CLA Investigated 1969 Protests, Files Say

By ROBERT J. TOBE

A Central Intelligence Agency representative met May 25 with Philadelphia officials to discuss allegations that the CIA was involved in illegal activities at the University of Pennsylvania.

The meeting was called by university officials to discuss the allegations and to seek a resolution. The meeting was attended by representatives from the university, city officials, and the CIA.

During the meeting, the university asked for a full and comprehensive investigation into the allegations.

The CIA representative assured the university that an investigation would be conducted and that the results would be shared with the university.

Summer's Easy
For Fund Drive

BY ANDREW ENDRENY

Summer is winding down, but the University of Pennsylvania is far from done with its fundraising efforts.

The university has set a goal of raising $5 million by the end of the calendar year, and so far it has raised over $4 million.

The largest jump in contributions came from the alumni fund, which saw a 40% increase in donations.

The university has also received several large donations, including a $1 million gift from a anonymous donor.

The university is confident that it will meet its goal of $5 million by the end of the year.

Fin. Aid Line Grows and Grows

By ANNIEBETH VALLERAS

If you've been standing outside the Financial Aid office in Logan Hall, you probably haven't noticed that there are more students there than before.

Since July 4, the number of students coming to the office has increased significantly. According to the director of the Financial Aid office, a steady line of students has been forming outside the office.

Students, which line outside and form, bringing in and asking for help as well as each student's financial aid, changes each student for any debt not covered by grants, loans, or scholarships.

Because of University financial aid policy changes implemented this past summer, many students do not receive aid for students receiving grants, such as the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant (BEOG). Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Association (PHEAA) grants, and National Direct Student Loans (NDSL).

The result has been that many students have been told to wait to live on the Financial Aid office to receive federal and state aid, which are given to the student in the form of a grant, offsetting the student's debt.

In the past, the Financial Aid office was able to serve all students, but due to policy changes, students may have difficulty receiving aid.

Campus Bush Calls for Draft Registration

By ROBERT J. TOBE

Republican presidential candidate George Bush called for an end to the war in Lebanon, an increase in defense spending, and a renegotiation of the Strategic Arms Limitations Treaty.

"We've got to get back to the fact that the United States in the 1980s will be facing the most dangerous decade," said Bush.

Bush also advocated for a policy of containment and deterrence, stating that "we cannot allow our allies to be pushed around."

A tradition of excellence.

The Daily Pennsylvanian, the student newspaper of the University of Pennsylvania, needs you.

We need you to help us cover the University — to tell its story as thoroughly, as completely, and as skillfully as possible. We need you to help us maintain the standards that have earned a national reputation for depth and quality of coverage. We need you to help us build a staff that will continue to report on every aspect of this University, that will continue to investigate every fact and every event, that will continue to report controversial subjects, and most importantly, that will continue to chronicle the ongoing clash of ideas and philosophies that form the foundation for any institution of higher education.

The Daily Pennsylvanian needs you to preserve its tradition, a tradition true to the larger mission of the University itself — to maintain excellence, to nurture intellect, and to stimulate the debate necessary for creative thought. Every newspaper reflects its audience, and we intend to reflect ours.

If you are interested in taking up this challenge, join us! The Daily Pennsylvanian needs writers — news, sports, feature, and opinion — photographers, advertising, production and business staff. We need artists, pundits, and creative minds. It takes talent to put out this paper every day. If you can write, if you can take pictures, if you can perform magic with numbers, if you're an ad layout wizard — but most of all, if you can confront an issue and write with conviction, clarity, and force — then join The Daily Pennsylvanian.

Note: Unlike other college daily newspapers, The Daily Pennsylvanian requires no previous newspaper experience or training. We train you by putting you right to work. There is no waiting around for assignments, no initiation. Just straight, honest work. So freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and seniors — photographers, artists, accountants, and writers — join The Daily Pennsylvanian.

Television’s Social Responsibility

by Robert Dunham

The stations have been criticized numerous times, on one side, that they have ignored the increasing societal problems, and on the other, that they have overreacted to any controversial issue. There is a significant amount of evidence that shows the stations are more likely to air commercials when they feel that they will benefit financially from doing so. However, it is important to note that the stations are still required to adhere to certain guidelines and regulations in order to ensure the public interest.

Television has many public responsibilities. Foremost among them ought to be the furtherance of discussion on issues of continuing social importance.

