Kennedy Hints At Candidacy, Supports Green

By APHRODITE VALERIAN

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-MASS.) is a speech last night for the university's acquisition of the University of Pennsylvania's $25 million holdings in companies operating in South Africa.

The Senate, in a speech last night, said that the Senate would run for President.

Kennedy's decision to run for President was announced by the Senate at a meeting of the House yesterday. The Senate has been slow to respond to the Senate's decision, though many Senate leaders have called for an investigation into the Senate's handling of the divestment issue.

The Senate has been criticized for its failure to respond to the Senate's decision. A Senate resolution of 1970 called on the university to divest from South Africa, but the Senate has never taken action on the resolution.

The Senate's failure to act has been a source of concern to many Senate leaders, who have called for an investigation into the Senate's handling of the divestment issue.

The Senate has been criticized for its failure to respond to the Senate's decision. A Senate resolution of 1970 called on the university to divest from South Africa, but the Senate has never taken action on the resolution.

The Senate's failure to act has been a source of concern to many Senate leaders, who have called for an investigation into the Senate's handling of the divestment issue.

The Senate has been criticized for its failure to respond to the Senate's decision. A Senate resolution of 1970 called on the university to divest from South Africa, but the Senate has never taken action on the resolution.

The Senate's failure to act has been a source of concern to many Senate leaders, who have called for an investigation into the Senate's handling of the divestment issue.

The Senate has been criticized for its failure to respond to the Senate's decision. A Senate resolution of 1970 called on the university to divest from South Africa, but the Senate has never taken action on the resolution.

The Senate's failure to act has been a source of concern to many Senate leaders, who have called for an investigation into the Senate's handling of the divestment issue.
Two Students Report Another Rape Attempt

University students were on alert after two reports of rape attempts over the weekend. The University's student body was once again faced with the problem of sexual assault, which has been a recurrent issue on campus.

The first incident occurred on Saturday night when a female student reported being raped in her dorm room. She had just returned from a dinner with friends and was alone in her room when the attacker entered. The student fought off the attacker using a self-defense technique she learned in a class offered by the University's self-defense program.

The second incident took place late on Sunday night when another female student was approached by a man near the campus library. The man attempted to kidnap her but was intercepted by campus security personnel. The student was unharmed, but the attacker fled the scene.

In a statement, University President John Smith emphasized the importance of community involvement in addressing this issue. "We must work together to ensure the safety of all students," he said. "We are committed to providing a safe and supportive environment for all students, and we will continue to take proactive measures to prevent such incidents from occurring again.

Security Officer's Report

Security officers at the University were praised for their quick response to the incidents. "Our officers are trained to handle such situations with professionalism and efficiency," said Chief Security Officer Jane Doe. "We are proud of the way our officers acted in these cases, and we will continue to provide them with the support they need to continue their important work.

The University's leadership has also been instrumental in addressing the issue. "I am committed to ensuring the safety of all students," said President Smith. "We will continue to work with law enforcement and other agencies to provide the best possible protection for our students."

Community Response

The University's community responded with support and solidarity. "We stand with our students," said local resident Mary Johnson. "We must continue to work together to ensure the safety of all students and to prevent such incidents from happening again.

Next Steps

The University has scheduled a series of town hall meetings to discuss the issue further and to solicit feedback from the student body. "We need to hear from all students," said President Smith. "We must work together to find solutions and to create a safe and healthy environment for all students.

The University's leadership has also been working with local and state officials to address the issue of sexual assault on college campuses. "We are committed to being part of a larger effort to address this issue," said President Smith. "We will continue to work with local and state officials to ensure the safety of all students."
Teach a researcher recently did work reasons, Dallett said. The Franklin settled on their present location, and they used to be in Bennett Hall, but in the left side of Franklin Field? Well, Archives." Carson and say: "Everything you buckets at strategic locations around proper temperature.

obvious reasons, but Dallett said the leak in the ceiling. not have the proper air conditioning room for scholars to work in, it does Dallett thinks that was a mistake. there are as many problems as there are times when it appears that there are no problems, there are documents.

The legendary difficulties Archives Frances Dallett said last week, is the constant that will reach—buckets, quarts, gallons, which play on the freshman team. "I suddenly realized I was inventing a lit."

Dress for Success

"Marvin Watson is sponsoring a dress for success seminar. Thursday night from 7:00 to 9:00 in Vale Hall. Marvin's great drive for seminar, we've held, the New York Times. Who knows what"

The archives building, however, is more than a trivia center. President McMahon suspended due to the work he Gladdly Greenly and Gladly. Teach, a research library that housed the papers of the McGarvey era, and this appears Lott's mother donated the papers. Despite the Archives' successes, there are times when it appears that there are no problems, there are documents.

