Williams Play May Help Annenberg
Subscriptions Down

By ROBERT B. SHORE

The world premiere of a Tennessee Williams play may help bring down subscriptions in the newly opened Annenberg Center for the Performing Arts, Development and Public Policy Chairman H. Frank Higginbotham said yesterday.

Center Director Stephen Goff said yesterday that the Center was in the final stages of getting the play, titled "Streetcar Named Desire," the property of the estate of the late author, in time for a spring opening.

The Center will also feature a new production of "A Streetcar Named Desire," which was originally performed at the St. Mary's Center. The Center also began to plan for its first annual fund-raising campaign that will boost ticket sales as an independent fundraising source.

The lag is subscription sales for what the Center calls its "Z" series is expected to have the highest sales in the low to mid 3,400 subscriptions. This year only 3,128 subscriptions were sold. Many individual tickets are also expected to result from the campaign.

"We expect sales to take off as soon as April," Goff said.

SAC Recognizes WQHS Radio; Station Is Separated from WXPN

By RANDY MALLARD

WQHS, one of the University's three student-operated radio stations, officially separated from her sister station, WXPN, Thursday at its first meeting of the year. The SAC (Student Activities Council) meeting, attended by 25 students and two faculty members, was the first for the current year. The council, composed of representatives of the three radio stations and other student bodies, voted to recognize WQHS as an independent station, and to take them "out from under" the umbrella of the other stations. The SAC then voted to approve the new station's plan for the future of WQHS. The WQHS representative, however, said that there would be no forced contact between the two stations, and that they would share the production facilities with WXPN.

staged last March when the Annenberg Center opened its doors to Le MAHA. The production was interpreted by signers. According to reports, women and men were given equal and non-discriminating roles.

"People who do not know sign language are surprised at how expressive it is," said a sign interpreter who sat with a seminar at the production. "I have never seen a group with such a range of expression for language," she said.

WQHS was granted $349 by the SAC, although it had asked for about $1,000. The SAC said the WQHS request had been "over and above their normal allocation" while they had been affiliated with WXPN.

"The advantage of having two stations is the ability to reach a larger audience," said Annenberg Center manager Mark Rosenthal. "There is also the advantage of having WXPN's resources available to us," he added.

"WQHS has been a part of the University community," said Annenberg Center director Michael Sigmund. "It is our hope that WQHS will continue to serve the University community in the future," he added.

"WQHS was granted $349 by the SAC, in addition to WQHS last night. The campus chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, the national honor society for students in journalism, was granted SAC funding. The grant, which was to be taken into account in any future SAC funding requests, was for the arrangement of the annual "Newsmaker" seminar, according to the representative.

City Controller

Despite its uncertain connection with the dismal sciences of economics and accounting, the city controller's campaign should be much closer observed than it is now. The battle is for what is probably the most important position in the entire city. Of 25 employees hired in the past two years, 22 were hired by Leonard. The controller's role is so transparent that Democratic mayoral candidate William Green, who is a former assistant district attorney; Consumer Lee Frissell, a consumer advocate; and Business Manager Richard Hofmann are all villagers. Lee Frissell, a consumer advocate, is another voter who was hired by Leonard. The campaign for the controller's position is the battle for what is probably the most important position in the entire city.

The idea that a public official would not give a full public accounting of alleged wrong-doing can not inspire confidence that that same official is qualified to hold such a position. Lee Frissell's attractiveness as a candidate, we believe that he is the best controller the city has had. Leonard owes his current position to Rizzo. If elected controller, he should be a hands-on manager, giving full accountability for U.S. negotiation with the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO). The group has as its goal the protection of its vision of national liberation movement. It is time for a new generation of leaders who are more closely watched than it is now. The battle is for what is probably the most important position in the entire city.

Physicist Professor Burstein Wins Franklin Institute Science Medal

Burstein's work involves the study of automated navigation, which is often referred to as "robotic" navigation in industry. "Dr. Burstein is an expert in robotic navigation and has made significant contributions to the field of navigation and robotics," said Dr. Robert C. Brown, dean of the College of Science and Technology. "He is a true innovator in his field and has made important contributions to the advancement of robotics research." Burstein received the award for his "outstanding contributions to the field of robotics and automated navigation." The award was presented by the Franklin Institute, a prestigious scientific institution located in Philadelphia. Burstein is also a member of the National Academy of Engineering and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He has published numerous papers and articles on robotics and automation, and his work has been cited in many scientific journals. Burstein's research has contributed to the development of new technologies for robotic navigation, which has applications in a wide range of industries, including manufacturing, transportation, and defense. Burstein has also made significant contributions to the education of students in robotics and automation, and he has mentored many young scientists in his field. His work has been recognized with numerous awards, including the prestigious Franklin Institute Medal, which he received in 1985. Burstein's contributions to the field of robotics have been widely acknowledged, and he is considered one of the leading experts in the field. His work has helped to advance the field of robotics and automation, and his contributions will continue to have a significant impact on the development of new technologies in the future.
Expansion—

The School of Social Work celebrates its 70th anniversary dinner at the University Museum. The event celebrated the school's contributions to the field of social work, particularly in the areas of policy, practice, and research. The school was founded in 1949 to address the need for social work professionals in the post-war era.

The School of Social Work was one of the first programs of its kind in the United States, and it has since become a leading institution in the field. The school offers a range of degree programs, including a doctoral program, and is well-respected for its research and teaching excellence.

The anniversary dinner was attended by faculty, staff, students, and alumni, who gathered to celebrate the school's achievements and to honor its contributions to the field of social work.

The dinner was held in the University Museum, which is located on the University of Pennsylvania's campus in Philadelphia. The museum is a world-renowned institution, renowned for its vast collection of artifacts and exhibits, and it has a strong history of collaboration with the School of Social Work.

The School of Social Work is one of the many departments and programs within the University of Pennsylvania, which is a world-class institution known for its excellence in education, research, and service.

Women Harriers Looking Ahead

By ROSE HUNTINGER

When the women's varsity cross country team runs in the 61st meet of the season at Harvard, a very strong squad will be more concerned with preventing the possibility of losing than with winning. The team is scheduled to meet the best of the Ivy League at the West Chester State meet this Saturday.

"We're not in second," conceded Rose Huntingier, "we're in first. This is looking to run the course over again. We're still in the running race, though, and if anything goes wrong we're not going to be using everything at our disposal.

The midshipmen's soccer team has no special plans for the Harvard game. "I think we're going to try and use the same things we were turning around our offense and our defense," said Huntingier.

"If the defense is effective in stopping their attack then our offense should be fine," Huntingier added. "We didn't specifically discuss the defense, but the team knows it needs to be improved, and it will be if we're going to do any good next season."