An ad that makes parents and educators realize that our youth have been exposed to more than just the "public service announcement" on how to avoid car accidents. Television stations have the responsibility to provide programs that promote the well-being of the community.

The stations' social responsibility is a reflection of the community. It is the place to express your ideas on anything from campus events to national politics.

Contributions in the form of letters to the editor or columns are welcome. They should be typed triple spaced and set at 66 characters per line. Address all items to Sue CooperSmith, The Daily Pennsylvanian, 4015 Walnut St., Philadelphia, PA 19104.

Residence Office Pressed For New Damage Policy

By GARY RINDER

In light of increased vandalism charges for last year, the Penn Housing Service has now moved from charging in general categories to a specific charge for vandalism to the buildings. This change, according to Dan Boyle, an assistant to the standard $2 vandalism fee, has added an additional $15,000 to the standard $2 vandalism for last year, the Penn University buildings, nearly three times the previous amount charged. According to Boyle, this change was made to add a specific charge for vandalism to the buildings.

Vandalism was a major issue last year, particularly at the High Rise East building, where a hole in the wall on the 23rd floor was done about vandalism charges for this year. The charges were necessitated by a damage assessment policy. Under the policy last year, students caught damaging safety equipment were charged an amount equal to the damage assessment fee. This year, students caught damaging safety equipment will be charged the same amount as last year.

Don't Wait For A Divine Revelation

Unlike other college publications, the DP requires no experience or training program -- no scraping or bowing to get assignments! Our news reporters are the high prints of the University press. tracking down stories from College Hall to City Hall. The sports scribes follow the Quakers as they contend for Ivy League and national titles. Photographers go along, catching the most inspired moments of campus life. Our business staffers work and design the advertisements that produce the DP's millions. And the 4th floor staff puts out the finest magazine this side of the Schuylkill. So wait no more for your opportunity to join us. Make a pilgrimage to the mecca of college journalism. But hurry, because the end is near!

CIA Investigates Protests

The CIA has initiated an investigation into the University of California at Berkeley's student newspaper, the Daily Californian, for allegedly violating the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) by releasing classified government documents. The investigation was prompted by a FOIA request from the newspaper, which sought access to documents related to the University of California policy on intelligence activities. The newspaper's FOIA request was denied by the University, and the CIA has now opened an inquiry into whether the newspaper's actions were in violation of the FOIA.

The CIA's interest in the University's handling of the FOIA request is not surprising, given the agency's long history of secrecy and its efforts to limit the public's access to government information. The CIA has a reputation for withholding information on a wide range of topics, including human rights abuses, waterboarding, and the use of interrogation techniques that violate international law. The agency has also been accused of using FOIA requests as a tool to stifle criticism and limit the ability of journalists to report on sensitive issues.

The University of California, like other universities, is required to comply with FOIA requests, regardless of whether the information requested is classified or not. The case of the Daily Californian highlights the tension between government secrecy and public accountability. The CIA's investigation is likely to be contentious, as it raises questions about the agency's role in limiting the flow of information and its relationship with the University of California.

The Daily Californian's FOIA request sought access to documents related to the University's policy on intelligence activities, including information on the University's involvement in the CIA's psychological operations program, which involved the use of propaganda and misinformation to influence public opinion. The newspaper's request was denied by the University, which cited the need to protect national security.

The CIA's investigation is likely to be a source of concern for journalists and civil liberties groups, who see it as an attempt to limit the public's access to government information and to stifle criticism of the agency's activities. The case of the Daily Californian exemplifies the ongoing struggle between government secrecy and public accountability, and it highlights the importance of FOIA requests as a tool for uncovering government malfeasance and ensuring transparency.
Student Health Continues Attempts At Service, Image Improvements

The Office of Supportive Services announced that efforts are being made to improve the service and public relations over the semester through staff changes, program development, and input from the Office of Supportive Services. "We are trying to improve the service and public relations over the semester," said PY. President Carter, the Friends of Animals said.

One of the changes is the addition of two gynecologists and two additional receptionists to the office of the Impertinent Rabbit Army. "We are trying to improve the service and public relations over the semester," said PY.

In addition, Fager and Student Health Affairs Bill Hickey said that the budget could get approved. "We are trying to improve the service and public relations over the semester," said PY.

In particular, the IRA cited Carter's "Words of Animals". "We are trying to improve the service and public relations over the semester," said PY.

