Democratic Presidential Candidates Prepare Early for Pa. Showdown

By APHRODITE VALLERAS

By early April, all of the major Democratic presidential candidates are clearly focused on Pennsylvania, historically a key state in the nominating process. The primary, which was held March 7, has set the stage for the candidates to organize their campaigns for the state convention.

"We think this is a real opportunity," said an organizer for John Kerry's campaign. "We have a lot of people involved in the state convention, and we're trying to build as much of an organization as possible." Kerry is one of several candidates who have begun to focus on the state convention, which is scheduled for May 13.

"I think this is a really important state," said an organizer for Al Gore's campaign. "We have a lot of support here from local activists, and we're trying to build as much of an organization as possible." Gore is one of several candidates who have begun to focus on the state convention, which is scheduled for May 13.

"We think this is a really important state," said an organizer for Bill Clinton's campaign. "We have a lot of support here from local activists, and we're trying to build as much of an organization as possible." Clinton is one of several candidates who have begun to focus on the state convention, which is scheduled for May 13.

"We think this is a really important state," said an organizer for Joe Lieberman's campaign. "We have a lot of support here from local activists, and we're trying to build as much of an organization as possible." Lieberman is one of several candidates who have begun to focus on the state convention, which is scheduled for May 13.

"We think this is a really important state," said an organizer for Howard Dean's campaign. "We have a lot of support here from local activists, and we're trying to build as much of an organization as possible." Dean is one of several candidates who have begun to focus on the state convention, which is scheduled for May 13.

"We think this is a really important state," said an organizer for Dennis Kucinich's campaign. "We have a lot of support here from local activists, and we're trying to build as much of an organization as possible." Kucinich is one of several candidates who have begun to focus on the state convention, which is scheduled for May 13.

"We think this is a really important state," said an organizer for Ralph Nader's campaign. "We have a lot of support here from local activists, and we're trying to build as much of an organization as possible." Nader is one of several candidates who have begun to focus on the state convention, which is scheduled for May 13.

"We think this is a really important state," said an organizer for Tom Harkins's campaign. "We have a lot of support here from local activists, and we're trying to build as much of an organization as possible." Harkins is one of several candidates who have begun to focus on the state convention, which is scheduled for May 13.

"We think this is a really important state," said an organizer for Gary Bauer's campaign. "We have a lot of support here from local activists, and we're trying to build as much of an organization as possible." Bauer is one of several candidates who have begun to focus on the state convention, which is scheduled for May 13.

"We think this is a really important state," said an organizer for Carol Moseley Braun's campaign. "We have a lot of support here from local activists, and we're trying to build as much of an organization as possible." Moseley Braun is one of several candidates who have begun to focus on the state convention, which is scheduled for May 13.

"We think this is a really important state," said an organizer for Joseph Biden's campaign. "We have a lot of support here from local activists, and we're trying to build as much of an organization as possible." Biden is one of several candidates who have begun to focus on the state convention, which is scheduled for May 13.

"We think this is a really important state," said an organizer for Richard Gephardt's campaign. "We have a lot of support here from local activists, and we're trying to build as much of an organization as possible." Gephardt is one of several candidates who have begun to focus on the state convention, which is scheduled for May 13.

"We think this is a really important state," said an organizer for Gary Franchini's campaign. "We have a lot of support here from local activists, and we're trying to build as much of an organization as possible." Franchini is one of several candidates who have begun to focus on the state convention, which is scheduled for May 13.

"We think this is a really important state," said an organizer for Ben Cardin's campaign. "We have a lot of support here from local activists, and we're trying to build as much of an organization as possible." Cardin is one of several candidates who have begun to focus on the state convention, which is scheduled for May 13.

Millionaires Stand Firm. (Tokyo) A millionaire's report from Japan - Iwahori Kikumon, the young millionaire leading the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo has announced that he will not release his American hostages until the "hostage" is released from the U.S.

The approximately 10 hostages spent their 10th day in captivity. The hostages are being held by the Japanese militant group, the Red Army, which is using them as leverage in its demands for the release of its members from American prisons.

The Red Army has been demanding the release of its members from American prisons for several days now. The group has threatened to release the hostages if their demands are not met.

The situation is delicate, as the Red Army is known for its violent tactics and is feared for its ability to carry out its threats.

A better understanding of what PCB is all about is essential to the prevention of further violations of the law.

PCB's function is twofold. We are not a law firm; we would never, for example, perform physical repairs. If you need to have your burner repaired, you should call a plumber. But if, for example, you have doubts about your rights or the propriety of something the lender or landlord has done, you should call us. We investigate.

The sudden wave of fervorish desire to make easier a decision to implement nuclear weapons in the event of war is in a great part the reason for so much of the Middle East's unrest. The weight of evidence offers more plausible explanations of Soviet policy and gives no indication of any indication of strain on the current right of the United States.

Gymnasts Battle For Ivy Titles

By BARNEY LYNDE

Washington, D.C., Feb. 21

Penn's women gymnasts have a promise to keep at the Ivy championship this weekend.

The team, led by seniors Sally Katz and Debra Bisco, has been practicing and training hard for the past week, and they are ready to take on the challenge.

Katz, a co-captain, has been working on her floor routine, perfecting her dismounts and improving her overall score. Her dedication and hard work have paid off, and she is confident in her performance.

Bisco, another co-captain, has been focusing on her balance beam routine, improving her skills and increasing her consistency. Her strength and precision on the beam make her a key player for the team.

The team has been pushing themselves to their limits in practice, working on their routines and perfecting their techniques. They are determined to perform their best and come out on top at the championship.

The Ivy League gymnastics championship will be held this weekend, and Penn's women gymnasts are ready to show off their skills and compete against their rivals. With Katz and Bisco leading the way, the team has the potential to achieve greatness.

Despite the challenges and pressure, the gymnasts remain focused and determined. They know that hard work and dedication will lead to success.

Sally Katz and Debra Bisco are confident in their abilities and are ready to bring their A-game to the competition. They are excited to compete against their opponents and prove that Penn's women gymnastics program is a force to be reckoned with.

The Ivy League championship is an opportunity for the gymnasts to showcase their talents and achieve their goals. They are eager to represent their team and bring home the gold.
