Council Panel Will Look At Graduation Speaker Ills

By VICTORIA BUTTLEHURST

The University Student government council members are forming a panel to review the current commencement speaker selection process.

According to the panel chairman Mitch Fortney, will examine problems in the current selection process and make recommendations for changes in the fall.

The present system, under which the Student Council and the commencement speakers are selected, was adopted after the spring, chairman Mitch Fortney, will examine problems in the current selection process and make recommendations for changes in the fall.

Hillel, Armenians, Others Commemorate Holocausts

By KRISTIN DIETZ

Hillel and the Armenian Students Club, along with the Penn Christian Association and the Newman Center, will sponsor "A Week of Remembrance" commemorating the victims of the Holocaust and the Armenian genocide beginning Sunday.

The commemoration will begin Sunday with a film entitled "The Final Days: Remembering the Holocaust," which will be shown in the Irvine Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. other filme will be screened, such as "The Pianist," by Steven Spielberg, who is said to be the most well-known film about the Holocaust.

"The Armenian Martyrs Day fall within the week so many times," she said. "We hope to attract a large number of people besides Jews and Armenians. People that are interested just in the topic of genocide should come."

Jone Massian, coordinator for the Armenian Program, said she hopes that people will become more aware of the genocide involving the Armenian people. "It's been studied in the same way so many times," she said. "We're really losing good students."

"They're not willing to go through the financial hassle," Ferguson said. "People that are interested such as Rev. ‘Art Attack’ Planned for Weekend; HRE Site of Cultural Invasion

BY MATT COHEN

You may have seen the big, bright-colored signs posted around campus, or maybe you've seen them offered up by students as they ran past in the guru-like garb of Arty thoughts. You may have heard the shrieks of delight or the occasional howl of protest. But you may not have known what it was all about.

That's a shame, because Art Attack, which begins tonight in the main auditorium of HRE, promises to be an experience for all the senses. It's a celebration of the arts, a chance to break away from the usual routine and explore the creative side of campus.

The program includes a variety of performances, from poetry readings to dance recitals, and everything in between. The music covers the gamut between a Brantano salon to improvisations on synthesizers, the dissonance of Mission Control, Choral harmonies, and electronic percussion.

The choreographed numbers include two free-form works, one inspired from the United Nation's Year of the Child. Also included is a poetry recital and an original film, sponsored by the humor club, which will be shown in the Student Union. The evening tends to belie that assertion.

For once, it's a pleasure to have some fun on campus. Art Attack is a welcome change from the usual routine, a chance to break away from the routine and explore the creative side of campus.

As the warm weather returns to Princeton, so, too, will the women's tennis team, which must take to the road. Today they travel to face Dartmouth, in an effort to prove their superiority in the Ivy League. As the weekend progresses, Saturday will see Ivy action travel still farther north as the Lions travel north to cooler climes in order to repeat last year's performance when Harvard was a distant memory.

Karen Nyman plays in the fifth spot; she is given up only ten games in two singles matches this season. From Tufts (6), she is the only remaining member of the Travelling Squad, senior captain Seddon's dozen Pennsylvania women's tennis teams that start several freshmen.
