Solicitation in Dorms

Karpen added that the student administration's policy, saying that Carter's decision to ban solicitation for the new committee, despite its promise to the UA, is "inadequate," and that it should go further by means of an explicit statement about the matter today, and will call a meeting of the Undergraduate Assembly urgently.

The student body had been 79-year-old revolutionary leader Ayatollah Khomeini. He said "Iranian diplomatic agreements prohibiting solicitation in dorms Sunday has sparked a crisis."

With Iran, Carter broke diplomatic relations with Iran last week and broke relations with Iran in matters of political and economic matters.

Athletic Report

President Martin Meyerson and Prasad Vratn Singh, in whose administration the administration recommended a new approach to the athletic department. The recommendation was accepted, and the new approach was implemented.

The report states that athletes are an integral part of the University community and that, as such, the University must support them. It also notes that sports provide one of the best ways for the University to keep in contact with the more than 30,000 students living abroad.

The report endorses a system of coaching and support that would allow for the creation of more competitive teams. The report states that the University has a duty to keep in contact with its alumni and that, as such, it should maintain an integral part of the University community and that, as such, it should maintain the_derivative. Don't Bank on First Pennsy

By Dick Stevens

It's the nation's 36th largest bank, and the most important financial institution in the state. But that doesn't mean the elected officials are happy with the way First Pennsy is doing business.

There's a growing feeling that the bank has been too aggressive in recent years, and that it's not doing enough to serve the needs of the community.

The bank has faced criticism from several quarters, including the state's attorney general, who has launched a probe into the bank's lending practices.

Some members of Congress have also raised concerns about the bank's role in the recent economic downturn.

There's a feeling among some that the bank is too focused on profits and not enough on serving the needs of the community.

But the bank's spokespeople argue that it's doing everything it can to help the community.

They point to the bank's recent efforts to increase its lending to minority and low-income borrowers, as well as its efforts to expand its operations in underserved areas.

The bank also notes that it has been a leader in the push for financial inclusion, providing access to banking services for underserved populations.

But critics argue that the bank's efforts are not enough, and that it needs to do more to serve the needs of the community.

The bank's spokespeople say they are committed to working with the community to find solutions to the challenges facing the economy.

They say they are working to ensure that everyone has access to banking services, and that they are committed to helping people achieve financial stability.

The bank also notes that it is committed to investing in its local communities, and that it is working to ensure that everyone has access to banking services.

Candidates’ Statements For Undergraduate Assembly Election

The following statements express some of the views of the candidates running in the Spring Elections, April 9, 10. Please, read them so you can make an educated choice.

Candidates for Faculty of Arts and Sciences (FAS) Students can vote for up to 7 candidates)

Steve Schatt, FAS

I will fight to return the university back into the students’ hands—where it belongs. Vote for Council.

As a member of the Undergraduate Assembly, I have worked to address issues such as security, student services, and academic integrity.

I know the issues. I take a stand. I want your vote. So exercise your rights—VOTE for the Undergraduate Assembly and the University Council.

Because students who are not members have no input and as a result, care little about it.

Steve Schatt, FAS

In the fall of 2010, I was elected to the Undergraduate Assembly. I have been working hard to improve the university and the lives of students.

We know the issues. We take a stand. We want your vote. So exercise your rights—VOTE for the Undergraduate Assembly and the University Council.

For me, the university administration should understand that our print is key to making our university effective. We can’t have any real say in whether tuition will go up or down.

Steve Schatt, FAS

We need to fight to make sure that the university is effective. We need your support so that we can keep the Undergraduate Assembly working for you. Remember, if you don’t vote, you won’t have a voice.

Not if I can help it!

could choose not to enforce it, but in occupancy agreements. "Residence protects the students. It seems that they're trying to protect themselves."

