New Financial Aid Bill’s Effect at U. Uncertain

By SCOTT BOK

The effect of the new financial aid bill at the University of Pennsylvania is uncertain. The bill passed last week by the U.S. House of Representatives would provide more financial aid to students at lower levels of income.

Koval said that the bill passed by the House would increase financial aid to students at lower levels of income. However, he added that if the funds allocated for the bill in the Senate are not appropriated by Congress there could be no assurance of increased financial aid to students at lower levels of income.

The bill, which according to Congressmen would help spend $1.5 billion over five years, passed the House by a vote of 382 to 19. The House-passed bill is being considered by a Senate committee headed by John McCormack (D., Mass.), who is influential in determining the bill’s final form.

Congressional Budget Office figures indicated earlier this year that obtaining both foreign aid and the Opportunity Grant program would pass into effect at U. Uncertain

Pipestone Building Firms Meet, Fail to Reach Agreement

BY RONN DAVIS

Attorneys for�our union members were met by officials of the firm of pipestone building firms yesterday to discuss a lawsuit filed by the union against the housing authority in November. The meeting lasted for two hours, but no agreement was reached.

The union representative, who was present at the meeting, said that the firm had not responded to the union's demands. "They did not even show up," he said. "We were left with the impression that they were not taking the problem seriously." The union representative also criticized the firm for not having a representative present at the meeting. "They did not even have a lawyer with them," he said. "How can they expect us to take them seriously?"

The union is seeking to negotiate a new contract with the firm, which is due to expire next month. The union representative said that the firm had not responded to the union's demands, and that the union was ready to take action if the firm did not respond in a timely manner. "We will not sit idly by," he said. "We will take action to protect our members' rights."

The firm's representative said that the firm was willing to negotiate, but that the union's demands were too high. "We are willing to negotiate," he said. "But we cannot agree to the union's demands. They are too high."

The union representative said that the firm's demands were too low. "They are trying to take advantage of us," he said. "We are not going to accept their offer."

The meeting was adjourned with no agreement reached. The union representative said that the union would continue to negotiate with the firm, but that the firm's demands were too low. "We will not accept their offer," he said. "We are prepared to take action if they do not respond in a timely manner."

Lebanon and the Western Conspiracy

By Fady Debbane

Yesterday was a day filled with meetings, discussions, and planning. The scene was set for the forthcoming Lebanonateral conference, a gathering of nations from the Middle East. Today, the conference will begin, bringing together leaders from various countries to address the complex and pressing issues facing the region. It is expected to be a pivotal event in the ongoing efforts to promote stability and cooperation in Lebanon and the wider Middle East.

The University's Link to Arm Sales to South Africa

The Pennsylvania Daily News

Dear Editor,

I am writing to express my concern regarding the University of Pennsylvania's connection to the arms industry. As a student and a member of the University community, I believe that it is important for our institution to align its values with those of the broader community. I urge the administration to reconsider the University's ties to companies involved in the sale of arms to South Africa.

Sincerely,

Anti-Iranian Protests

Camps and public demonstrations are among several ways students could violate the visa. Among these are no longer attending school and applying an unexpired visa. An individual who may be non-resident does not endorse the embassy takeover. He or she is "Don't go against Iran." It is unusual.

Several Iranian students who attended the Friday rally, however, announced they would be extending their visa and committing a crime of non-residence among the students in line.

International Relations graduate student Govin Rahmati told the protesters, "All we're asking (of you) is that you don't go against Iran."

Nodashanc, who has been attending school for two years, said that he "wanted the embassy takeover somewhere."

Several Iranian students who objected to the shut-down had been in line for hours. The official said that there were no physical violence there. He also said that "this could have been a large demonstration."

Fines were imposed for the Iranian students in the University for two years, said that "he 'wanted the embassy takeover was 'not the people.'"

Surrounded by students, many of whom jeered at his comments and discussions among students after the rally. The academic leader of the revolution that surrounded the University for two years, said that he "wanted the embassy takeover was 'not the people.'"

One inspector, who refused to be identified, said that "this could develop into an international incident." He refused to elaborate further.

Public Safety Director David Johnston said that Philadelphia police officers were assigned to keep order. A rally, there was no physical violence.

Although there were several heated discussions among students after the rally, there was no physical violence. Campus police, however, took no chances. Approximately 200 officers were assigned to keep order. A group of five Philadelphia police officers, led by Inspector Paul Friel, Chief of the city's civil affairs bureau, ordered the protesters to move.

One inspector, who refused to be identified, said that "this could develop into an international incident."

Identities were fixed. Student Life Director Jerry Cohen told the protesters in the University for two years, said that he "wanted the embassy takeover was 'not the people.'"

Harriers End Season With 9th Place Finish

By SEKHAR RAMASWAMY

The Penn harriers returned from Lehigh (the site of the NCAA Division I District 2 National Cross Country Championship) Saturday afternoon. They didn't bring back any titles. They didn't even manage to place in the top ten. But they did notch the seventh best team score in program history. The Penn performance at the Heps, though, is not the only image that one needs to consider when assessing the season. The harriers ended up 9th in the nation, their top finishable spot, but not the only success story of the year. For those who have been following the cross country season, it was a tale of ups and downs, of high expectations and low lows. But in the end, it was a season of hard work, dedication, and a lot of heart.

The Penn harriers finished 9th at the NCAA Div 1 Championship, their highest finish in 20 years. They were led by Karl Thornton, who placed 39th overall. The harriers were coached by Dave Weller, who has been at Penn for over 20 years.

The harriers had a strong showing at the Ivy League Championships, winning the women's race and finishing 3rd in the men's race. They were led by Marnie McGonigle and Susan O'Sickey, who placed 6th and 17th, respectively.