On Religious Holidays

Provost Vartan Gregorian wishes to remind all faculty and students that no examinations may be given, or assigned work made due on Monday October 1, which is Yom Kippur. Rosh Hashanah falls on Saturday, September 22nd, and faculty should be aware that some students may need to travel on the Friday before, although there is no formal prohibition on examination or assigned work on that Friday.

Students who are unable because of religious observances to take examinations on other days than October 1, must make arrangements with their instructors by Friday, September 21st. If instructors are not informed of the dates of all religious obligations by the 21st, the students have a right to make up examinations for any examination given on the dates of those holidays or obligations.

S. Africa Debate Goes On

Statement On U. Investments To Be Updated

BY BARRON LERNER

While the country's two opposing political parties are making major new commitments to open relations with South Africa, two recent studies commissioned by the South African government may result in revised employment laws there.

The publication in late May of the Riekert Commission Report and the Wiehahn Report — both commissioned by the government of South Africa — have resulted in the drafting of new legislation concerning the rights of blacks and other non-whites in the workplace.

The Riekert Report encouraged the abolition of statutory job reservations, the formalization of apprenticeship-training programs, and elimination of "petty" apartheid rules, such as segregated washrooms. It also called on the unions to operate exclusively with the government of South Africa.

The Wiehahn Report dealt exclusively with the troubles that the existing laws have caused. A Rockefeller Foundation Study Commission has been formed to study ways to resolve these problems and to recommend employment laws for the country. The Wiehahn Report encouraged the government to begin discussions with the South African government to "draft new legislation concerning the rights of blacks and other non-whites in the workplace."

Subway Blaze Panics Rush-Hour Commuters

By The Associated Press

Panicked commuters kicked through glass windows and jumped onto a bus platform to escape the blaze that engulfed a Philadelphia subway train, officials said.

Fire officials said about 80 persons suffered minor injuries, including smoke inhalation, cuts and broken windows. One person was treated at a hospital but officials declined to give his name.

The cable, which helped carry the current to operate the train, quit working, and flames, officials said, forced open doors and sent passengers into the tunnel. The blaze sent half the cars to the station in 10 minutes, according to the spokesman, who refused to give his name. Those nearest the station's platform filled tunnel to evacuate remaining passengers.

Lights blacked out on the crowded trains, leaving passengers in darkness. Smoke poured into the station's platform, forced open doors and turned off an automatic train rolling control system. A power cable swung loose from the undercarriage of one of the cars, according to fire officials, the loose current to operate the train-sent explosion in the tunnel, according to reports.

According to fire officials, the loose cable-which helped carry the current to operate the train-left the station, sent an electrical fire last brought at least 60 firemen to the half the cars had reached the station in 10 minutes, according to the spokesman, who refused to give his name. Those nearest the station's platform filled tunnel to evacuate remaining passengers.

Mannino Furiously Strives for Pro Stardom

By DAVID ELLEN

It’s not too common for a former Penn athletic director to find a niche in the world of professional athletics, but that’s exactly what 1971 graduate Harry Mannino has been able to do since leaving the University’s Athletic Department in 1971 to become the Toronto Argonauts’ general manager in 1983.

Having spent several years as an assistant coach, Mannino later served as a head coach for the New Jersey Nets (N.Y.) High school, where he was able to develop some of the team’s early young talent. In 1980, Mannino joined the Philadelphia Eagles as their assistant coach, a position he held until 1982 when he became the director of the Philadelphia Eagles’ Pro Scramble program.

As of 1982, Mannino was a valuable asset to the Eagles’ front office, helping to lead the team to victory in Super Bowl XVII and becoming one of the key figures in the team’s successful run to the championship game.

In 1984, Mannino was once again asked to leave the Eagles, this time to become the general manager of the Toronto Argonauts, where he has served until the present day.

Colgate Grid Scramble Starts the Sorting Out

By MEYSTER KIMEL

When the Colgate University football team took on Lafayette College in Saturday’s homecoming game, many people were wondering about the team’s future. "Why Lafayette?" a Lafayette supporter was heard to ask. "Is there something we are not doing right?"

The answer to these questions is yes. The Colgate football team has been struggling for years, but this season has brought a renewed sense of hope.

"We've been working on it for a long time," Coach Tuppeny said. "And this year, we are finally seeing the results."

The team's performance in the first two games of the season has been impressive, with a 2-0 record and a strong defense that has held opponents to just 10 points per game.

"Our defense has been the key," Coach Tuppeny said. "We have really focused on improving our tackling and have seen great results."
