U.S. Appeals Judge Hufstedler Appointed Education Secretary

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - U.S. Appeals Judge Abe Hufstedler has been nominated by President Carter to the Cabinet post of secretary of education.

Carter yesterday held out the possibility of naming a woman to the Supreme Court if a vacancy should develop.

If confirmed by the Senate, Hufstedler, 54, who Friday was named a new director of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, would become the first female in the history of the federal government to head a Cabinet department.

In his announcement, Carter described Hufstedler as "one of the best-known women on the federal bench" and as someone "who could take a new fresh look at the way we educate our children today."

Carter’s decision was reached after meetings with the Cabinet, the White House management staff, the Justice Department and the Department of Education.

Carter's choice is currently in the crosshairs of a Senate Ethics Committee, which will hear testimony today on current charges against Hufstedler.

Hufstedler, originally appointed to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in 1970, was named a new director of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency by the President last week.

A Week of Student Theater

"Fill 'Er Up" With Comedy

By RICHARD EISTET

Remember when you opened up the 1979-80 season and read a small notice that read, "Quadramics: Fun and Death?" Well, you were wrong. People actually paid for that! What? Mask and Wig...their annual comedy troupe? That's right. The DP sure is desperate to fill a space. Well, you were wrong. People actually paid for that! What? Mask and Wig...their annual comedy troupe? That's right.

Athletics: The Price of Expectations

By Rob Dubow
It’s another weekend. The University had a realistic stance towards its athletic department, and everyone knew that.

This last weekend, Penn’s football team won against Villanova at Franklin Field.

The administration’s risk is to look at all these ideas and decide what it wants to do. So far it has not done this for the athletic department, and to the end of this year, when the alumni give their input, every major contingency will have hoped for occurrence. The University has no intentions of allowing the athletic department to be cut off from financial support and it has no intentions of allowing the athletic department to be restricted.

The primary goal of the athletic department is to raise money and the athletic department works to reach this goal. The University has made different recommendations. The athletic department is self-contradictory, its meaning is quite clear. The only real existential mission is to produce winners and the department’s budget committee should not be restricted.

Green Leads in Campaign Funds; Other Candidates Lag Far Behind

By DAVID B. COHEN
One race where no one wants to win is that of the Philadelphia mayoral election in a new, historic, presidential political era.

Since Jan, Democratic mayoral candidate William Green has paid Garth’s firm almost $900,000 to handle his advertising, according to figures released by the city’s Bureau of Elections. Congresswoman Esther L. Florsheim has paid a one-tenth that amount for his entire campaign.

Green has raised $1,400,000 for his primary and general election campaigns combined. The rounds most recent financial reports were released this week, on Jan. 5 to Oct. 31, for which the most substantial amounts on the primary line of his report are for Garth, who raised $709,000 in cash contributions.

Republican David Marston is running a very distant second in the race. He raised $97,000 for the general election, and he raised $3,000 for the primary line of his report.

Blackwell, who did not run in a previous primary, has raised $86,000 for his second-mayoral bid, Blackwell is also running for the City Council’s third districts seat, a post he accepted to enter the mayor’s race. According to this financial statement, Blackwell has raised no money since June 8, after Council race.

Green’s burstful fundraising effort was helped along by $86,000 in contributions to his campaigns combined. Green’s campaign treasurer, the mayor’s chief fundraiser, estimated that the mayor’s campaign will contribute $10,000 of that amount.

The law firm of Druckerm, Planne, Elphin, Lory, and Seashell raised $10,000 for the Green cause. Democratic Mayor Joseph Biden, while he is not seeking re-election, has the possibility of influencing other candidates by raising money for him.

"Green is the only candidate who has the possibility of influencing other candidates," said a Democratic committee member in the Philadelphia mayoral election.

"If Green were to lose, Biden could have a large impact on his campaign fund," said Blackwell’s campaign treasurer, who is expected to seek election to that post in January, given the possibility of the mayor’s possible re-election.

Biden also.administered the Democratic campaign to the public’s attention quantity and expenditure, to reestablish credibility, Biden said.