Several other clauses in the occupancy agreements have caused concern. One clause stating that if the original cancellation fee was not paid, the student would be responsible for paying the cancellation fee. Ludwlg called the clause "vague," and Penn Consumer Board Chairman Janet Mahalras said, "I can understand the reason behind it, but how do they plan to enforce it?"

Profs Help Nab Rape Suspect
In East River Drive Car Crash

Two University professors were the eyes and ears of a story that was to be a healthy morning event that resulted in the apprehension of an alleged rapist by a team of Philadelphia police officers.

Medical School professor Helen Delluva and Veterinary School professor Adelaide Delluva were well-known voices in the medical community, and their presence at the scene was not just as bystanders but as active participants in the investigation.

When the police arrived, the rape victim identified the defendant as a man who was later identified to police as Lawrence Lewis. The victim, who was later identified as Beverly L. Lewis, was taken to Jefferson University Hospital's Rape Center, where she was treated for bruises and lacerations and later released.

Lewis was under the influence of some kind of narcotic at the time of the crash, although he was not charged with any narcotics-related crime. Lewis was booked on counts of rape and a variety of other charges, including one for being under the influence of alcohol.

GRADUATES:
Don't be hoodwinked into wearing a Hood

The workers of Cotrell and Leonard have been on strike since October 15, 1979 to protest the company's violation of Federal Law.

The National Labor Relations Board has issued a complaint charging the company with violating the federal rights of its workers to organize in order to improve their conditions of employment.

The complaint charges the following violations by Cotrell and Leonard:
1. Threatening to close the factory should the employees choose to be represented by the Union.
2. Interrogating its employees about their feelings toward a Union.
3. Refusing to reinstate 42 unfair labor practice strikers to their jobs.

You do not have to wear a cap and gown made by this company with strike breakers. When you order your cap and gown, you will be given a choice between two different types: one made by E.R. Moore (without a hood) and one made by scab labor at Cotrell and Leonard (with a hood).

At graduation, wearing a hood made by Cotrell and Leonard will symbolize disregard for the rights of workers. Don't be indentified as a supporter of a company which has violated the rights of workers under Federal Law.

WHAT YOU CAN DO

The administrators of the University of Pennsylvania have so far refused to join the nationwide boycott of Cotrell and Leonard.
1. Don't order from Cotrell and Leonard; a strong response by the students and faculty will show the administration that they should rethink their position.
2. Persuade other students and faculty members to order caps and gowns from other sources.
3. Join the demonstration against the wearing of scab-made caps and gowns.
4. Ask the administrators of the University of Pennsylvania to join in the boycott of Cotrell and Leonard.

Over 30 schools have already joined the boycott. Help us add the University of Pennsylvania to the growing list.

When I first heard that Sieg had four years ago to the day that his own club, Hens, was about to open, I could hardly contain my excitement. Sieg had been a passionate golfer since childhood, and his dedication to the game was evident in his performance on the course. As a result, he was able to attract some of the best players in the country to his club.

I figured that if I could use my connections to get a glimpse inside the club, I could write an article about the experience. After a few weeks of negotiation, Sieg agreed to let me in on a grand opening.

Sieg was excited to show off his club to the world, and he invited me to join him for the festivities. As we walked into the club, I was amazed by the size and beauty of the facility. The course was well-maintained, and the layout was designed to challenge players of all levels. Sieg introduced me to several of the club's members, who were all impressed by my enthusiasm for the game. One of them, a veteran of many years, even invited me to come to a practice session with him the next day.

The next morning, I arrived at the club early to catch some practice rounds. The atmosphere was lively, and the members seemed to be having a good time. I asked Sieg about his strategy for the future, and he replied that he planned to continue to grow the club and attract even more players. He was already looking ahead to the next season, and he was excited to see how his club would perform.

As we walked off the course at the end of the day, Sieg told me that he was already looking forward to next year's season. He was confident that his club would continue to improve, and he was excited to see what the future had in store for them. I left the club feeling inspired by Sieg's passion for golf and his commitment to his club.
