PUC Affirms Controversial Film Date

By CHRISTINE WOODARD

The University's Faculty Senate yesterday approved a resolution that would make the fall semester's controversial film screening of Merck's "The Shadow Box" available for viewing. The move was a result of student and campus pressure, and is a major victory for the PUC.

The film, which was originally scheduled for October 9, was postponed until November 15. Despite the controversy, the PUC decided to proceed with the screening, and the faculty senate has now approved it.

"It's a great victory," said President George Koval. "We're pleased that the faculty has supported our decision to show the film, and we look forward to a productive discussion on the film's impact."

Green, Other City Candidates Make Their Bids in W. Phila.

by GRETCHEN ADAM

The political action in University City heated up last night, with candidates coming in to address conference-goers.

Democratic mayoral candidate William Green, speaking at a Rally in City Hall plaza, said that he believed the city's dependence on the traditional powers - the police, fire and sanitation departments - is a major pitch against Thomas Leonard, who concentrated on the issues of health care, public transportation, and taxes. He said afterward. "Everyone was very receptive." Portnoy said he hoped to see more election events like this in the future.

Meanwhile, the 27th Ward Democratic precinct committeemen gathered at the University City Housing Authority building to hear from candidates also running for the district attorney's office, and point to his record of efficient management of various programs. At the evening's end, it was announced that the forum would be repeated by spring.

In contrast, stress was placed on the previous 12 years experience in the district attorney's office, and points to his record of efficient management of various programs. At the evening's end, it was announced that the forum would be repeated by spring.

Students Endangered by Rising Radiation Hazard on Campuses

by RICH RABINOFF

Nuclear energy and radiation--topics that have become much more common in the classroom as students and professors are eager to open, thanks to the accident in Pennsylvania, might be just as numerous on campus as they are in the nuclear reactor.

At Brown University, some 30 students register every year for credit for courses in the field of chemistry. A letter from the head of the chemistry department cited studies that students would be exposed to certain chemicals that might cause cancer.

Because of high class enrollments, students are scheduled to perform certain experiments in the laboratory, but they are not permitted to be present in the laboratory itself. In order to be safe, students were given instructions to wash their hands after performing the experiments involving the compounds in question.

Researchers at the school have found that students were exposed to excessive radiation and that they are more likely to have cancer than other people.

An estimate of the court project is $4.00/hr.

The Bucs Didn’t Stop Until They Won, 4-1

By The Associated Press

Pittsburgh’s Stan Musial, called "Pops" by the rest of the Pirates, put a best of seven World Series wrapup runs, against a parade of five Baltimore relief pitchers.

Stargell unloaded against lefthander Scott McGregor, who pitched this Series. He was the 40th player in World Series history to do so in a game and the fourth batter to do so in Baltimore.

The Series loss, after they had won the final Pirates run.

Eric Omsberg

Beating Bruins His Big Break

BY HEINZ K. EISELE

Early in the month of August, a 19-year-old Eric Omsberg, then a varsity soccer player at Glen Rock High School, was selected to play on the U.S. National Under-20 Men's National Team. The team was chosen from a pool of 200 players who were selected through an open tryout held in July. Omsberg, who was then a junior at Glen Rock, was one of the lucky few who made it to the final squad. The team was invited to participate in the FIFA U-20 World Championship, which was held in Croatia in September. Omsberg's performance on the field earned him a place on the team's final roster. His hard work and dedication to the sport were recognized, and he was given the opportunity to represent his country on the international stage. Omsberg's selection to the team was a significant achievement for him and his community, and it marked the beginning of a new chapter in his athletic career. Omsberg's story is a testament to the power of hard work and perseverance, and it serves as an inspiration to aspiring athletes everywhere.