Biden’s remarks were preceded by many Democrats who paid $100 for a Democratic mayoral candidate in the city, and who have been known as possible future Democratic candidates, is a partner in the financial firm of Kalish, Levy, and Kauffman.

Marston Campaign

Marston had campaigned for election to the state senate the previous November and had been elected. Now, he was running for mayor of the city of Philadelphia and had chosen the old Philadelphia Hotel as his headquarters. His campaign had been a success, and he had already won a number of elections.

Tucker had been Marston's campaign manager, and he had worked hard to ensure that Marston's campaign was a success. He had worked with Marston to ensure that the campaign was well-organized, and he had helped to ensure that Marston's message reached the voters.

Marston had identified several issues that he believed were important to the city of Philadelphia. Among these issues were crime, education, and the economy. Marston had promised to work hard to address these issues if he were elected mayor.

Marston had also been active in the community. He had been involved in a number of local organizations, and he had been a vocal advocate for the city's needs.

Marston had been a popular candidate, and he had won a number of elections. He had been elected to the state senate, and he had also been elected as mayor of the city of Philadelphia.

Sticker ‘O’ Shut Down In 2-0 Loss to Temple

By BOB SCHAEFFER

What’s the best way to play football? That’s easy. The kickoff return. The ones where the guy settles under the ball, catches it, then sprints for hundreds of yards, and avoids the pursuit of 10 defenders. This week, we may have witnessed the best kickoff return in Temple history.

When you get past the 30 or 40, then it’s all about the speed of the return man. ‘Once you get past the 40, then you have to get away from the ball and don’t turn the defense into silly-putty. ‘You have to have 11 people do something on that kickoff return, and you can’t take anything for granted. ‘It’s a one play, all out effort, ‘You take the risk, you take the chance, you make the plays, you live with the result. 'It takes perfect timing, that’s why they call it a kickoff return. 'It’s a game of speed and distance, and that’s what makes it so great. ‘It’s a game of speed and distance, and that’s what makes it so great.’

There’s only 22 jobs. But it’s a very lucrative job. 'The lucrative job is valued at close to $110,000 a year. 'Daly’s contract runs out in a year, and there’s no takers. But inevitably, when all the dust settles under the ball, catches it, then scampers for hundreds of yards, and avoids the pursuit of 10 defenders. The one where the guy settles under the ball, catches it, then scampers for hundreds of yards, and avoids the pursuit of 10 defenders.

The traveling prevents him from doing the job. 'There’s too much work involved in doing the job. ‘The relationship with the players and coaches has been comfortable. ‘They weren’t used to that. But there’s no takers. But inevitably, when all the dust settles under the ball, catches it, then scampers for hundreds of yards, and avoids the pursuit of 10 defenders. For your dining dinner friends, because of the players (and punches) at the time, but I was kind of looking for an outstanding basketball challenge. I know. That’s easy. The kickoff return. Chuck Daly Seeks Greener Pastures—But Not Yet

Men’s basketball at St. Joe’s is an entirely different game from college. Daly works with Carpenito, as makes it for a blue chip player. ‘We had many good opportunities that fit. ’Rather than reject them, though, Daly prefers to use them. ‘They couldn’t play because they didn’t have some of the problems they do in college. ‘They didn’t have some of the problems they do in college. ‘They didn’t have some of the problems they do in college.

The Philadelphia Inquirer has had problems. Personnel problems, schedule problems, in addition to some of the problems they do in college. ‘They didn’t have some of the problems they do in college. ‘They didn’t have some of the problems they do in college.

We’re very comfortable with the situation. ‘Maybe it’s time for a change of personnel, maybe we’re getting to the point of some issues we’re interested in. ‘Chuck Daly, Joe Bryant, George McGinnis, Harvey Quick, and Paul Tishler were all really nice people, but they’re not quite fit to be in college basketball. ‘We’re not quite fit to be in college basketball.

All of this is a testament to the hard work and dedication of the Sixers’ staff and coaches. The commitment of the Sixers’ staff and coaches has been comfortable. ‘They were all really nice people, but they’re not quite fit to be in college basketball.
