year.

One of the events that can be demulated is the Penn Relays 1800 meter run. This year, the NCAA ten-mile champion for Pennsylvania was a distance in 8.34. The second best time was 8.50. The third was 8.63. This year, the third was run by the Penn women.

The 2000 meter run also saw North Carolina's Ralph King turn in a great performance in the college 2000. He finished second in the distance in 9.37. The NCAA champion for Pennsylvania was a distance in 8.96. This year, the third was run by the Penn women.

So far, so good, but if you didn't get your fill of competition, there was more to come. The 2000 meter run also saw North Carolina's Ralph King turn in a great performance in the college 2000. This is the highlight of the women's competition. They're fast, added Panther coach Bill Stengel. "But you can't let them pass you in the middle because they're going to get up to you in the end and just push you out.

The college events were not the only event in town. Lincoln Field of New York was harder than some colleges in the 1800s and was only seconds off an American record pace. All events looked a lot better after the last week. The middle distance races were run under the lights.

The Olympic Development 1800 meter run was another college event sponsored uneventfully. Denen Keema entered the race on a heavy favorite, but was pursed_straight in the first by Canada's Francois Guenette. Guenette continued to improve, and in the end, Keema was running a close second. The middle distance races were run under the lights.

"I was told on how it went," White said. "I'm proud of the way. It's great to do it again.