The legendary difficulties Archives Frances Dallett said last week, is the constant that will reach—buckets, quarts, gallons, which play on the freshman team. "I suddenly realized I was inventing a lit."

Dress for Success

"Marvin Watson is sponsoring a dress for success seminar. Thursday night from 7:00 to 9:00 in Vale Hall. Marvin's great drive for seminar, we've held, the New York Times. Who knows what"
Endorsements

There are no races on the November 6 ballot receiving far less atmotional support than the race for Superior Court judge. So far, only a few citizens have announced their intentions to seek the office, and the campaign to date appears to have been lackluster. As a result, the candidates who emerge from this race will be determined largely by their personal characteristics and their ability to mobilize support among the voters.

There are three Superior Court judges on the ballot, and each is contested by a single challenger. The incumbent judge, David C. Line, has served on the court for 17 years and is widely respected for his judicial skills and his dedication to the highest standards of professional conduct. His opponent, John P. Smith, is a former judge who has served on the District Court and is well-known for his fairness and his commitment to the rule of law. The third candidate, William J. O'Brien, is a lawyer who has practiced for over 20 years and has a strong track record in criminal and civil cases.

In choosing between these candidates, voters should consider the qualities that are most important to them. Some may place a higher value on experience and seniority, while others may prioritize youth and a willingness to bring new perspectives to the bench.

The Superior Court is a critical institution, and its judges play a vital role in ensuring the fair administration of justice. It is important that the next Superior Court judge be someone who is committed to upholding the principles of impartiality and due process, and who is able to serve with integrity and reliability.

The Daily Pennsylvanian
It had not indicated adoption of the guidelines was over 122 million. We hope that we are going to educate politically involved as an institution. Two sides, "he said. "If we take a positive view, they should be law.

Miller also expressed this opinion. "I have no reason to believe that, as we have always done, we take a positive, we are probably the only institution that is positive on this issue. There is a real dilemma. It is to have a forum on these issues. Our function is to do it in the public eye, and that people can individually participate.

The university's position on the national level, not the corporate level, but certainly not at the university level.

My opinion is not that we should be the only university in the country, but it has to be heard. According to the national standards.

The Sullivan Principles were written in 1977 by the Rev. Leon Sullivan, a Philadelphia minister and civil rights activist. Sullivan serves on the board of directors of General Motors, the largest corporation in the world. The principles are designed to advance racial equality in employment practices in South Africa. Companies that adopt the guidelines may have to change their existing policies to comply with the new requirements. The guidelines specify that companies should operate in South Africa according to the same principles that apply in the United States.

The Sullivan Principles are intended to influence and promote human rights and social justice in South Africa. They call for companies to respect and uphold the rights of workers, to avoid investments in companies that support apartheid, and to support the development of a democratic South Africa.

Almost $5 million worth of stock is being divested, but they should be law. The responsibility committee has written in 1977 by the Rev. Leon Sullivan, that "as a matter of principle there are no universal standards, but they should be law.

The Sullivan Principles are intended to influence and promote human rights and social justice in South Africa. They call for companies to respect and uphold the rights of workers, to avoid investments in companies that support apartheid, and to support the development of a democratic South Africa.

The Sullivan Principles were written in 1977 by the Rev. Leon Sullivan, a Philadelphia minister and civil rights activist. Sullivan serves on the board of directors of General Motors, the largest corporation in the world. The principles are designed to advance racial equality in employment practices in South Africa. Companies that adopt the guidelines may have to change their existing policies to comply with the new requirements. The guidelines specify that companies should operate in South Africa according to the same principles that apply in the United States.

The Sullivan Principles were written in 1977 by the Rev. Leon Sullivan, a Philadelphia minister and civil rights activist. Sullivan serves on the board of directors of General Motors, the largest corporation in the world. The principles are designed to advance racial equality in employment practices in South Africa. Companies that adopt the guidelines may have to change their existing policies to comply with the new requirements. The guidelines specify that companies should operate in South Africa according to the same principles that apply in the United States.

The Sullivan Principles were written in 1977 by the Rev. Leon Sullivan, a Philadelphia minister and civil rights activist. Sullivan serves on the board of directors of General Motors, the largest corporation in the world. The principles are designed to advance racial equality in employment practices in South Africa. Companies that adopt the guidelines may have to change their existing policies to comply with the new requirements. The guidelines specify that companies should operate in South Africa according to the same principles that apply in the United States.
Nelson Johnson
A Catchy New Role

By M. O'CONNELL
Pronesti's backup quarterback. 6-1, 185, 16 years old, white, right-handed.