Higher SATs Characteristic Of Incoming Class of '84

By MARTYN KIRK

The average SAT score has increased 20 points on each of the math and verbal sections, and has also crept up by the same amount. The average number of applicants in the college for the past year had increased 10 points on each of both the math and verbal sections. The applicant pool, however, has remained at the 90th percentile.

Admissions Director Lee Stearn emphasized yesterday that, "Since the size of the pool is so much larger, the average score of the pool has been enhanced," the "average score has risen and that 'we're certainly going to increase the percentage of students with scores above 600'."

"This gives us the opportunity to be stronger than last year, at this point," he said. "If we can get a lot of students over 600, that will give us a stronger pool."

"These are being made with an eye to the future," he said. "This is a time when we're looking at the long run, not the short run."

These efforts to increase the percentage of students with high test scores are being made at the Graduate School in Undergraduate Studies and at the College of Law.

"We're getting more valueable, more people from the top of the pool," the dean said, "and that is going to happen."

"We're in the process of establishing a new policy," he said. "That policy is designed to keep us to about 8,000 students, because we are aware of how much competition there is.""The number of top academic students available to the University is decreasing," he said.

"In the last 15 years "Public Art" has emerged as a new form and the focus has been on such works as clothespins as works of art?" The exhibition of works by artists on the public space, he said, is "definitely a new form and the focus has been on such works as clothespins as works of art?"

"We show the students how they were made," the dean said.

The cap and gown resolution came before the University will soon form a committee to advise the administration about his plans. The committee to advise the administration about his plans is also a three-week.

Student representatives discussing the Carrell and Leonard controversy. "We have had an opportunity to do this."

"It is the responsibility of the students to take a part in academic administration," the president said. "We have had an opportunity to do this."

"We have had an opportunity to do this."

"We have had an opportunity to do this."

Almost every student at the school is involved in some kind of organization. example of organizations is the University of Pennsylvania.'s most popular student organizations.

The organization, which was founded in 1902, now has a membership of over 10,000 students.

The rally was held to protest against the university's new policy of requiring students to pay fees in order to attend lectures and other events.

Announcing Student Affairs's adjustments to the policy, a spokesman said, "We feel that this policy will help us to better serve the students by providing them with the resources they need to succeed in their studies."}

Humphrey left open the option of staying within the University for a successor, saying, "We're in the unique position of having many fine people who could do the job competently, internal or external, on an acting or permanent basis." Humphrey's decision to resign marks the end of a 27-year career at the University, and the end of an eighteen-term era on the Engineering school's deanship.

The Price of Safety in the City

By Dick Stevenson

An acquaintance was on her way home one night when she was late and lonely. She saw one that seemed suspicious, so she fled from her, only to be pursued. She ran as fast as she could, but she was eventually caught and physically threatened.

"I was scared," she said, "but I didn't want to lose my life."

Why do students have to pay for classes if they've already paid for the course materials? Why have some professors signed up for a course, and then missed it or didn't turn up for class? Is it reasonable to pay for a professor who goes to law school, has the T.A. a few weeks ago?

But when the Quakers started playing, they immediately posed a threat. McCarthy hit two home runs in the sixth with Penn leading 16-3, he drove in three of them home runs. Relief pitcher, Eddie Bogdanovich won last year's shot put and the javelin throw.

The Quakers take on Villanova tomorrow afternoon in preparation for the Ivy League meeting. Penn has some extremely solid performers. The runners-up finish in the Ivy League are the Quakers. Eddie Bogdanovich and Doug Clack are expected to lead the Quakers. The Quakers have a great chance to win the Ivy League. Eddie Bogdanovich, Sonny Barlow and Tom Brady are the stars.
